As a result of spraying experiments carried on in some of the midwestern states iron sulphate has been found effective in killing wild mustard as well as dandelions and a number of other weeds. From seventy-five to a hundred pounds of the sulphate should be dissolved in fifty-two gallons of water and this solution applied with spraying outfit in the shape of fine mist. The younger and more tender the weeds sprayed, the weaker the solution which will need to be used.

Sixty per cent of the money paid out in doctors' bills by girls and women could be put in the bank if mothers would acquaint themselves and their daughters with the simplest laws having to do with the proper care of the body, including the need of fresh air and deep breathing, wholesome food and its proper mastication and digestion and the taking of sufficient sleep and rest. Dope and drugs and often surgical operations are at best but a makeshift and seldom go to the seat of the trouble, a change in the habits of life being the thing chiefly needed.

The last annual report of the president of the American Jersey Cattle club contains some interesting statistics relative to this popular dairy breed. It shows an increase in registrations during the past year of 18,070, an increase of 24 per cent over those of the year preceding, while the number of transfers recorded was 21,930, which was an increase of 20 per cent. From the time of the organization of the club, April 1, 1883, to April 30, 1910, the total number of animals registered has been 329,671. The club has plans under way for a still more thorough advertising of the merits of the breed among dairymen of the country.

The work in many a home would be immensely lightened were some plan carried out by which an abundance of water could be available under pressure. In towns this problem is easily solved by tapping the city water main. On farm or ranch it means the installation of a pumping plant and tank of good capacity, together with necessary plumbing to send the water where it is needed. The same system can be used to carry water to the barn and feed lots and to the garden patch in case water is needed for irrigation. The writer is firmly of the opinion that a water plant of the above description would be worth going into debt for, as would be true of a kitchen stove or a cream separator.

Having moved recently from a state in which the meadow lark is held in high regard as a destroyer of insect pests and as one of the earliest harbingers of spring, the writer has been interested in making comparisons with its far western cousin, which is a dweller the year through in the valley where the writer lives. While the western bird shows a greater variety of characteristic songs, none of them seems to possess that marvelous flute-like sweetness of the one song of the eastern lark, some bird authorities to the contrary notwithstanding. In appearance both representatives closely resemble each other, the male bird in both instances having the bright yellow throat with the black crescent.

That the farmer is jockeyed a good deal in the grading of the grain which he sells has been suspected for some time past, and this has reference to practically all cereals in which grades are recognized. One of the big terminal elevators in a Minnesota city, the destination of the wheat shipped from the small local elevator, took in in the course of one year 3,000,000 bushels of No. 1 wheat, 4,000,000 bushels of No. 2 and 8,000,000 bushels of No. 3. This wheat must have been subjected to some marvelous process of improvement, for when this total of 15,000,000 bushels of wheat was forwarded there were 8,000,000 bushels of grade No. 1, 4,000,000 bushels of No. 2 and 3,000,000 bushels of No. 3. This kind of skullduggery probably passes under the name of business, but in reality is wholesale robbery, and it should be viewed and treated as such.

If any of the garden flowers or berry bushes should be attacked by mildew the matter may be remedied by sprinkling the leaves with flowers of sulphur, preferably when the dew is on, so that the powder will stick.

It is surprising how the shoving of the dog tax up from $1 to $3 per annum will alter people's ideas of the intrinsic value of members of the canine tribe. Hundreds of small towns need to have this test applied.

The young asparagus bed set last fall or this spring should not be cropped this season, as all of the energy the plants can muster should be allowed to go toward the development of sturdy root systems. This will give a largely increased output of the vegetable another season.

When one finds himself under the necessity of borrowing tools or machinery fairness would seem to justify the payment of a nominal sum to the owner for the accommodation. This would but cover wear and tear and a small interest return on the money invested in such equipment.

If perchance samples of pills or other dope should be left at the back door it would be well to put the stuff in the garbage can or fire before the youngsters about the house get hold of it. Most of this peddled trash contains deadly poison, which will not only make a child sick, but kill it if in an overdose.

More than one housewife saves herself a world of hard work by having the men of the house put off their muddy boots and shoes before going into the kitchen or dining room. This takes a little time, but the reasonableness of it will be appreciated by any fair minded man who will get down on his prayer bones and scrub the floor two or three times.

Recent feeding experiments conducted by the Massachusetts experiment station at Amherst in the matter of feeding alfalfa meal and bran have demonstrated that there is no disadvantage in feeding the former unless it can be got at the same or a less price than bran. Analyses showed the bran to have a trifle larger protein content, while it was eaten by the cows more readily and resulted in manures of a considerably higher fertilizer value.

If any of our readers have been belated, as the writer has been, in the setting of fruit or shade trees, the fault may be remedied in part by a judicious watering, care being taken to see that the ground is mellowed shortly after the watering is done so as to prevent the formation of a crust about the tree, while the application of a shovelful of well rotted manure through which the rain or water artificially applied can soak is an excellent aid in enabling the tree to make up for the lost time.

A majority of the soothing sirups at present on the market and frequently used by tired mothers to quiet crying babies contain considerable quantities of morphine or cocaine, both of them deadly poisons, and many of the so called cures for several drug habits contain the very drugs a craving for which these cures are supposed to relieve the drug victim of. Farmers' bulletin No. 393, put out a short time ago by the department of agriculture at Washington, goes very thoroughly into the subject of these death dealing nostrums. There should be one in every home.

Nature seems to have provided exceptional means for reducing the babyhood—the helpless period—of the birds to a minimum, thereby decreasing the likelihood of their destruction by their several natural enemies. This safeguard lies chiefly in the enormous eating capacity of the newly hatched birds, three or four nestlings keeping both parent birds busy from daylight until dark stuffing their uplifted and gaping mouths. This large consumption of food results in a like prodigious and rapid growth and development, the young birds testing their wings in flight from the nest but a few short weeks after hatching.

Beyond treating dirt roads at the right time and keeping them well crowned so as to shed rainfall quickly there is probably no factor that will tend better to keep them in good condition than the use of broad tired wagons in place of the narrow tired ones which have been in so general use in the past. There is always a period when a road has been worked into shape, but has not been packed down hard, when a narrow tired wagon heavily loaded will undo much of the work. The same thing is true during rainy seasons, when the road, however well graded, becomes soft. Whatever the season, the broad tired wagon has a decided advantage over the narrow in keeping the roads in good condition.

The Satsuma orange, introduced into the United States from Japan twenty-five years ago and thither from China 300 years prior, gives promise of being a valuable addition to the citrus fruits commercially valuable. It is unique in that it is the only citrus species which is deciduous, casting all its leaves in the autumn, as do our common forest trees. It is both the earliest and hardiest variety of orange grown, its fruit ripening early in October. It is seedless, like the navel, and fine flavored. A further interesting fact concerning it, recently brought to light, is that it is absolutely worthless as a fruit bearer unless budded or grafted on trifoliate stock. This is a fact that the setters of new orange groves would do well to keep in mind.

Spinach and beets contain large quantities of iron, and this fact alone would seem to justify a generous consumption of them in the shape of greens by those whose blood needs toning up. Incidentally, too, when cooked with a nice piece of salt pork they make a mighty toothsome ration for a fellow whose blood doesn't need any tonic.

The burdock, one of the most common and sturdy of weeds known to every property owner, is a biennial—that is, lives two years. The young plants may be killed easily with the hoe, while those that are in their second year may be put out of business by running the root through with a spade a couple of inches below the crown.

There is no recipe for cooking soft boiled eggs that gives more uniform or more satisfactory results than putting the eggs in boiling water—an egg to a pint—setting the dish off the stove and allowing them to remain from eight to ten minutes, depending a bit upon how one wants them cooked. Eggs prepared in this way are evenly cooked and are never overdone, even if forgotten and left in the water overtime.

The man who will shoot robins or other song birds because they help themselves to a small portion of his berries or cherries seems to forget the fact that but for the birds man would die of starvation from having his garden and field crops overwhelmed with insect pests. He not only violates the laws of his state in killing the birds, but by so doing shows that he is too small and stingy to live among civilized folks.

One of the greatest boons that the good housewife can have along the line of aids in doing her work is linoleum for her kitchen and dining room floors. There is no grimed in dirt to dig out by main force and awkwardness, a mop being the only means required to keep it looking fresh and clean. Especially will this improvement be appreciated in homes where the floors are of soft wood and have become badly worn.

After testing several methods of making clover hay Professor Roberts of the Cornell (N. Y.) experiment station recommends the following procedure as most satisfactory: He cuts the crop when moderately ripe and only during those hours of the day when the dew is off. The hay cut one day is left until the following day and while hot is put in small bunches and left until the next morning, when they are turned lightly and carefully and loaded with as little shaking as possible and mowed away, being salted at the rate of three pounds per ton as unloaded.

The animal husbandry department of the Pennsylvania Agricultural college reports the case of a creamery manager who refused a graduate of the state dairy school a ten dollar a month advance in wages, hired a man at the lower figure, and on the 49,000 pounds of butter made during the ensuing months lost $860 as a result of a slump in the overrun from 19 to 13 per cent. This is a concrete illustration of the shortsighted economies practiced by many folks engaged in many enterprises. The lesson is so plain that it does not need pointing.

The artichoke, until a few years ago considered a troublesome perennial weed, hard to eradicate, is now viewed by some hog raisers as a valuable source of succulent feed, the hogs being turned into the field in the fall or the tubers dug and stored for winter use. The artichoke is handled much as are potatoes and may be planted up to the latter part of May in sections where rainfall or artificial water supply is available for their proper growth. They yield as high as 300 to 400 bushels of tubers per acre, which contain more protein and more fat than do potatoes.

While paris green has been considered a standby as an insecticide by orchardists for a number of years past, recent experience shows arsenate of lead to be superior in that it does not burn or injure fruit or foliage, is insoluble in water and adheres to the foliage better than does the paris green. There are several brands of commercial arsenate which are carefully made and reliable and which require no preparation further than working to a fine, creamy paste and mixing with water at the rate of from two to three pounds to fifty gallons of water. In twenty-five pound kegs the arsenate can be bought at about 13 cents per pound.

While the sod bound orchard may produce fruit of a superior color and make the work at harvest time a little cleaner, these are about the only advantages that can be claimed for the plan. The main disadvantages of the system are that it too often furnishes an easy excuse for turning the orchard lot into a pasture, that it consumes moisture and fertility that the trees sorely need, while it reduces the size of the fruit from a third to a half and provides a harbor for a multitude of insect pests which are thus able to propagate undisturbed. If a careful survey of the situation seems to show that there is more money in raising hay than there is in producing fruit, the trees would better be cut out and the hay or pasture idea given the right of way.

VOL. XXVII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1910 NUMBER 27

SOME FACTS AND SOME FIGURES

Reasons Why You Should Vote for Pennington County.

The frantic efforts of the opponents of Pennington county to persuade the voters therein, that this new county will not have taxable property enough to maintain a county government, dissolve into thin air in face of the following facts:

When Red Lake county was organized in 1897 out of Polk county territory, it had real and personal property subject to taxation to the amount of $1,254,900. This amount of valuation maintained the Red Lake county government liberally in those days at a county rate of only 9.47 mills on the dollar. According to the assessed valuation of property for 1909, Pennington county has a total valuation of $2,013,256 and the southern part of the county—reduced Red Lake—has $1,731,313. Pennington's property alone is nearly twice what Red Lake's was when the county was organized, and even reduced Red Lake has one and one half times as much. Pennington's valuation will, of course, be greatly increased as the settlers on the reservation make final proof.

Today, the valuation of Red Lake county is $3,744,599 and the county rate alone is 13.4 mills on the dollar. This rate is for the running expenses of the county solely. With three times the property in the county this year that there was in 1897, the county rate is half again as large as in 1897; whereas, it should be only one third the rate of the former year. Three times the amount of taxable property should raise three times the amount of taxes when the rates are equal. If the boards of county commissioners in 1897, 98 and 99 could administer the county business satisfactorily on a rate of 9.4 mills, surely, with far more property on which to raise the county taxes, either Pennington or diminished Red Lake could, by disbanding the gentelmanly crew of financial pirates who maintain their existence by preying on the public business, give the farmers an economical efficient administration at half the present rate.

The following table of the amount of taxable property in the several towns of Pennington county will be of value to those seeking information on the county division proposition. The valuation of Polk Center, Black River, River Falls, Wyandotte, Mayfield and Deer Park represent two thirds of their total valuations, as the proposed division line runs east and west two miles north of the southern boundaries of those towns. All of Hickory will be in Pennington.

The hangers-on the men in ambush, the beneficiaries of county extravagance, Red Lake county's friends for revenue only, will have their work cut out for them in explaining to the farmers of the county why it takes a tax of 13.4 mills on every dollar of $3,744,599, the assessed valuation of the county—to pay just the running expenses of the county in 1910, while the same county, with the same number of county officers in 1897 and 1898, had a tax of only 9.4 mills on only $1,254,900 to maintain its government. It is simply a case of extravagance and inefficiency run riot and gone to seed. Pennington's organization is a rebuke to this mismanagement and the shortest cut to safety and a lower county tax rate.

Lack of space forbids presenting but a limited number of reasons each week for the organization of Pennington county. Investigation reveals a condition of affairs with reference to county matters which are as startling as they are serious. The taxpayers must abide with patience this weekly budget, which is guaranteed to convince the most prejudiced, that high taxes in Red Lake county are the direct result of the loosest business management of public affairs, particularly during recent years. The same conditions have obtained in other Upper Minnesota counties in the past, but Beltrami and Itasca and others have beautiful county grounds, public buildings, courthouses, costly jails, sheriffs' residences, etc. to show for their mad methods of "high finance" but poor old Red Lake has the high tax all right—the highest average rate of taxation in the whole state—and has nothing, except a court house foundation, to exhibit for her indulgence in the gayeties of public mismanagement and waste.

When the proper time arrives, satisfactory and abundant evidence will be forthcoming to show that Pennington county will not pay one cent of the cost of the court house now in course of construction in Red Lake Falls. The claims of the "men in hiding" that the new county will have to assume its share of this burden will look like and be of the same value as a settler's shack after a Kansas cyclone has ceased playing tag with it.

Even ardent supporters of Pennington county cannot believe that the board of county commissioners of Red Lake would ever dare to let a contract for work to the highest bidder, other things being equal. This statement was made in this column last week. Next week we produce the facts.

Arpin.

Life, it is said, is like ascending a mountain. Starting in the early morning we see the glorious peak, fair in the sunrise. Then come the haze and foothills; the dark valleys, the cloud-veiled summit. Never do we again see the full front of the mountain. But if we are brave of heart we shut our eyes and follow our first and best ideal and reach the goal to find it a barren waste.

Is it possible to build an ideal city? I have long had one in mind where there was a perfect quality of men and things. Ridge after ridge we ascended the mountain; step by step we build the city. Will we find the goal a barren waste? Is it possible for people in modern times to build a city for themselves and, like the Athenians, enoble it with their own ideals? Where usefulness is the acme of good citizenship and human happiness is considered above property?

We will attempt to make Arpin such a city. Let it be our proudest boast that we are bound by no conventionalities, neither in our government nor in the shape of our houses. Let every man hew out of the wilderness of Arpin a home in which he expresses his ideals. Have we any ideals or are we mere imitators? Could we decorate a Parthenon with anything better than a sign of Wards Liniment? Have we lost the art of honest government? Are we all Grafters? Is property all there is? Could we build a Carnac without turning our temple into a peanut stand? We shall see. CLARK.

Local Team Won Game.

Thief River Falls played Crookston Sunday, winning the game by a score of 7 to 9. Crookston made four scores in the last half of the 9th, and had two more men on bases with but one man down, and the crowd went crazy. The next two men up, however, failed to make a connection safely and the game ended seven to nine.

The fielding of Thief River Falls was easily the feature of the game. They pulled down what looked like safe hits with painful regularity, both in infield and outfield. Balcord was easily the star of the game and twice captured hits after lightning runs into the outfield, nabbing the ball over his shoulder. By a sensational capture of Moore's fly in the 9th, with two men on bases, he saved the day for his team mates.

Married.

Mr. C. E. Naplin and Miss Clara Johnson were married at the Swedish Black River church on last Wednesday at 10 a. m., Rev. Sand officiating.

After the ceremony the parties and guests, about seventy-five in number, went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson, where dinner and supper were served. It was the great social event of the community.

The newly married couple will make their home on the Naplin farm in Polk Center.

Hay Crop a Poor One.

The hay crop throughout the northwest is in bad shade due to the absence of rain and the blazing hot weather of the past three weeks. Throughout the northwest, the conditions are the same and the crop is now considered a failure.

This is a serious matter as the farmers are getting on to a stock basis and the failure of the hay crop means a sacrifice of the animals this fall.

Many farmers are now plowing up their tame hay fields and rushing them into fodder corn. This is the one method that will save the feed famine and every farmer who has stock to feed this winter should be getting in right now all the fodder corn he can plant.

This section is perhaps better favored than any other portion of the state, and farmers who do not exert every effort to cut all of the hay on their lands will regret it later on. Hay is quite sure to be worth from $15 to $25 per ton before next spring.

Here July 8th.

Ever see a little wisp of a girl, all purity, innocence, beauty, madly in love with a man twice her age, cynical, wordly wise and forming an almost brutal contrast to her dainty self, and wonder how it happened? Ever puzzle about the temptations that must beset such a girl or try to guess what made the man as he is and attempt to predict their future?

Those are some of the thoughts that must come to every person in the audience at a performance of "St. Elmo." It's a play that sets one thinking and delights with its portrayal of the girl's complete triumph.

The play is a remakable fine dramatization of the thrilling novel by Agusta J. Evans. The contrast between the charming, noble minded girl and the exciting scenes through which she is compelled to pass, provide a rare theme for the playwright and one of which full advantage is taken.

"St. Elmo" comes to the Auditorium theatre Friday evening, July 8th.

A Shooting Affair.

The following taken from the Bemidji Sentinel will be of local interest, as Frank Lyons, who is one of the pioneers of Red Lake County, is well known in this city, having made his headquarters here in the early days:

Reports come from Shotley that a shooting affray took place at Tamarac one day last week. The men involved in the trouble were Mike Omel and Frank Lyons, the postmaster at that place.

Omel was stopping over night at Lyon's, and it being too warm in the house to sleep, went and laid in a hammock outside. Toward morning he was awakened by being commanded to return a certain pocketbook, at the point of a gun. The man behind the gun was Lyons, laboring under the impression that he had lost his pocketbook, and that Omel had taken it. Omel grabbed the gun hand and as the revolver was discharged the bullet struck Omel in the side, but fortunately the bullet caused only a flesh wound.

Later Lyons found his pocketbook, but Omel was not satisfied, and had Lyons arrested before Justice Kuken in Shotley.

NEW DEPOT NEXT YEAR.

President Pennington of the Soo Line Was in Thief River Falls Last Friday.

Says That Owing to Crop Conditions the New Depot Will Not Be Built This Year.

Edmund Pennington, president of the Soo Line, was in Thief River Falls last Friday evening. Mr. Pennington arrived in his special car from a trip west over the Wheatline and departed on the Winnipeg flyer for Minneapolis a few hours later.

A delegation of Thief River Falls citizens called upon Mr. Pennington and they were very cordially received. Mr. Pennington stated that present conditions were very discouraging and that the new depot would not be built in Thief River Falls this year, but that one would surely be built next year and that it would be one of the finest in the Northwest and a credit to Thief River Falls and the Soo line for years to come. The Soo line, Mr. Pennington said, had never before planned such an extensive campaign of building new lines, and that owing to crop conditions in North Dakota the prospects of the road securing much business this fall was very poor. He did not believe that if the most favorable conditions existed from now until harvest that there would be half a crop in North Dakota, and consequently there would be only a limited amount of work for the railroad, as it depended entirely upon the prosperity of the farmers. All lines that have been started will be completed, but no new lines will be started this year and it would be the policy of the road to cut down expenditures as much as possible, and for this reason the depot will not be built here this year.

Scared Into Sound Health.

Mr. B. F. Kelley, Springfield, Ill., writes: "A year ago I began to be troubled with my kidneys and bladder which grew worse until I became alarmed at my condition. I suffered also with dull heavy headaches and the action of my bladder was annoying and painful. I read of Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them a few weeks the headaches left me, the action of my bladder was again normal, and I was free of distress."—Sold by all Druggists

Catches 251-Pound Fish.

Crookston, Minn., June 27.—After a battle that lasted from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. Sunday, William Anderson, residing at the south end of Front street, landed the biggest fish ever seen in either the Red Lake or the Red river, a sturgeon weighing 251 pounds and measuring 7 feet two inches from nose to tail, and girdling 3 feet at the largest point.

The monster fish was first seen by Anderson when he was cleaning the slats at the dam of the power company and, having a pole about seven feet long with a big hook on the end of it, he obtained a good hold on the sturgeon and thought he could land it, as he was well braced on the dam. However, with one jerk the fish landed him ten feet from the dam in deep water, and he let the pole go and made for shore. However, he had injured the fish, which headed across the river and landed with its head out of water. He hurried across, but the fish floundered back in and was seen only at intervals for several hours, the water being deep.

The power company has an iron rake about six feet across which is used in cleaning away the debris that clogs the grating, and this was brought into use and at 5 the fish was caught in the rake, which is run by electric power, and was jerked close to shore, where it was stabbed.

The Cow And The Man.

Why is it that one dairy farmer puts $3 worth of feed in a cow and receives a return a profit of $20 to $25, while another puts an equal amount into another cow apparently as good, and yet fails to get his money back? Ordinarily we are quick to say that No. 2 had the wrong kind of a cow.

We admit this is in many instances so, but it does not always apply. It must be borne in mind that while there were two cows in the case, there were two men involved, and that the man behind the cow is an important factor. The Northwestern Agricultural thoroly believes in co-operation. The co-operation of the cow and man in charge is essential if we are to expect good results. Many families make life a failure simply because of lack of real co-operation; the same thing holds good in all the economic conditions of life.

Many a cow that in the hands of one man scarcely makes one hundred pounds of butter annually—not enough to pay for her keep, in the hands of another, who considers her comfort, and who properly feeds, her on milk producing foods, will easily make her produce two hundred or two hundred and fifty pounds; while her feed costs more, her earning capacity is such she pays for the feeds, and leaves a profit for her owner of $20 to $25 or more.

We are convinced that the average cow is underfed; feeding merely enough to sustain her bodily needs and and keep her from the bone yard means no profit. We can only hold her responsible for not returning a profit for the feed used over and above that which is necessary for her existance; we must therefore feed the profit.

A test of this can very easily be made. It will be found every time that comfort and an abundance of the right kind of feed will determine the cow's value.

When the farmer has fully done his part in all that goes to make the cow profitable, and she does not respond, then, and not until then, is the time to condemn her. When all the conditions are right and she doesn't show a handsome profit, it is time to believe she has missed her calling and to let her pass into the hands of the beef trust.

New Trial Ordered.

The state supreme court has reversed Judge Watts in the case of W. A. Sarsolell against the Red Lake Falls Milling company. The following is the syllabus:

Syllabus: The plaintiff, an employee of the defendant, in its grain elevator, was injured by his hand being caught between a belt and pulley while attempting, with his hands, to place the belt upon the pulley. He brought this action for damages on the ground that his injury was caused by the failure of the defendant to furnish a belt shifter. Verdict for the defendant.

First—The relation of attorney and client between a juror and the attorney of one of the parties to the action is not a ground for challenging the juror for implied bias.

Second—Section 1814, R. L. 1905, requiring the owner of every factory, mill or workshop to furnish, if practicable, belt shifters for the purpose of shifting belts, applies to owners of grain elevators.

Third—The trial court erred in refusing to instruct the jury to the effect that it was the duty of the defendant, if it was practicable, to have furnished belt shifters for the purpose of shifting belts.

Order reversed and new trial granted.

TIDINGS FROM SCANDINAVIA

Interesting News From Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

IS NOW IN THE NORTHWEST

Bishop K. H. Gezelius von Scheele of the Swedish State Church Gives Interesting Interview—King Haakon of Norway Abandons Trip to Russia. Former Danish Premier Acquitted of Embezzlement.

SWEDEN.

Bishop K. H. Gezelius von Scheele of the state church of Sweden, who is at present on an extensive tour in the Northwest, after a visit to Rock Island, Ill., where he appeared as the personal representative of the king of Sweden at the jubilee festivities of the Augustana synod, made the following interesting statement on being interviewed in Chicago recently:

"Much of the progress of Sweden during the last few years is attributable directly to the natives of Sweden who returned home after living some years in the United States. I talked much of emigration to my countrymen at Rock Island, Ill. I appreciate the many good things in store for my countrymen here, but I feel that it would be better if more of them remained in their own country. I bore a message from my king to President Taft, which I delivered on June 2. I found President Taft a charming man, though I do not know him so well as I know Colonel Roosevelt, whom I met a few weeks ago in Stockholm, Sweden."

Bishop Scheele first made the acquaintance of Roosevelt when, as the king's ambassador, he came to America in 1905. He seems to be a great admirer of Roosevelt. Said the bishop when interviewed in St. Paul, Minn., the other day:

"Five weeks ago I met Roosevelt at Stockholm and conversed with him for more than an hour. The emperor of Germany has visited my diocese in Wisby five times. The two men are very much alike in character, very, very much alike. The American mind is a great thing."

The bishop is a member of the lower house of the Swedish riksdag, despite his high position which has kept so many men from that body.

"I think the common people felt that I would look after their interests. I have always been democratic in my views."

The bishop, however, is an aristocrat by birth and habits, being a Swedish nobleman. His wife, Lady Scheele, is also a Swedish noblewoman. Lady Scheele is also very wealthy in her own right and the bishop is reported to possess a snug fortune. No bishop in Sweden has been honored by so many missions abroad as Bishop von Scheele. When the Lutheran church was to be dedicated in Jerusalem he was present, also at the unveiling of the Martin Luther statue in Leipzig. This is his third visit to America and he is now enjoying an extensive journey in the Northwest and will extend his trip as far west as Portland and Seattle. He will be the object of many receptions and will speak at many functions during his long journey. He speaks German and French fluently, but is rather handicapped when talking English.

The king and queen have both subscribed goodly sums of money for the annual races. It is a well known fact that the king takes a deep interest in horse races and the queen, too, is said to be very fond of horses. The attendance at the annual horse races in Stockholm this year will be greater than ever and the finest horses and the best horsemanship that Sweden can muster will also be on exhibition at these races.

An annex to the government's historical museum will be erected in the near future and the plans for the building are already completed by the architects. The new building will cost at least 2,000,000 crowns and will be one of the most pretentious looking state buildings when completed.

Snow fell in Stockholm on May 28. This has not happened for many years. The snow fall was light, but the ground was covered with a beautiful white sheet and Skansen presented a most beautiful picture when the sun came peeping forth in the afternoon.

Of the 365 students who were graduated from the various colleges in Stockholm and co-educational institution in Djursholm, mostly all will take up professional lines. Sixty-six students failed to pass their examinations.

The Swedish American Male Chorus, which is at the present time giving a series of concerts in Sweden, will donate the net income from their concerts to the "Oscar II Jubilee Fund," says the Svenska Dagbladet.

The Duke and Duchess of Vastergotland departed for their summer home, "Fridhem," in Ostergotland, where they will remain until the early part of September.

NORWAY.

King Haakon, who contemplated paying a visit to the Russian czar this summer, has abandoned the idea of making this trip at present. The chief reason for not making the trip at this time is the recent death of King Edward, who, as is well known, was the father of the present queen of Norway. It is possible that the two may meet some time in August anyway, for at that time, it is rumored, Emperor William and the Russian czar are planning a cruise on the west coast of Norway. In that event they may arrange a meeting with King Haakon.

Bjornson left no fortune. While his contemporary, Henrik Ibsen, died with a considerable fortune, Bjornson died poor. His wife will, however, have an income from the Gyldendalske Publishing company amounting to 10,000 crowns a year, besides the 1,600 crowns which she will receive as a stipend from the government. Besides these pensions Bjornson left nothing. It is reported on good authority that his long stay and his long illness in Paris, where he was quartered at the Wagram hotel, cost him in the neighborhood of 100,000 francs.

King Haakon's villa on "Voxenkollen" has been completed and when the royal family returns from England about a month from now it will be ready for occupancy. The villa is ideally located and affords a magnificent view over the Christiania fjord. Everything has been done to make it comfortable and it has been built especially for winter and contains all kinds of modern conveniences.

The insurgents of Nicaragua have confiscated the Norwegian ship "Mariette de Georgia" of Bergen and will fit it up for a warship. The vessel has already been armored and several guns mounted on its deck. The Norwegian minister has made a complaint to the Nicaraguan government and there may be some trouble in store for old Nicaragua if she doesn't give up the ship.

An English syndicate is planning to expend £16,000 in the purchase and re-establishment of the great silver mine known as "Fredrik IV." It is calculated that about 500 men will soon be employed in the mine. Active mining operations are to commence in September.

According to a recent dispatch from St. Petersburg, Maxim Gorky, the Russian novelist, contemplates locating permanently in Norway. He will leave the Island of Capri shortly and will most likely settle either in Christiania or Trondhjem.

The emigration figures vary but little between the first three months of the present year and last year. Last year there were 4,266 persons who emigrated to foreign lands and this year there were, during the same period, 4,040.

Mrs. Bjornstjerne Bjornson, wife of the late poet and novelist, will receive a literary stipend of 1,600 crowns a year as long as she lives. This sum was set aside for Bjornson many years ago and she will now benefit from it.

Herbert H. D. Pierce, the American minister to Norway, had his arm broken June 15 and his wife and children were slightly injured in an automobile accident.

DENMARK.

On June 17 the high state court acquitted former Premier J. C. Christensen of complicity with former Minister of Justice Alberti in the big frauds, which have received such notoriety all over the whole world. Former Minister of the Interior Berg was found guilty and fined $250. Alberti, who resigned as minister of justice in September, 1908, surrendered to the police and confessed a long career of crime. He had, he said, embezzled large sums from a savings bank of which he was president, most of which was lost in speculation in American securities. Estimates of Alberti's stealings went as high as $5,000,000. Public feeling ran high against Alberti and also against Premier Christensen and his cabinet, for the premier previously had guaranteed Alberti's honesty and integrity. As a result the king demanded the resignation of the cabinet. Christensen later obtained the portfolio of war and marine in a succeeding cabinet, but public sentiment compelled his resignation, and since that time he has practically been a political outcast. Alberti is in ill health and has never been brought to trial.

Germany's new ambassador to Denmark, Count Waldhausen, is one of the world's richest diplomats, according to the Politiken (Copenhagen). He is worth millions and, what is better still, is a very philanthropically inclined gentleman. In Buenos Ayres, where he was formerly Germany's representative, he gave away millions of dollars to schools and charitable institutions. In Copenhagen he has leased Baron Reedtz-Thott's place on "Kongens Nytorv," which is one of the city's largest and most elegant residences. Business men in Copenhagen are glad to have the German diplomat come to the city, for he is a generous spender and is not afraid to keep his money in circulation. He is popular with the emperor of Germany and it is reported that he will entertain the emperor at no distant date, when, of course, the Danish king will also be his guest.

August Liebmann, who has been connected with the Royal theater for a number of years, has signed a contract with the managers of the Dagmar theater and will appear there during the next five years. He is regarded as one of the country's strongest actors and is exceedingly popular in Copenhagen.

An unknown person has contributed 10,000 crowns to the Swedish church in Copenhagen, which is at present under course of erection there.

The companies attacked are the Armour Packing company, Morris & Co., Swift & Co., Hammond Packing company and St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision company.

Under the heading, "The Muckraking of Public Officials," Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, has a signed article in the current number of Leslie's Weekly, which is his first public defense in the conservation controversy. It is a bitter denunciation of the muckraker and the muck publisher.

Judge K. M. Landis, in the United States district court at Chicago, sustained the demurrers of the so called "beef trust" to the indictment charging a combination in restraint of trade. A new grand jury was ordered to renew the investigation of the packing companies.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Minnesota Republicans, in convention at St. Paul, endorsed Senator Moses E. Clapp for re-election, nominated a state ticket headed by Adolph O. Eberhart for governor and adopted a platform which straddles on the tariff; pledges the party, without mention of county option, to a free, fair and full discussion of all proposed legislation for the regulation of the liquor traffic and commends the administration of President Taft as "wise and conciliatory."

Representative Butler Ames of Massachusetts has announced his candidacy for the United States senate in a formal statement embodying an exceptionally bitter attack upon Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. Mr. Ames says he became a candidate after having failed to induce any one else to "take up the fight against Boss Lodge and his political machine."

The Democratic party of Ohio goes into the state campaign this fall with Judson Harmon as its candidate for governor and president. The Democratic state convention endorsed him in the strongest terms for the presidency of the United States after it had renominated him for governor by acclamation.

LABOR NEWS.

The convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen at St. Paul sent a message to President Taft protesting against the appropriation of money to prosecute labor unions under the anti-trust law and desiring an amendment which would exempt labor unions from such prosecution. The president wired a lengthy reply in which he said that such an amendment as was desired by the firemen would undoubtedly be class legislation. "So long," says the president's message, "as the present anti-trust law remains upon the statute books an attempt to modify its enforcement so as to render immune any class of citizens, rich or poor, employers or employes, is improper legislation, and, in my judgment, ought to be opposed by you."

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

VETERANS FOR WORLD PEACE

Minnesota Grand Army Almost Unanimous on Proposal.

The department of Minnesota, Grand Army of the Republic, at its annual encampment at Minneapolis, voted in favor of universal peace as advocated by Gideon S. Ives, a St. Paul attorney and Civil war veteran. Previous to a ballot being taken a few delegates opposed the plan, contending that the United States was powerful enough to care for its own affairs without the aid of other nations, but when a vote was called for the resolution was carried almost unanimously.

Mr. Ives' idea is that a delegate be appointed at the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, to be held in Atlantic City in the fall, and that the delegate meet with representatives of veterans of other wars all over the country, study the question of universal peace and ultimately prevail upon the world powers to act toward that end.

TWO OFFICERS WOUNDED

Mining Specials Shot by Roysterers Near Ely, Minn.

Two police officers of the Oliver Mining company, James Martin and John Linklater of Ely, while on duty were shot and seriously wounded.

A noisy time was in progress at the Zenith location, and the officers went from the mine to investigate. Just as they arrived at the scene of the rumpus two men and a woman came out of a house and proceeded to get into a buggy. The officers spoke to them and told them they must be quieter, but the reply they received was a string of oaths, and as they drove away one of the occupants leaned out of the buggy and fired two shots, one bullet striking Officer Linklater, who happened to have his club up before his face. The shot struck the club, splintering it in pieces and also smashing two fingers. The position of the club saved him from receiving it in the head. Officer Martin did not come off so lucky, the shot striking his leg near the thigh. The injury will disable him for a long time.

One of the party is under arrest, but the one who did the shooting is still at large. A reward of $500 is offered.

Wilson was twenty-two years old and his wife twenty-one. Jealousy is said to have been the cause of the tragedy.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd., 1910.

A. L. Hanson.

Announcement.

I hereby announce my candidacy as a candidate for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st senatorial district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all my efforts to secure the re-districting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'Neill.

It is said that County Commissioner Lindquist is opposed to the formation of Pennington county. He likes dear old Red Lake, big barns etc.

Marcus Johnson has been appointed collector of customs for Minnesota to succeed John Peterson. Mr. Johnson was formerly engaged in the milling business at Red Lake Falls, but of late has been making his home in Washington county.

The nomination of Irving A. Caswell for clerk of the supreme court was a great victory for that gentleman. From the start Mr. Caswell refused to go into any combination with any of the other candidates, desiring to win the office upon his own merits or not at all. That he secured about two-thirds of the votes of the convention upon the first ballot is something that he may well feel proud of.

Polk county is to have the warmest legislative fight in its history at the primaries in September. Representative John Saugstad has filed as a candidate for state senator and Representative John Holten and Attorney W. A. Marin have filed for the house. These three are county option men and will work together. They will be opposed by a ticket headed by Senator Andy Stephens, who desires to again return to the county.

Al Jester, of Bemidji, who was the first to enter the senatorial fight in this district last week withdrew from the race, being dissatisfied with the Republican county convention held at Bemidji which was controlled by his political opponents. This leaves A. L. Hanson, of Ada, and Albert Berg, of Spooner, the only two candidates in the field. As Mr. Berg is said to be in very poor health and unable to conduct a campaign, there is talk of bringing out another candidate from Bemidji by those who are opposed to Senator Hanson, but it is hardly probable that they will.

"THE LAW IS COMMON SENSE."

Thus William Allen White's Emporia Gazette heads a peculiarly interesting article that tells how the supreme court of Kansas used common sense in settling an embezzlement case in which a corrupt public servant sought to escape punishment for his treachery by resort to a trifling defect in the law.

The law should be common sense, but it is to be feared that as interpreted it does not always measure up to the standard of common sense. In this case, however, it did.

A Kansas statute defining embezzlement was printed with the word "estate" instead of "state." The legislature provided punishment for any "state, county or city officer" who should misappropriate the money entrusted to his case. In printing the law the letter "e" was inserted by mistake, so that the law read "estate, county or city."

A lower court gravely held that as the word "state" was not in the statute it was not a crime in Kansas for a state officer to embezzle state funds. This decision, which is worthy of Dogberry, was rendered in spite of the fact that it is perfectly clear that the legislature intended to cover offence against the state as well as those against counties and cities, and in spite of the fact that if it was upheld state officers could help themselves to all the cash in the treasury without exposing themselves to anything worse than a suit for the recovery of the stolen money.

Fortunately, the supreme court of Kansas had a broader vision than the lower court. It reversed this absurd ruling, and held that the clear intent of the law was to prohibit and punish dishonesty by state, county and city officers, and that the printing of the letter "e" before the word state was simply an inconsequential error of the printer.

Says the Emporia Gazette. "All hail the supreme court of Kansas! The court does not believe that the illiteracy of a typesetter or clerk should prevail over the manifest morality and common sense of a great people. This court actually does not offer a premium to the ignorance or dishonesty of a print-shop or a prosecuting attorney's office. In some sister states all an attorney for a defendant has to do is to get some stenographer or copyist to leave out of a statute or indictment such a word as 'the,' and the highest courts in these commonwealths will hold that the trial has been fatally defective. Not so with the court at Topeka."

It is well that the supreme court of Kansas should be thus acclaimed for its common sense; but it isn't particularly flattering to the courts as a whole that so obvious a ruling should be deemed worthy of notice at all. It ought to be a commonplace, and absurd devotion to technicality ought to be the exception that commands notice. It should no more be in order to make public acclaim over the fact that a court has used common sense in its decisions than it is to publish eulogiums every time some man deals honestly with his neighbor.—Duluth Herald.

During the winter months, December, January, February, March and April last there was more or less of a decrease in the cream receipts at the creamery compared with the corresponding month's of the previous year. It shows the effect of the unfavorable season of last year for gathering roughage for stock. But in the month of May when natural conditions again appear our cream receipts shows up with an increase of 25 per cent over the receipts of the corresponding month last year. This is gratifying as it is evidence that the country is developing along the dairy line at rapid rate.

The blending of high spiritual resolve and human failings, of passion and hate, of love, tenderness and forgiveness and quickening romance made "St. Elmo" a wonderfully popular book from the day it sprang complete from the pen of its author, Augusta Evans Wilson. A generation or two has moved upon the field of human action, but the book lives on, the delight of fiction lovers. Now it has been given to the stage in an adequate dramatization by Miss Grace Hayward. St. Elmo Murray, Edna Earl, and the others whose lives were interwoven in wonderful imagery by Mrs. Wilson, will appear on the stage in the most dramatic and inspiring portion of the tale. It is an event of more than ordinary note in the developments of the present theatrical season. The date of the local appearance is Friday evening, July 8th, with popular prices.

It is remarkable how quickly domestic animals will resent harsh treatment and yet how readily they will respond to gentle handling.

The cold storage egg chaps fell down again in the spring, failing to take into account the possibility of four weeks of May weather in March. They will probably consult weather prophets next time.

The old lady had her victims comin' and goin' when she sold them skim-milk at 6 cents a quart and butter generously re-enforced with beef suet. This wasn't even a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul.

The fellow who invented the word clodhopper was certainly on to his job and must have stubbed and hopped over a field plowed in the wrong quarter of the moon and allowed to lie a bit too long before harrowing.

The hedgehog is an entirely harmless animal and has this to commend him—that his bill of fare for a day includes three or four gophers or gray ground squirrels. This should entitle him to immunity from wanton slaughter.

Air slaked lime and common finely pulverized road dirt are said to be effective destroyers of the cabbage worm when sprinkled over them liberally. Water at a temperature of 130 to 150 degrees F. will also kill the worms and not injure the cabbages.

Horses will greatly appreciate the range of a yard or paddock during the warm summer nights, where a manger and feed box can easily be fixed for them and where they can roll and loaf to their hearts' content. The horses will appreciate the coolness and freshness of the night air.

The trouble with the dairy business in some sections of the country is that there are too many so called dairymen—keepers of cows—who are content with a scrub twenty dollar sire when they should have one costing $200. Just another case where the near nickel obscures the distant dollar.

While temperature readings run much higher in the semiarid and arid south and west than in the great humid section east of the Mississippi river, it is a fact of common note that the dryness of the atmosphere reduces the discomfort of this heat to the minimum. This accounts for the fact that, while prostrations are frequent in the eastern half of the country at 90, they are practically unheard of in the west at 110 degrees F.

While the Shorthorn is not generally recognized as a dairy breed, there are many individuals of the breed which have made a most excellent showing. One such is Rose of Glenside, a valuable animal owned by the Glenside farm of Pennsylvania. She closed a year's test early in March and during the period gave 18,075 pounds of milk, which showed by test 624 pounds of butter fat, the equivalent of 735 pounds of butter. This cow's dairy capacity was not a matter of chance, for she is descended from a long line of dairy cows, being of the old fashioned type of milking Shorthorns.

Kerosene emulsion, which is an effective remedy against sucking insects, such as plant lice, red spiders and the thrips, and which will also kill the cabbage worm, is easily made, as follows: Dissolve a half pound of hard soap in a gallon of boiling water, remove from stove and add two gallons of kerosene, then churn or beat this until the oil is thoroughly mixed through the solution. Before using this solution should be diluted to fifteen times its volume. While the solution may be applied with a fine sprinkler, much better results are had by using a small hand or power spraying outfit, as one's needs may be. The spray should be applied once a week until the pest disappears.

With peach growers of the country sustaining an annual loss of $5,000,000 from peach brown rot ($1,000,000 of this in Georgia alone), they will be interested in a bulletin lately put out by the department of agriculture on the use of the self boiled lime-sulphur wash as a simple and inexpensive remedy for the trouble. Experiments which have been made seem to indicate that this remedy is also effective in checking the peach scab, which affects the peach crop in most sections east of the Rocky mountains. Being applied as it is while the trees are in leaf, great care should be taken to see that the solution is sufficiently diluted. Peach growers a few miles from where the writer lives defoliated their trees by using a lime-sulphur spray that was stronger than it should have been.

That the federal pure food law, which went into force in June, 1906, is accomplishing the object sought is shown pretty conclusively in the large number of judgments in the shape of condemnation of misbranded food products, drugs, etc., and fines assessed against guilty parties which the government has secured. The hand of the law has fallen on makers of flour, patent medicines, oils and extracts, soothing sirups and desiccated (rotten and dried) eggs. In all cases against offenders the government has aimed to promote the public health by insisting that all products offered for sale shall be clean and wholesome and sold for just exactly what they are, the facts in brief being stated on the label or wrapper of the inclosure. The pure food law is one of the most directly beneficial laws which have been put on the federal statute books in years.

FATHER AND CHILD KILLED

Meet Death in Handling a Live Wire at Duluth.

E. M. Nelson and his six-year-old daughter were electrocuted in the front yard of their home at Lakeside, a suburb of Duluth, in the presence of the wife and mother.

The cause was a live wire which had been allowed to dangle from an adjacent telephone pole to the Nelson lawn. "Oh, see, the grass is burning up," shouted the child to her mother and then grabbed the wire, and in an instant fell over dead, her body being terribly burned.

The father, who was just returning from work, saw the child fall, and, in an effort to extricate her, met a similar fate. Mrs. Nelson in the meantime, while trying to drag the bodies away, was severely shocked and is in a critical condition.

Bankers Want Larger Appropriation for State Immigration Department.

Just before final adjournment the Minnesota State Bankers' association, in annual convention at St. Paul, unanimously adopted a set of resolutions, which though phrased in language of extreme conservatism, voiced the determination of the banking interests of Minnesota to aid and encourage the conservation of state resources and the development of the agricultural possibilities of Minnesota through increased immigration and settlement.

The resolution took the form of an instruction to the executive council to present a bill to the next legislature increasing the present appropriation of the state immigration department 100 per cent.

Eight Other Children Narrowly Escape Same Fate.

Fire destroyed the home of George Heller and family in a locality known as "Other Tamarac," twenty-six miles east of Sandstone.

Two children, a son of sixteen and a daughter of eleven years, are dead and another daughter, aged fourteen, is fatally burned.

Mrs. Heller was away from home. Mr. Heller was sleeping on the ground floor and there were eleven children sleeping on the second floor. The eight children that survived the fire had narrow escapes. Heller is a homesteader.

Perish While Wading in Lake Near Waverly.

Bertha Rodan and Margaret McHale, each fourteen years of age, were drowned in Waverly lake.

The girls, who were with a large party of young people, went wading in the lake. It is supposed they dropped over a ledge into deep water and not being able to swim went down. In spite of the presence of their friends, the girls went to the bottom before help could be given.

TWO YOUNG MEN DROWNED

Perish While Swimming in the Mississippi River.

Paul Herbst, twenty years old, and Charles Rumbolz, twenty-two years old, residents of Mount Vernon, N. D., who were at South Park, a suburb of St. Paul, to attend a camp meeting of the Church of God, were drowned in the Mississippi river near Inver Grove while bathing.

Seeks Gas Leak With Match.

John Volviste, a shoemaker, lit a match to ascertain the cause of a peculiar odor in his home at Duluth and now four members of his family are in the hospital and one of them is dying. The home and a saloon next door were wrecked by a heavy explosion. The peculiar odor which the man had detected was caused by a leak in a gas main.

Roosevelt Coming Sept. 6.

Former President Theodore Roosevelt will attend the opening of the national conservation congress in St. Paul in September and will probably remain in the city during the whole four days' session. He will address the congress on Sept. 6, which will probably be decided upon as the day for the opening.

Dog Saves Master's Life.

REPUBLICANS NAME TICKET

State Convention Held in St. Paul Auditorium.

THE TICKET.

Endorsed for United States Senator—Moses E. Clapp.

Supreme Court Judges—E. A. Jaggard, A. L. Brown, D. T. Simpson and P. E. Brown.

Governor—A. O. Eberhart.

Lieutenant Governor—S. Y. Gordon.

Secretary of State—Julius H. Schmahl.

Auditor—S. G. Iverson.

Treasurer—Walter J. Smith.

Attorney General—George T. Simpson.

Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner—Charles F. Staples.

Clerk of Supreme Court—I. A. Caswell.

The above ticket was named by the Republican state convention at St. Paul after a strenuous day's labor. Although the heat was terrific interest was keen until the last place on the ticket had been filled.

Moses E. Clapp was endorsed for United States senator by unanimous vote and Adolph O Eberhart was selected for head of the ticket by acclamation.

For lieutenant governor W. A. Nolan, David M. Neill, Cassius M. Sprague, Dr. A. B. Cole and Samuel Y. Gordon were placed in nomination and on the first ballot no candidate had much of a lead. On the second ballot the county optionists rallied to Gordon and he secured the nomination.

For secretary of state Julius Schmahl, the present incumbent, was opposed by James H. Ege of Minneapolis. Before the first ballot had been concluded Ege's name was withdrawn and Schmahl named by acclamation.

GOVERNOR EBERHART.

The contest for state auditor was very much one sided, Samuel G. Iverson securing a renomination with 816 votes to 272 for Robert J. Wells.

For state treasurer six names were presented to the convention—Walter J. Smith, Al Kaiser, Peter J. Schwarg, George E. Hanscome, John Sheehy and William Tabor. Smith won on the first ballot.

As Attorney General George T. Simpson had no opposition his nomination was made by acclamation, as was likewise that of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner Staples.

Three candidates for clerk of the supreme court were placed in nomination, George F. Dix, I. A. Caswell and O. K. Dahle. Caswell was named on the first ballot.

Judges Edwin A. Jaggard, Alvin L. Brown and David T. Simpson were named by acclamation for supreme court justices, the fourth place going to Philip E. Brown on the second ballot in a contest with Charles L. Lewis and Homer B. Dibell.

The platform adopted straddled on the tariff; pledged the party, without mention of county option, to a free, fair and full discussion of all proposed legislation for the regulation of the liquor traffic; commended the administration of President Taft as "wise and conciliatory;" declared for reapportionment, a 1-mill good roads tax; more agricultural education, conservation and further railroad legislation.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The unrelenting hand of the prospective bride's father prevented the marriage of Fong Moon, proprietor of a Chinese laundry in Mankato, and Miss Rosie Lane of Waterville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Lane. Miss Lane's father forbade the marriage and told Moon not to try to see the girl again, under threat of prosecution. Mr. Lane declares his daughter is not of age.

State Entomologist F. L. Washburn and his assistants are waging a battle in the Red River valley against grasshoppers, which are worse in these sections than they have been for years. The trouble comes from the existence of hundreds of acres of unused land, lying idle for the purpose of speculation, where grasshoppers lay their eggs in enormous numbers.

The Greysolon Farms company, capital $200,000, has incorporated to promote truck farming within the Duluth city limits. Thirteen hundred acres will be made ready for the plow and sold on the installment plan. It is not a business enterprise, but is promoted by many of the wealthier citizens of Duluth to encourage truck farming to help supply the city.

At the meeting of the Capitol Grounds commission, held in the office of the attorney general, the offer of the city of St. Paul to sell the site of the Mechanic Arts High school and the Madison schools for $75,000 was accepted. The city will remain in possession of the property until April 1, 1911.

All June records for live stock receipts were broken at South St. Paul one day last week when nearly 200 cars of stock arrived at the unloading chutes at the stock yads. A combination of circumstances, among which the hot weather figured prominently, was held responsible for the heavy receipts.

The nominations of Marcus Johnson of Atwater to be collector of customs at St. Paul was confirmed by the senate. Mr. Johnson succeeds John Peterson, who was a candidate for reappointment. Mr. Peterson has been collector at St. Paul for twelve years.

The board of directors of the Minneapolis chamber of commerce has voted for the absolute prohibition of trading in privileges or "puts and calls" in the Minneapolis market.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

George Weisser, the sixteen-year-old son of Judge F. J. Weisser of Melrose, was drowned while bathing in the mill pond at that place. With eight other boys he was wading in about four feet of water, but got too far out and suddenly struck the old channel of the river where the water is from eight to twelve feet deep. Not being able to swim he went down.

Clad only in a hospital robe and weakened by a bullet hole through the abdomen and kidneys, George Miller, an alleged box car burglar, escaped from St. Luke's hospital at Duluth. Tearing the sheets of his bed into strips, he knotted them into a long, improvised rope, with which he let himself to the ground from the second floor.

Peter Hadlaski, a prominent farmer of Opole, Benton county, died at a St. Cloud hospital as the result of injuries sustained in a runaway accident. His chest was badly crushed and his abdomen torn. He was forty-eight years of age.

Eight people narrowly escaped death and a child lost its life when a boat containing nine persons capsized in seven feet of water in Lake Adley, Otter Tail county. The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Darst was drowned.

Gust Sabrowski, thirty-three years old, edgeman, was killed in a sawmill at Cass Lake. A flytrap struck him near the heart, throwing him several feet, rupturing the aorta and causing instant death.

Jerome Bartholemew of Otter Tail village was struck by the Soo flyer near there and was instantly killed. No one saw the accident, but it is supposed he was walking along the track.

Fire at Clara City destroyed a number of business houses, causing a loss of 20,000.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Isaac Labissonniere, aged eighty-seven, builder of the first Catholic church in St. Paul, is dead. Mr. Labissonniere had lived in St. Paul seventy years, though neither St. Paul or Minnesota had a place on the map for many years after the family of the French voyageur located at St. Peters, which later became Mendota.

Mrs. Mahala Fiske Pillsbury, widow of former Governor John S. Pillsbury, is dead at Minneapolis. Mrs. Pillsbury was seventy-eight years old. For eighteen months she had been suffering from a complication of diseases and the heat of the past two weeks increased her weakness.

Joseph Hahn, aged eighty-seven, is dead at St. Paul. Mr. Hahn came to this country at the age of twenty-eight, from Trier, Germany, and reached St. Paul in 1852.

William H. Nicholls, aged eighty-two, is dead at Spring Valley. He had resided on the farm where he died for fifty four years.

Mrs. M. A. Gestrenberger, eighty-four years old, a resident of Minnesota for fifty-three years, is dead at Minneapolis.

EIGHT DOLLAR LOSS PER COW.

The Wisconsin Dairymen's association recently had a census taken of twenty-five herds of common dairy cows in a certain section of the state, and the data collected by the census taker (in some instances he might well have officiated in the capacity of cow undertaker) are illuminating to quite a degree, so much so that they will hold in any section of the country where dairying is followed. Of the twenty-five herds there was a variation in returns running all the way from $35 profit per head to a loss of $8.03 per head, not counting the value of the fertilizer or the calf, and it is likely that calves from such cows wouldn't amount to much for any purpose. One man who milked eighteen cows through the year realized the magnificent sum of 70 cents a head net for his labor; another who milked eighteen head was out of pocket 80 cents a head as a result of his dairy operations (he had developed good forearm muscles, however), while a third who milked twelve cows through the year lost $5.84 on each animal kept. The cows of the dairyman who netted $35 per head were grade Jerseys and Guernseys, while those who lost money in their operations or made but little were scrubs or grades of a beef rather than a dairy breed. In a majority of cases scrub sires of unknown or beef parentage were used, and little or no effort was made to improve the milking capacity of the herd, as the results above noted clearly indicate. But five silos were used in these twenty-five cases, and with these the results were vitiated because the silage was fed to cows of no pronounced milk capacity. The pointers to be got from a census of this kind are plain for any man who has the primal sense to comprehend simple facts—first, for success in the dairy business cows of a pronounced dairy type should be kept and pure bred sires of known ancestry used; second, a record should be kept of each animal in the herd so that the owner may know just what return she is giving; third, silos should be installed to get the most value out of the corn crop, and, lastly, as large a per cent as possible of the protein required in the ration should be furnished by home grown clover, alfalfa or other legumes. Other things should be kept in mind in the dairy business, but the following of the four suggestions given would revolutionize the dairy business.

THE BOY AND THE SLUNGSHOT.

The other morning the writer found the remains of two pretty bee martins (king birds) in the corner of his orchard and learned on inquiry that some small boys had been in the locality with slungshots the day before and had found the birds easy victims because of their loyalty to a nestful of fledgelings placed on the archway to a gate near the sidewalk. It is possible that this offense was the result of thoughtlessness and not because the boys in question were bad at heart, but the result was the same for the birds. If a highwayman had come along when one of these boys was a helpless babe in the cradle and had wantonly killed both father and mother, resulting in the starvation of the child, we would have an exact counterpart of what happened to the birds. Putting it in terms which every boy who has a spark of manliness and fairness in his makeup can understand, the boys who killed these birds did not give them a square deal. Particularly was this the case because they were killed at nesting time, when not only their own lives, but the lives of their young, were at stake. Fire away, boys, at red squirrels, English sparrows, blackbirds, bluejays and crows, but grant all useful birds freedom from attack, but especially during the nesting season.

SUMMER PRUNING.

The writer now and then receives inquiries as to what course to follow with fruit trees which put out a crop of leaves each spring, but set no fruit buds and thus give no return in way of fruit. It is quite likely that such trees are suffering from too much kindness—from too rich a soil or too much fertilizer scattered on the ground. For such trees summer pruning is recommended, and this may be done from now up to the 10th of August. This should consist in cutting back somewhat recent growth and taking out a number of limbs where the head seems too thick. The philosophy of the summer pruning seems to be that, done late in the growing season as it is, the surplus vitality furnished the fewer branches remaining, instead of being consumed in the further growth of twigs and leaves, is used in the formation of fruit buds for the succeeding season. The average tree will doubtless stand this much pruning in any event, while the owner can determine whether the method is effective in producing the desired result.

In buying a team with which one is not acquainted it is well not only to have from the owner a guarantee that they are sound, but that they will pull even and are not balky. Many a horse sound as a dollar in its legs and shoulders isn't worth a continental because of a seeming derangement of its brain cells, and this latter defect is often not apparent until the former owner has made good clearance of his bargain.

The reason for deep early cultivation of the cornfield and shallow cultivation later lies in the fact that from the time the plants reach a height of a foot and a half they rapidly develop a root system which spreads out as well as down, comprising numerous fine roots which lie near the surface. The aim of the later cultivations should be to keep the surface of the soil mellow to prevent baking and a stoppage of circulation of air and moisture.

Now and then you come across a fellow who is always dickering and swapping—sometimes horses, sometimes vehicles and now and then machinery and other stuff. We have seen premises belonging to fellows of this stripe which were literally covered with trash of one kind and another, a good per cent of it being junk picked up at nearby auction sales. We have heard of chaps who swapped wives and kids, too, and the latter were doubtless glad of the change.

The nettle, while not a noxious weed in the same sense as quack grass or the Canada thistle, is hard to kill out because it multiplies by root stalk growth as well as by seed. The best way to dispose of a small patch is to dig up carefully to a good depth, collect all the loose roots, let them dry in the sun and burn them. In the course of a couple of weeks the patch should be dug over a second time, when any roots left in the ground will have begun to grow. These should likewise be removed and burned.

Giving the old tabby cat a ration of milk once a day will reduce the necessity she will feel under of raiding the birds about the place. She will have food in order that she may nourish her hungry litter, and if she doesn't get it in one way she will in another.

One of the several advantages in living in a section where water power is abundant is the cheapness of electricity for lighting purposes. Instead of turning out the lights when going from one room to another to squeeze the meter at pay time, folks run their lights all night and their porch lights a good share of the forenoon.

Neither bison nor bunch grass horses will eat corn when it is first put before them. The writer recently ran across a man who found the latter to be the case when he bought a team which the owner said he brought from Iowa with him because he thought so much of them. One was branded on the fore shoulder and the other on the rump, and the latter did not know corn from chestnuts.

A sore neck on the horse may be aggravated by an adjustment of the lines which pull the heads of the animal too far in or out. More frequently the trouble is due to an ill fitting collar or one on which there have accumulated dirt and hair. Such dirt should be scraped off and the collar surface smoothed and softened if necessary by pounding. A washing of the sore shoulder in cold water in which a few drops of carbolic acid have been added will heal the sore spot quickly.

The other day we were puzzled to account for the tameness of a little hedge sparrow which seemed in distress. It allowed the writer to approach within a couple of feet. On investigating we found a bull snake had climbed to the bird's nest situated six feet from the ground in a slender cypress and was in the act of devouring the last of its pretty eggs. Snakes do not so often break up the nests of useful birds as do squirrels, crows, bluejays and blackbirds, but they occasionally do so when the nests are accessible.

A lot of folk fall down badly in their well meaning attempts at economy by reducing both the quantity and variety of the bill of fare beyond a point which is justifiable and reasonable. It doesn't pay to underfeed horses which have to work, nor does it pay human beings to take less food than is needed to maintain the body in a healthy condition and furnish the excess vitality consumed in labor. A lot of folks who subsist largely on potatoes, wheat bread and tea should balance their ration with bacon and eggs, beefsteak, corn bread and baked beans when they would get rid of that "tired feeling" which they suppose is due to a disordered liver or some other like cause.

According to a statement of a Wyoming stockman at the last meeting of the National Live Stock association, it requires from 20 to 160 acres in his home state to pasture a steer, a horse or five sheep, the average area required being about thirty-five acres. Changed conditions involving a reduction in range areas and in many cases the necessity of fencing bid fair to make beef production under these conditions unprofitable. This means still further increases in the cost of meat products and also that the cheapest beef of the future will come from the great corn belt, the product of a more economical use of the stalks and leaves of this cereal crop.

In the recent oleomargarine hearing before the agricultural committee of the house of representatives at Washington it developed that practically 80 per cent of the oleo as it goes to the consumer is artificially colored to look like yellow butter, yet only 3 per cent of all the oleomargarine thus sold pays the ten cent tax. The Grout law, at present in force, provides that all oleomargarine artificially colored to look like butter shall pay the ten cent tax, yet from the above figures it appears that about 77 per cent of the colored article pays no tax at all, which would seem to show that, while the present law ought not to be repealed for the sake of the beef tallow and cottonseed oil producers, it ought to be patched up to protect the dairymen and ultimate consumer.

That a federal pure seed law should be enacted to buttress the laws at present operative in some of the states has recently been emphasized by some seed investigations which have been conducted by the Indiana experiment station. In samples of alfalfa seed collected in several counties thirty different kinds of weed seeds were found. In the seeding of one acre of ground at the rate of sixteen pounds per acre it was found that only the three purest samples of seed would deposit less than 10,000 weed seeds, while the worst would put into the soil as high as 175,680 seeds per acre. It is high time that the tillers of the soil were uniting in a demand for a national pure seed law which will free them from this sort of fraud and outrage, and one of these days some farseeing legislator will insure for himself a large place in the agricultural history of the country by leading the campaign for the enactment of just such a law. Of course unprincipled seed houses will have their lobbyists at Washington when the time comes, but they will only be able to block proceedings for a little while.

A bath of kerosene will often give new vigor to the family clock when it gets on one of those tired streaks.

Many a young fruit tree is injured by having the label wire left on at planting time through hurry or oversight. These should be removed at the earliest opportunity.

The total export value of sugar from Cuba to the United States in 1909 was $74,434,861, and it is estimated that for the current year the value of the export sugar will run close to $90,000,000.

One of the latest commodity frauds on the calendar is the adulteration of oyster shell with rock salt. There are apparently some shell factories that are situated a trifle too far from the seacoast.

It takes just as much ginger out of the soil to grow a crop of weeds as it does to produce most of the useful crops. This is equally true in the case of moisture, one of the indispensables of satisfactory crop development.

Some one has suggested that an easy way to protect the birds from the attacks of the house cat is to tie a little bell on her neck. The rats and mice might take warning also, but they could be disposed of in some other way.

One who has tried it has found carbolic acid an effective means of keeping flies from a horse during hot weather. He keeps an oiled cloth in the barn and on this puts a few drops of carbolic acid. Every morning just before harnessing he rubs his horse over with this cloth, with the result that the flies keep at a distance.

Students of the good roads problem the country over assert that as a nation we lose annually the sum of $250,000,000 in hauling produce to and from market over poor highways. Here would seem to be a line along which the conservation theory might be worked to good advantage—conservation of horse power, wagon and harness, besides a whole lot of time and a good deal of patience.

The hay cap made of squares of thirty-six to forty inch A1 sheeting and weighted at the corners is coming into quite general use in haymaking sections which are subject to rains during the cutting season. From seventy-five to a hundred caps are usually required to cover an acre of hay in cocks. Carefully dried out and put away, the covers will last for many seasons. Whether they pay in any particular case can easily be determined by figuring the probable deterioration in the hay crop through lack of protection covering a series of years.

There is no more ruthless enemy of young bird life than the little red squirrel which frequents country wood lots and hedges and trees in many cities over the country. It is this little fiend's delight to come upon a nest of young birds just before they are in shape to fly and bite them through the back of the head, sucking out their brains and drinking their blood. We did not know this until we saw fledgelings treated in exactly this way. The upshot of this situation is that one must choose between the birds and the squirrel. If he doesn't exterminate the squirrels the squirrels will exterminate the birds.

There is no one of the bird enemies of the cotton boll weevil that is given a higher rating in the destruction of this insect than the purple martin, which spends the winter in the southern and the summer in the northern states. More than this, it continues its work of insect destruction in the localities where it builds its nest and rears its young. For these reasons one is a real benefactor if he does what he can to provide secure nesting places for these interesting birds—helps himself and the cotton planter of the south. If along with the protection given the martin a like protection were accorded the robin during its winter sojourn in southern states there would be very real reciprocity of favors.

The folly of buying high priced land "unsight and unseen" as one swapped jackknives in boyhood is nicely illustrated in the case of a couple of men who last winter invested in some Yakima valley fruit land after inspecting pictures of the tract when there was snow on the ground. This was in the winter. When they moved west in the spring to develop their ranches they found, much to their surprise, that the deeds they had paid a long price for gave them ownership to parcels of land composed of solid rock at the surface. It is a matter of satisfaction to know that the agents who thus aimed to defraud them were arrested, one already doing time in the penitentiary, while the other bids fair to occupy an adjoining cell.

There is no need of any farmer paying out any of his hard earned coin to secure the patent right to make concrete fenceposts or of his buying the right to sell such patent for a given area, for he may find out all he needs to know as to the making of concrete posts by writing to his congressman or to the department of agriculture at Washington for farmers' bulletin No. 403, which takes up the subject in detail, including the selection of materials, choice of molds and the way to make them, re-enforcing, setting, fastening of wires, etc. The cement post will in most sections cost more than the best grade of wooden posts, but they improve rather than deteriorate with age, being immune to destruction by weather, insects or fire.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL. XXVII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1910 NUMBER 28

MORE ABOUT PENNINGTON CO.

Good Reasons for Division of the County.

Road and Bridge Fund.

The distribution of the funds raised by taxation of all the property in the county, for the construction of roads and bridges therein, is the strongest and most compelling reason why the north half of the county should be separated from the south and organized as Pennington county. Unfortunately, the southern part is gridironed with many rivers, creeks, draws and coulees, across which bridges and culverts must be constructed. Large sums of money have been appropriated and expended ever since Red Lake county was organized to accomplish this. As long as these streams exist more bridges must be built, old ones renewed and larger and more expensive ones put in the place of them. One bridge now will later be supplemented by others. Farmers will not forever continue to travel many miles to reach a crossing but will demand more bridges nearer home and close to their routes of travel. This is just, too, and, regardless of the unfairness or fairness of any board of county commissioners, the south half will ask for and expect to receive the bulk of the money raised in the whole county for their bridges. This demand will also increase in the future and will be greater than it has been in the past.

On the other hand, the northern half of the county has but one river, the Thief, across which bridges must be built, and as but five miles of this stream is in the county, little or no expenditure for this purpose need be made by Pennington county. At present there is one bridge spanning this river and that was built by the city of Thief River Falls. The Red Lake river, above this city, is a navigable stream and under the control of the war department at Washington and cannot be bridged except with the consent of the federal authorities and, in that event, will receive their financial assistance.

The proposition for the taxpayers, especially the farmers, to settle is simply this: Shall those living in the proposed county of Pennington continue for all time paying taxes to build bridges in the southern half of Red Lake county, or shall they, by organizing Pennington county, cut off this expensive section and thus lower their bridge tax and have what they do raise, spent at home? Are those hard-working taxpayers forever going to toil and have the fruit of their labor spent for the benefit of the farmers in the rows of southern towns, with whom they have nothing in common in a national, commercial, social or business way? Are the Pennington citizens so unselfish and angelic that they are ready and willing to supply bridges for the south half, merely because three board members have the authority to compel them to do so as they are a part of Red Lake county? The reply is evident and the organization of Pennington county next November 8th will forever shut off this unfair and unnecessary expense. It would be more economical for the northern half to build a $40,000 court house every eight years for Red Lake Falls, if by doing so they could have the tax they pay for roads and bridges returned to their pockets. This is absolutely true, as will be proven later.

Red Lake Falls' Share of the Road and Bridge Fund.

From 1905 inclusive to date, $37,026.55 has been appropriated for roads and bridges in Red Lake county. Of this amount the village of Red Lake Falls has received the generous sum of $9022.40, about one quarter of the whole amount raised in the county in six years. This also when her assessed valuation for last year shows that it is only one eighteenth of the total valuation of the county and this fraction is all to which she is entitled. During the same six years the towns of Numedal, Nordon, North, Silverton, Clover Leaf, Goodridge, Reiner, Bray, Sanders, Rocksbury, Smiley, Kratka, Highlanding, Star, Polk Center, Black River, River Falls, Wyandotte, Mayfield, Deer Park and Hickory received only $5,325, a little better than half of what the city with the pull received. And bear in mind, Mr. Taxpayer, that the board of county commissioners compelled many of the towns named to expend on their own behalf the sum appropriated, before they were entitled to get a crumb from this rich man's table. Red Lake Falls was excused from this penalty, for reasons which the county and state records do not explain. Mayfield and Garnes during this period received $1,598 for a bridge, but with this amount added, still the men in hiding grabbed the lion's share for the village down the river.

For the same term of years Thief River Falls received $5100. The board promised the city $5000 to aid in construction of a $10,000 steel bridge across Red Lake river, but this board saw fit to withdraw $1000 of this appropriation because Thief River Falls would not "be good." The amount which the city did receive was secured only on the exercise of the greatest finesse and diplomacy on the part of the member from this district at the time. As Thief River Falls' assessment is $737,584, just one fifth if the total valuation of the county, it can be seen how outrageous is the distribution of the tax. What Red Lake Falls did not succeed in pouncing upon went to the towns in the southern part of the county, where the bridges must be built. Had Thief River Falls received her just share of the bridge appropriations she would get about $8000. She does not complain, as she is well able to take care of herself without any outside assitance, but the complaints of northern farmers about poor roads would disappear were the towns enumerated above granted their fair share of the road and bridge tax.

Space forbids further discussion of this interesting subject. More will appear later, but for the present it is sufficient to state that when Pennington county is organized, some bridges in the southern section will be sadly in need of repairs and the highways leading through Pennington county will be among the best in the state.

County Printing.

It was stated in these columns last week that proof would be submitted that the present board of county commissioners do not always let county work to the lowest bidder, but, on the other hand, they let it to the very highest bidder and this when other things are equal. Here is one specific case:

The law requires that the printing of the delinquent tax list, the financial statement for the year proceedings of the board of county commissioners be let by bids. Last January the Red Lake Falls Gazette, owned by John King, the Thief River Falls News and Press and the Plummer Pioneer all submitted bids for this work of 1910. They were as follows: King's paper per description 8 cents for the delinquent tax list, 60 cents per folio for the first publication on the financial statement and the board proceedings, and 30 cents for the second publication. The News' bid was 7 cents per description for the tax list, 25 cents for the first publication of the statement and the proceedings, and 15 cents for the second. The Press bid was 6 cents for the description, 29 cents for the first publication and 14 for the second. The Thief River papers also offered to supply supplements for the other papers so that every reader of a paper in the county could know what was going on. King offered to supply the St. Hilaire paper only. King—in name and in fact—got the contract.

The total amount of the printing varies by years, but will amount to $2000 at least for 1910. The saving, by letting it to one of the lower bidders, would approximate $1500, which would look and feel a great deal better in the pockets of the taxpayers, rather than in King's clutches. Life in St. Paul where Mr. King has a state job, is expensive; it requires lots of money, and a little matter like the above squeezed from the pockets of the hard working farmers of Red Lake county comes in handy down there. Neither should they complain of high taxes when they stand quietly by and permit such outrages. In no other county in the state, aside from a few well known ones in Upper Minnesota, have boards of county commissioners ever had the audacity to attempt such vile practices. These counties, however, have of late been regenerated, but poor old Red Lake remains, the sole survivor of the group once famous throughout the whole state for every variety of crookedness known to corrupt man. In this connection it might be added, that more than one inmate at Stillwater is today doing time for his anxiety to get his feet into the trough in the good old days and directly or indirectly pilfer the public funds, in those counties. There is room for more. Look up the records.

When the board of commissioners of this county, openly and brazenly, with utter disregard of the rights of the tax payers, and for reasons best known to themselves, grant county work to the highest bidder, as they did in the case cited, the bars are let down for the accomplishment of a multitude of similar evil acts. Some are known and will be disclosed as occasion warrants, but others will never be uncovered. Wherein a board in this manner recklessly throws away the farmers' hard earned money, is it not proper to infer that their every act is subject to suspicion, as it is?

It should be stated that Messrs. Johnson and Aubol, the north end representatives, voted against this steal, as they consistently have against every other form of waste and extravagance, but their efforts are useless in the face of the unholy trinity who constitue a majority and control the board. None but cravens and cowards can longer submit to such barefaced holdups. These outragus cannot be overlooked and the organization of Pennington county will be a fitting rebuke to the gang and will limit their operations to that section where this and similar misdeeds have their origin.

Lots of Automobiles.

In the registration of automobiles, the 10,000 mark has been reached in Minnesota. Twelve million dollars represents the Minnesota ownership in automobiles, says Julius Schmahl, secretary of state. When 10,000 was reached, it meant that 3,000 new machines had been bought in 1910 by Minnesotans. Last year only 7,000 motor cars were tagged. Mr. Schmahl says the 11,000 mark will be reached this year.

Hay Price Going Up.

For the first time in twenty years hay costs more than bran and shorts, and the supply of the Northwest is practicaly burned out by the recent drouth. Hay is now coming from Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma. Hay is selling at from $10 to $20 per ton. Never before have Twin City hay dealers had to go south so early in the year for their supply. The Loftus Hubbard company comments as follows on the situation: "The recent rain failed to retard the bullish sentiment, which has been the controlling factor of late in the market. Every indication points to continuance of high prices. No amount of rain will now restore the normal crop of timothy and clover in the Northwestern states. The quantity of hay in the hands of local dealers is limited. It will be necessary for our jobbers to go to Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma for this supply. Prices will range from $5 to $7 above last year. We predict for the new timothy and clover crop a higher value than it has obtained since the drought of 1901."—St. Paul Dispatch.

Bound Over.

A man giving the name of Arthur N. Daly and claiming to come from Fenn, North Dakota, is a guest of Sheriff Nelson at the county jail.

Daly made a deal with Fred Zaiser for the purchase of a team of horses for $350. He gave Mr. Zaiser a check for $125 and got a check for $75 in change. He cashed the $75 check at St. Hilaire and a little later it was learned that the bank on which the $125 check was drawn refused to honor it.

Daly was arrested on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He was taken before Justice Higinbotham yesterday and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury.—Red Lake Falls Gazette, June 30.

Liable Suit Tried.

The slander suit of Detlef Dau against Carl Klockman, both of Germantown, was tried at the term of the Marshall county court held at Warren last week. Dau sued for $1,000.00, and there were many witnesses present who gave conflicting testimonies. The jury brought in a verdict of $1.00 in favor of Dau and while this is a small amount, it means that Dau will have to pay the costs which will be considerable. It would be cheaper for the farmers out in the Germantown country to love one another and pay less for litigation.

May Run for Sheriff.

Knut Rogness, of the town of Moylan Marshall county, was in the city last Friday attending to some business matters. There was quite a number of Marshall county residents in the city that day, and they were all strongly urging Knut to become a candidate for sheriff, recognizing the fact that he would make an excellent officer, and it is understood that Sheriff Forsberg will not again be a candidate. As yet Mr Rogness is undecided. He comes from a portion of Marshall county that has never had a county officer, and will have strong support in the eastern end of the county if he enters the race.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd., 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

Announcement.

I hereby announce my candidacy as a candidate for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st senatorial district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all my efforts to secure the re-districting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'NEILL.

London reports that the largest hats to be seen over there are worn by American women. We decline to regard this as a thing which it is worth while to boast of.

The tax rate in Red Lake county continues to get higher each year. Why should it not be reduced if large counties are such a success? The valuation of the county has been increasing every year and only recently eleven full town ships were added to the county.

Social Democracy has decided to refuse licenses to 14 saloons that have not been properly conducted in Milwaukee. The new organization may eventually establish its right to be called the Social Decency party.

A well informed Red Lake Falls citizen informs the NEWS that nearly $1,000 of the county road and bridge fund appropriated to Red Lake Falls some years ago was not used for roads and bridges but to pay the expenses incidental to the firemen's tournament held there. No wonder the farmers are not getting their share of this fund.

Protection for Women Workers.

Often nobody makes much profit out of the most wretchedly paid and worst-"sweated" labor. Petty employers or middlemen sell the product of this labor, each in competition with the others. The cheaper they get the labor,—the cheaper they sell the product. If the laborers were able to force wages up to a decent living level everybody, employers included, would be better off. But many of these laborers—women sewing at home, children making artificial flowers, and others—are not able to organize. They are poor, detached, unknown to one another. The same condition exists in Great Britain. A report published by the Bureau of Labor over a year ago says, "In some British industrial towns women work from sun rise until late into the night for the equivalent of one or two dollars a week."

But, in social organization, England is much ahead of the United States. In 1907 and again in 1908 the House of Commons appointed a committee to study this subject and propose a remedy. And last fall—almost unnoticed here on account of the great contest over the budget—Parliament passed an act providing that in certain industries the Board of Trade—a department of the Government—should establish wage boards consisting of an equal number of employers and employees with one or three members appointed by the Board of Trade. These boards are empowered to fix a minimum rate of wages for timework and piecework, and any employer paying less than the rate so fixed is subject to a fine of twenty pounds for each offense. Moreover, in case of prosecution, the burden of proof is on the employer.

There was opposition, of course. But the pay of many of these women was so small, even though they worked hard for long hours, that it alone would not support life on the scantest terms. In the interests of public health and of society in general Parliament had already established certain conditions of sanitation, ventilation, and so on, and it was considered quite as legitimate, in the interests of society, to establish a wage scale that would at least support life in some tolerable fashion.—Saturday Evening Post.

'Foley Kidney Pills Have Cured Me.'

The above is a quotation from a letter written by H. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind. "I contracted a severe case of kidney trouble. My back gave out and pained me. I seemed to have lost all strength and ambition; was bothered with dizzy spells, my head would swim and specks float before my eyes. I took Foley Kidney Pills regularly and am now perfectly well and feel like a new man. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me."—Sold by all Druggists.

Fatal Automobile Accident.

John J. Ingenhutt of Minneapolis, vice president of the Northeast Feed Mill company, driving his new forty horsepower automobile, occupied by himself and Henry J. Palmer, a northside Minneapolis liquor man, crashed broadside into a moving Soo line passenger train at a grade crossing. Palmer died two days later and Ingenhutt is in a critical condition.

Mining Engineer Killed.

J. D. Williams, engineer at the Agnew mine near Hibbing, was run over and killed by a Missabe railroad engine. He was walking along the track toward Mitchell and did not hear the engine, which was backing toward him. The emergency brakes were applied, but it was too late. Mr. Williams was about forty-five years old and leaves a family.

Fifteen Persons Injured.

A big auto truck, on which the brakes refused to work, dashed down a steep hill between St. Paul and White Bear lake, striking an embankment and turning over, more or less injuring the fifteen men aboard.

Must Be Above Suspicion

Kidney and bladder ailments are so serious in their consequences, and if unchecked so often fatal that any remedy offered for their cure must be above suspicion. Foley Kidney Pills contain no harmful drugs, and have successfully stood a long and thorough test.—Sold by all Druggists.

A BAD ORCHARD ENEMY.

June is the month when careful inspection should be made of the young apple and pear trees to see that the newly hatched larvae of the borer beetle are headed off. While some orchardists incase the trunks of the young trees with wrappers of one kind or another, which extend a couple of inches into the soil, or paint the trunks with whitewash in which a rather strong solution of carbolic acid has been added, these precautions should not be allowed to take the place of an individual tree inspection. This is best done by keeping all grass and weeds hoed away from the trunk of the tree, getting down on all fours and carefully scraping the bark for a couple of inches below the surface of the ground with a sharp knife, a curved bladed pruning knife being preferable. The presence of the newly hatched borers will be indicated by a drop of discolored sap exuding from the bark or a tiny bit of brown wood dust. If the borers have been in the tree a year or more this brown excreta will be considerable, the adjacent bark giving a hollow sound when scraped with the knife. This dead bark should be carefully pared away and the borer or borers located, for sometimes four or five will be eating the life out of the same tree. Borers of the preceding year's hatch usually work down and sideways from the point of entrance, while those which have been in the tree two seasons are deeply bedded in the wood and are usually working up preparatory to their change to the beetle stage and emergence from the tree in this form some time in June. While a pliable wire is good for reaching these pests, a little peeled twig will answer the purpose nicely, the use of it often preventing a serious cutting of the bark and tree. When the borers have been cleaned out the wounds should be packed tight with moist soil, so as to hasten the healing process. There is no other single pest which does as much primary damage to fruit trees as borers, yet there is no orchard enemy which the novice seems to know so little about.

WILL BEAR WATCHING.

The present unexampled solicitude of the fruit jobbers' trust for the financial welfare of the independent fruit growers is entirely too belated to be credited with any large degree of philanthropy or altruism. Time was—and that but a short time ago—when all growers were independent—that is, each operated individually and was easy picking for the commission sharks, who saw that their victims got just enough returns for their produce to keep soul and body together, and sometimes not that much. The city buyers were banded together to quote a price for a given shipment of produce and then notify all members of the clique what that price was, and the victim could wait until he got black in the face, but he would get no better offer. In time growers woke up and realized how they had been hoodwinked and swindled. They are now organized, and organized effectively enough so that they are beginning to get fairly decent treatment from those who formerly plundered them at will. Some dissatisfaction has been felt by members of some growers' associations with prices received, and these are being enticed away from the organization by temporary decent treatment by the commission men and jobbers, but it is only for the purpose of disrupting these co-operative marketing organizations, when the old tactics can be counted on to put into play; hence when the fruit jobbers' trust displays undue kindness toward the independents it is safe to assume there is an ulterior motive behind it. There is a nigger in the wood pile.

HAND THINNING OF FRUITS.

When danger of frost is past and it is apparent that the trees have set more fruit than their size would seem to indicate that it will be possible for them to bring to a good sized maturity, hand thinning should be resorted to. This will not only reduce the number, but will at the same time improve both the size and quality of the fruit remaining, the total weight or volume of fruit not being reduced by the process, but simply being confined beneath fewer skins. The thinning in most of the western orchard districts is done when the apples are about the size of a shelled walnut, and the practice is to leave no fruit on the tree closer than six inches. The same rule holds for pears, while for smaller fruits, such as peaches and apricots, the distance at which the fruit is left apart is about four inches, varying somewhat upon the variety and size which it usually attains. If the thinning is carefully done much defective fruit may be eliminated in the process, thus reducing the number of culls which will have to be handled at harvest time.

NEW HOTEL IS DEDICATED

Elaborate Banquet Held in the Saint Paul.

In the beautiful palm room, with the atmosphere heavy with the odor of thousands of roses, with a selected orchestra playing a programme that ran from light opera to the strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" and in the presence of an assemblage such as no other occasion in the state's history has ever drawn together at one time and place, the new Saint Paul hotel at St. Paul was formally opened and dedicated.

It was altogether fitting that the first hospitality in the Saint Paul should be attended by the business, commercial and professional men of the city after which it is named. More than 300 of the Northwest's most prominent men attended the banquet. Present were the governors of two states, the mayors of two great cities, James J. Hill, whom Pierce Butler, the toastmaster, introduced as "the master builder of railroads in the history of the world;" the presidents of two great transcontinental railroad systems, the venerable Archbishop Ireland and scores of men whose names stand high in trade and financial circles.

MAY BE HELD IN ST. PAUL

Next Meeting of National Conservation Congress.

The National Conservation congress may assemble some time this summer or early fall in St. Paul. If it does former President Roosevelt will deliver his promised address to the delegates there.

This was the statement made by Governor Eberhart, when it was learned that his private secretary, Ralph W. Wheelock, is trying to arrange at Washington for the meeting to be held at St. Paul. Mr. Wheelock was given the power by Governor Eberhart to make all arrangements possible and secure the congress for Minnesota.

"We want the congress," said Governor Eberhart, "and we shall bend every effort to secure it. It is logical that the state which took the lead in starting a campaign for state conservation of resources should be the first to entertain the national body."

Minnesota Democrats Will Meet in One of Twin Cities.

The Democratic state central committee held a brief meeting at the Merchants' hotel at St. Paul, but neither time nor place for holding the state convention of the party was set. St Paul and Minneapolis are both eager bidders for the meeting and the Commercial clubs of the two cities have extended invitations to the Democrats and offered them a meeting place.

In view of the length of time which will elapse before the state convention is held it was thought wiser to postpone action on time and place for a month or two. As a result the power of making the choice of a meeting place and fixing a date was delegated to a committee of five to be appointed by the chairman, who will be a member ex-officio.

SHOOTING WAS ACCIDENTAL

Former Mayor of a Minnesota Town Badly Wounded.

Charles Olsen, former mayor of Aurora, was found in his home in that place, unconscious from a bullet wound in his breast. He was taken to a Duluth hospital, where it was said there is a chance for life. It was at first believed Mr. Olson had attempted suicide, but the authorities said it was probably accidental. Mr. Olson was alone in his room at the time of the shooting. He had a small caliber rifle in his hands. The bullet passed just above his heart, coming out at the left shoulder.

SHERIFF RAIDS LODGEROOM

Alleged to Have Found Intoxicants and Gambling Outfit.

Armed with two search and seizure warrants Sheriff Peter Bonde of Kandiyohi county and his deputies entered the lodgerooms of the Willmar chapter of the Eagles, arrested William C. Kemp on the double charge of maintaining an unlicensed drinking place and gambling rooms and confiscated, among other things, a poker table and [illegible] chips, 21 decks of playing cards, [illegible] quart bottles of whisky and 83 quart bottles of beer, together with beer and whisky glasses and other supplies.

TWO MINERS ARE SUFFOCATED

Meet Death in a Pit Near Bovey, This State.

Victor Maki and Ludolph Mietlvich, miners, were suffocated in the test pit of the Canisteo mine near Bovey.

The two miners were sent into the test pit after samples of ore. Several hours afterwards searching parties were sent after them. After hard work the bodies were recovered.

Editor Russell Dead.

R. R. Russell, editor of the Hayfield Guard, died in a Rochester hospital as the result of burns received in a kerosene explosion. Mr. Russell a few days ago was pouring kerosene upon the fire in his office stove. The can slipped from his hands, fell into the flames and exploded. He was immediately enveloped in a mass of seething flames and oil. He was taken to Rochester for treatment.

DAZED THE ARTIST.

The Story of an Early Portrait of Frith by Himself.

Here is the amusing history of one of Frith's own portraits painted by himself. The celebrated artist had entirely forgotten its existence until a friend entered his studio in London one morning and asserted that a capital picture of himself was on view in a small shop in Great Portland street. "It's not a bit like what you are now," observed the friend, "but it may have resembled you some years ago. Go and look at it."

Mr. Frith went and found his own image after an estrangement of forty-five years. He determined to buy it, though he had not the faintest recollection of having painted it. "Ah, a portrait!" said Frith to the woman in charge of the shop after he had pretended to examine several other works. "Whose likeness is that?"

"That," said the lady, "is a portrait of the celebrated artist, Frith, painted by himself."

"Why, he must be an elderly man," put in the artist.

The woman remarked that he was young once.

"Humph!" quoth the genial Frith. "Not much of a picture."

To this the woman demurred and asked £20 for the canvas. It was Frith's turn to appear surprised.

"Well," replied the shopkeeper without moving a muscle, "it cost us nearly as much. We shall make a very small profit. You see, it is very valuable because the artist is deceased."

"Deceased!" exclaimed the astonished painter. "Dead, do you mean?"

"Yes, sir; died of drink. My husband attended the funeral."

Frith bought the picture, but did not revive for some time.

Didn't Startle Her.

A certain prominent New York business man is known as a "high roller." "A chandelier fell in the night at his house," explained one of his friends, "and in the morning at breakfast he said to his wife, with a laugh:

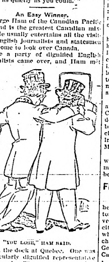
"'What did you think, my love, when you heard the chandelier fall in the dead silence of the night?'

"'I thought, darling,' his wife answered, 'that you had been detained on business again and was getting upstairs as quietly as you could.'"

An Easy Winner.

George Ham of the Canadian Pacific railroad is the greatest Canadian mixer. He usually entertains all the visiting English journalists and statesmen who come to look over Canada.

Once a party of dignified English journalists came over, and Ham met them at the dock at Quebec. One was a particularly dignified representative of the London Times, much impressed with his importance.



"YOU LOSE," HAM SAID.

"George," said a friend who was with him, "you'll never be able to make a dent on that man."

Ham looked him over. "I'll bet you a dinner," he said, "that he'll be calling me 'George' before midnight."

"Done."

At 9:30 that night Ham called up his friend. "You lose," Ham said. "He has not only called me 'George,' but he now has his arm around my neck and is calling me 'Georgie.'"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

The Tattered Flag.

A general on his return from the wars showed his family a regimental flag tattered, torn and riddled with bullets which he had personally captured from the enemy. On the following morning the trophy was to be presented to the commander in chief. When he called for the flag his industrious wife brought it to him smilingly and, presenting it to him with a look of proud satisfaction, said:

"James, I sat up all night and mended the flag, and now—see, it looks almost as good as new!"

There may be readers of these notes who have fruit trees in their homes or [illegible] small orchards which [illegible] the lily of olden time, "neither toil nor spin," a condition of barrenness doubtless due to too much kindness and [illegible] fertilizers. Under such conditions the production of fruit at [illegible] season may be induced by pruning such trees rather sharply during the month of July, including the thinning out of branches in the body of the tree and the cutting back of limbs longer than they need to be. This treatment tends to produce fruit buds for next season. The same principle—the production of fruit from a reduction of the tree's vitality—is sometimes brought into play accidentally when a tree is injured by cultivator or [illegible] by the house cat.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Five inches of rain fell throughout Tennessee, Mississippi and Eastern Arkansas. The wind reached the velocity of a cyclone and heavy hail storms prevailed. Hardly a railroad escaped without one or two washouts and schedules were badly interrupted. At Como, Marigold and Jonestown, Miss., houses were blown down, many unroofed and others lifted from their foundations.

Fire broke out in the Julien hotel at Dubuque, Ia., while 200 guests were asleep. A wild panic followed and a large number were injured. Sam Levy of Chicago was fatally hurt by jumping from a third story window. Charles Evans of Philadelphia suffered internal injuries. Firemen rescued the other guests.

Ninety-five persons, everybody on the sinking ship, were rescued from the North Pacific Steamship company's steamer Santa Clara, which foundered near Eureka, Cal. Assistance summoned by wireless reached the scene just in time to save those on board.

Trapped by metal doors and barred windows six firemen were caught by a back draft and burned to death during a fire that partially destroyed the New Haven (Conn.) county jail. Three of their comrades were saved through the heroism of other firemen.

Fourteen men were instantly killed and another fatally injured by a premature explosion of a heavy charge of dynamite at a construction camp on the Texco extension of the Santa Fe road near Novice, Tex.

Seven men, all foreigners, were killed and three others were badly injured through a premature explosion of a blast at the stone quarry of the Nazareth Cement company at Nazareth, Pa.

Thirty-one persons were injured in a collision on the Rock Island road near Garrison, Ia.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Disclaiming responsibility for the hissing of the president of the United States in connection with his address of greeting to them at Washington the National American Woman Suffrage association officially expressed its regret to President Taft that "any one present, either member of our organization or outsider, should have interrupted your address by an expression of personal feeling."

Dan Russell of Dickinson, N. D., lost his seven months' identity fight for half of the estate of the late Daniel Russell of Melrose, Mass. In a decision handed down by Judge George Lawton in the Middlesex (Mass.) probate court the ranchman is declared to be "Jim" Rosseau, the French Canadian from the Adirondacks, who disappeared years ago.

Thirty-nine more bodies of miners were taken out of the St. Paul coal mine at Cherry, Ill., where they had been entombed since Nov. 13.

At a conference of railroad officials held at Denver the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad and the Denver and Rio Grande and Western Pacific lines concluded traffic agreements whereby these systems will interchange business in Denver and the Gould lines will become the outlet to California for the Hill lines.

THE DEATH RECORD.

State Senator John Raines, a leader in the New York legislature, is dead. He was the author of the Raines liquor law of that state, which has been condemned and approved more generally than any piece of legislation ever enacted by a state legislature.

There are a whole lot of children who would have better mothers than they do if the latter would show half the interest in the intelligent rearing of their offspring that they do in club work and poodle dogs. From the standpoint of wonderful possibility of development a child from a time several months antedating its birth to maturity far surpasses flowers, pets or any other creation and is always responsive in ways which none of these things can be. The need of the times, along with cleaner things politically, is more real kindergartners, mothers who nurse their own children if possible and take an intelligent interest in their physical, mental and moral development instead of delegating the job to some hired maid.

Notwithstanding the thousands of acres of burdock that yearly mature their unsightly crop of seed in vacant lots all over the country, we nevertheless import annually from European countries [illegible] pounds of dried burdock root, those preparing it receiving from 3 to 8 cents per pound for it.

While a big ado is made about the high cost of the necessaries of life, hardly a line is penned relative to expenditure in the United States alone of $1,600,000,000 annually for whisky and beer, this total not including the additional enormous burden borne by taxpayers in the shape of criminal court expense.

Whatever else may be said of the California grain grower, he is entitled to a measure of credit for the bit of sentiment he seems to show in leaving numerous live oaks in his fields, which show up in striking relief against the golden yellow of the ripening grain. While these trees make trouble for the header and reaper, they add much to the beauty of the landscape for the passerby.

WELCOME THE RAIN

This Section Visited by Heavy Rain Storm Tuesday Evening.

While Damage Has Been Done a Good Crop Is Now a Sure Thing.

This section was visited by a welcome rain Tuesday evening and as a result farmers are feeling happy. Crops in this section have been damaged to a considerable extent by the lack of rain, but now a two-thirds crop is assured. In most every part of Dakota the crops is an entire failure.

The rain in Red Lake county passed through the two north rows of township and through the southern part of Marshall county. The rain extended about one-half mile north of St. Hilaire and at Hazel it was very light. Kratka, Highlanding, Erie and Kuhnel report a heavy rain and one that will insure a crop. At Germantown the rain was quite heavy, but not as much rain fell there as at other points.

In the vicinity of Peter Englestad's farm in the town of Rockbury, some damage was done by wind and hail. Mr. Englestad's crops suffered considerable and one of his large silos was wrecked by the wind.

Germantown.

The dry weather still continues somewhat to the detriment of all crops. Prospects are not now as bright as a week or two since, altho rain before long would work wonders.

Whether it be from the sane Fourth agitation or from natural causes, Germantown is out of the game this year and those of our citizens who could not or would not resist the patriotic impulse are celebrating at Grygla.

County and town road work has been pushed with vigor the last two weeks and a good amount of work is still left to be done.

Miss Wilson of Thief River Falls closed a four weeks term of Norwegian religious school here week before last.

Quite a number of Germantown people attended court at Warren last week. One case of local interest was disposed of at this term, regarding which we quote from the Warren Register. "Detlif Dan vs. Charley Klockmann. Action for alleged slander. Jury gave plaintiff verdict for $1.00."

J. H. Roller and family left last week for a two weeks visit at their parental homes at Garfield Minnesota and Westfield, Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. August Ristau visited last week with friends and relatives south of Thief River Falls.

Miss Sarah Vaughan was in Germantown last week enroute to the farm in the town of Goodridge.

Make hay while the sun shines will be the slogan for the next 6 or 8 weeks. Haying has been started by some farmers already.

The Martin Berg place northwest of here has been sold to an Iowa party. Consideration $1200.

Quite a number of people wishing to buy land or take up homesteads have visited Germantown lately, resulting in some swamp lands bring filed on in the district to be drained by the Grygla ditch system.

John Clausen returned here two weeks ago from Montana, where he has been employed since spring on an irrigation project.

WAS A NOTABLE GATHERING

Recent Semi-Centennial Celebration of Swedish Lutherans at Rock Island, Ill.—Norwegian Journalist Describes Visit to Home of Bjornson—Emperor of Russia to Visit Denmark Some Time in August.

SWEDEN.

The recent semi-centennial celebration which was held by Swedish Lutherans at Rock Island, Ill., was perhaps the most notable gathering of Swedish-Americans that has ever been held in this country. In a sense it was an international gathering, for there were present representatives from the Swedish government in the persons of Bishop von Scheele and Rector Magnificus Schuck of the University of Upsala. It is a significant thing that the king of Sweden sent official representatives to this meeting and shows that in Sweden they regard the Augustana synod as a branch of the state church of Sweden. The Lutheran church in America is, however, totally independent of the state church in Sweden, while the two churches entertain the same faith. Through the Augustana synod and its many colleges and the mother institution at Rock Island the Swedish language has taken new life in America. The pastors of the Augustana synod speak the Swedish language perfectly, although in many churches the two languages are used. In other words, the Augustana synod stands prepared to take care of its own English missions in America. The Denkmann family, through its donation of a $150,000 library to Augustana college and the raising of a jubilee fund amounting to not less than $250,000, has placed the college in a position to do university work and the time will soon come when full university courses will be established. There were over 10,000 people present at the celebration and greetings were cabled to both President Taft and King Gustaf V. of Sweden. Bishop Scheele has announced that after his death his valuable library will be sent to Augustana college.

The Swedish-American Male Chorus, which is now touring Sweden, is having a splendid success and is being enthusiastically received wherever it appears. The appearance of a Swedish-American Male Chorus in Sweden will do much to further cement the friendship between America and the land of the midnight sun. While the Swedish songs that are being rendered create much enthusiasm the singing of the old war songs of America bring forth ripples of applause and wherever the boys who carry the Stars and Stripes in their hands appear there is no end of cheering. The Swedish-American singers have shown one thing to the old fatherland. They have not forgotten the old songs and they sing these songs in America and they are well received. So many thousands of Swedes have emigrated to this country that it is but natural that they have brought some of their traditions and customs with them. Something that the Swedes have brought to this country in generous measure are the Swedish songs and they have proven so popular of late years that they are in great demand on all public occasions. There is vim and a snap to Swedish chorus work which cannot be excelled by any other nationality and the appearance of the Swedish-American Male Chorus in the principal cities of Sweden is, therefore, of great interest to people on both sides of the Atlantic.

Colonel Roosevelt's Stockholm speech is still a theme for much comment in the Swedish papers. The ex-president hit the nail square on the head when he told the Swedes that they should not follow in the wake of the French people and decrease their families. His words of advice in this respect became all the more piquant because of the fact that the propaganda of decreasing the Swedish laboring men's families had been started by Hinke Bergegren, the ardent socialist leader. There have been many lectures delivered against the "large family" in Sweden by leading socialists and sociologists, but Roosevelt's fearless utterances have plainly placed a damper on their propaganda. The curtailment of the large family is a theme which has been receiving a great deal of attention lately in Sweden and Colonel Roosevelt struck a delicate but practical theme, and his words have aroused no end of a healthy interchange of ideas on this great question.

NORWAY.

The [illegible] Aulestad [illegible] [illegible] at Aulestad [illegible] there. But it appeared [illegible] they were not in [illegible] who has filled the whole place with his charming personality [illegible]. Mrs. Bjornson is prostrated with grief and will scarcely allow any one to see and speak to her. It was a great deal worse for her to return to Aulestad than she had ever imagined. Everything there reminds her of the dear one who has left her. She has thousands of little things to put in order, but no matter where she turns the fond memories of the departed appear and so she must retire to her room and weep. 'Mother comes down to see us once in a while,' said Mrs. Erling-Bjornson, 'but she will not go into the stuen, because she does not dare to look at the picture of Bjornson. She has not the strength nor the courage to look at it. There is so much that bears down upon old Aulestad in these sad days. The dam has broken and given a setback to the industry of this estate for a long time to come. Consequently the light plant, the saw mill and the little flour mill—all is at a standstill.'"

There has been established in Christiania a new theological school for the training of ministers who teach doctrines of the old Lutheran faith in opposition to the modern theology now taught by the theological faculty of the University of Christiania. This school was started only a short time ago, but in spite of the short time it has been in existence it has won many adherents and supporters. One of the members of the faculty, Professor Edward Sverdrup, is at present on a lecturing tour in America for the purpose of gaining moral support of the Norwegian Lutherans of this country for the work of his faction in Norway. He is a brother of Bishop Sverdrup and a nephew of Johan Sverdrup, the celebrated Norwegian statesman.

The Tourist exposition in Bergen was opened June 1. The opening address was delivered by Statsminister Konow, who in a few appropriate words explained the purports of the exposition. The attendance on the opening day was more than gratifying and there is every indication that the exposition will prove a great success and also be a great advertising card for the tourist traffic of Norway. The chief protector of the exposition is King Haakon, who will visit Bergen in the near future and deliver an address.

The great floods in the vicinity of Fetsund have been attracting a great deal of attention recently and the Christiania papers have been full of lurid accounts of the ravages of the floods. At Fetsund there is a big log jam, where over 50,000 logs have been jammed together, threatening to break up the great iron railway bridge. The bridge seems to have held its own and railway trains have been crossing the bridge every day while the flood was increasing in its fury.

Large flocks of Swedish reindeer have crossed the Norwegian frontier and are feeding in Tydalen. The Swedish government has been notified and efforts are at present being made to drive the animals back to Swedish territory, but this will be no easy task.

DENMARK.

The czar of Russia is scheduled for a visit to Copenhagen some time in August and will on that occasion possibly meet the emperor of Germany. But it is impossible for any one to find out just when they are expected. Their visit to Copenhagen is, therefore, shrouded in mystery and even the cleverest newspaper correspondents are unable to find any clue to build on. All they know is that it has been definitely settled that the two monarchs are going to meet either in Copenhagen or somewhere on the Norwegian coast. That Emperor William will not abandon his customary cruise on the Norwegian coast is a settled fact, yet just where he contemplates meeting the czar is unknown.

June 7 was Children's day in Copenhagen. It was a successful day throughout and the proceeds from the sale of flowers and the open air concerts will all go to the fund for the poor children of the city. There was music everywhere. Festive clad people by the thousands invaded the parks, the cafes and restaurants were full, and everywhere the festive spirit was evident. A feature of the day's programme was the flower parade. Thousands of children participated in this parade and such a beautiful array of flowers and wild roses has not been seen in Copenhagen for many a day.

The Open Air theater at Copenhagen gave its first performance to an audience of several thousand people on Saturday, June 4. The whole Copenhagen press unites in saying that it was the most successful theatrical performance ever given in the history of the Danish theater. The play that was rendered was Oehlenschlager's "Hagbarth and Signe." The evening was a typical Danish "Juniaften" and the great audience was in the very best of humor. The Open Air theater promises to be a most successful institution and is drawing tremendous audiences every evening.

The girl was at the supper table with her mother and little sister and was in the act of cutting cake when a bolt entered the house, struck the little girl in the shoulder, passed through her body and out through the thigh. It then splintered the floor and set fire to the house. The fire was extinguished before much damage was done.

Fred Hous, aged twenty-seven, of Buckman, Benton county, was overcome by gas while digging a well. His father went down and took his son in his arms, but when nearly at the surface he also was overcome and could no longer hold him. GIRLS FACE DEATH IN FIRE

Candy Factory at Minneapolis Totally Destroyed.

Many narrow escapes and daring rescues attended the fire at the building of the Northern Candy and Cracker company at Minneapolis, which was destroyed, entailing a loss estimated at $80,000. Seventy-five girls and boys employed by the company were at work in the building at the time and the rapid progress of the fire cut off all escape, with the exception of the iron fire escape in the rear of the building, extending down the four floors.

S. I. Brin of the S. I. Brin Sign company carried eight girls from the fourth floor to the ground by way of an iron ladder used as a fire escape and fastened on the rear wall. Of the eight, one girl, Jennie Metzfeld, wriggled out of his arms before he reached the lower part of the ladder and fell fifteen feet to the ground. She escaped with a minor leg bruise. Owing to the intense heat of the day several of the girls fainted and medical attention was necessary. None, however, will feel any effects.

HUSBAND KILLS YOUNG WIFE

Jealousy Motive for Murder in St. Paul.

Jealous because of the popularity of Florence, his eighteen-year-old bride, Harry Bunce of St. Paul, an Englishman, shot her during a quarrel at her home, the 32-caliber bullet inflicting a wound in her left temple from which she died a few minutes after she was taken to the city hospital. The tragedy was enacted in the presence of Mrs. Bunce's mother, Mrs. Arch Gilbert, who has been an invalid for many years and was unable to go for help or aid her daughter when the quarrel began.

Bunce stood in a daze for a moment after the shooting, apparently hardly realizing what he had done. Then he suddenly knelt by his wife's side and covered her face with kisses.

"Now I am going to kill myself," he shouted, and when Mrs. Gilbert begged him to go he retired to the kitchen and fired one shot, evidently into the wall, for he was not hurt when Officer Quigley burst through the door a few minutes later in response to Mrs. Gilbert's cries.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

EXPLOSION KILLS FIVE MEN

Gas Tank Blows Up on Outskirts of Minneapolis.

Five men were instantly killed, three others injured and six men and four women had narrow escapes from death when an acetylene gas tank exploded in the basement of the Point saloon, Crystal Lake and Robbinsdale roads, just outside the Minneapolis city limits.

The detonation could be heard for miles.

The explosion hurled the walls of the building outward, the roof falling in, killing or maiming those inside. Fire followed the explosion, disfiguring the bodies of those caught in the two-story structure, which was reduced to ashes. The dead are:

CHARLES GIEBENHAIM, forty-eight years old, bartender in the saloon.

LOUIS O. HAMISCH, twenty-five years old, a painter.

EUGENE HAMLIN, twenty-seven years old, a teamster.

ALBERT HIRTH, Brickton, Minn., about twenty-two years old.

JOSEPH SILBAUGH, forty-two years old, a carpenter.

Edward Boucher, proprietor of the saloon; George Miller, a plasterer, and Ernest Osterheld, porter at the saloon, were seriously injured.

Others Have Narrow Escapes.

About six other men were injured more or less, but in the rush following the accident they either went to their homes or, despite their injuries, assisted in the rescue work.

In the rear of the saloon four women of mature age were chatting over steins at the time of the explosion. Immediately after the accident they were seen hurrying away, their faces blackened and scorched. They were taken into the home of William Koenig, where they were given attention. It was necessary for Mrs. Koenig to give two of the women clothing, their own having been torn from them during their flight.

The exact cause of the explosion is a mystery. It was reported that some one had been working on the gas tank at the time, but this was denied by Osterheld, the porter. He declares that he and his employer were the only men in the basement at the time of the accident, and they were at the other end of the building. The theory is that the pipes leading from the tank had become clogged and stopped by gas. This produced an excess pressure and the explosion followed.

MANY BUILDINGS ARE RAZED

Fire Partially Destroys the Town of Mizpah.

Fire starting from an unknown cause practically wiped out the town of Mizpah, forty miles south of International Falls. Many business houses and residences were burned, with a loss estimated at $60,000.

The town was helpless thirty minutes after the fire was discovered on account of the cistern platform burning, causing the engine to drop into the cistern which supplied the water.

The flames finally were subdued by the blowing up of the postoffice building with dynamite.

A VOICE FROM HEAVEN

Cicely Halstead's wedding morn dawned gray and cheerless. Leaden skies gave little promise of sunshine. Add to the depressing influence of the weather the vivid memory of a dream in which her loved mother had appeared to her with outstretched arms pleading with her to renounce her lover even at this late hour, telling her that nothing but misery and unhappiness could result from the union, and it will be readily believed that it was with a joyless heart that she arose.

Cicely was an orphan, possessed of considerable wealth. She made her home with a maiden aunt whose chief aim in life was to make Cicely happy. Her wealth as well as beauty of face and loveliness of character had brought many suitors to her feet. Of them all but one had won her heart—gay and handsome Philip Reycroft.

There were many who openly declared that it was Cicely's wealth that he desired, as he was known to be reckless in his living and frequently involved in financial difficulties.

Cicely could not throw off her oppression of heart, and, though not unusually superstitious, she felt that a voice direct from heaven had spoken and should be obeyed.

With aching heart and tear dimmed eyes she wrote a note and sent it to her betrothed.

Scarce believing the evidence of his eyes, Philip sat as if stunned on reading Cicely's message. She had clearly stated her reason for her action and in closing had said:

"It will be useless to attempt to see me, as I leave home at once for an indefinite period. I shall always love and pray for you."

For perhaps the first time in the twenty-nine years of his existence Philip Reycroft indulged in a mental reverie the subject of which was his own life and actions as they must have appeared to others, and he could not but wonder how such a sweet girl as Cicely could ever have cared for him. He was forced to acknowledge that she was justified in her act.

As he loved her most sincerely he resolved that he would prove his love and if fate was kind would yet win her. Henceforth his old haunts and friends should know him no more.

With this determination he entered the office of a large law firm and devoted himself most faithfully to the practice of his profession, to which he had heretofore given little time.

Five years elapsed, and Philip Reycroft was known as one of the leading lawyers of the great city and a man who for integrity of character commanded the respect and admiration of all who knew him. During these years he had no word of Cicely, but he believed that somewhere in the great world she still lived and cared for him.

Weary of travel and sightseeing and lonely at heart since the death of her aunt, Cicely resolved to return to her native land and take up her abode in the old home. It was a beautiful estate situated on the banks of a noble river, and there she found peace of mind such as she had not known for many years. Old friends welcomed her heartily, and it was not long before she learned of the change in Philip and the splendid name he had made for himself.

One morning at breakfast on taking up the daily paper her eye caught the line "Lawyer Reycroft Seriously Injured."

After the first shock of the news she read the full account, which stated how a favorite little newsboy of Mr Reycroft's, running across the street to meet him, came directly in the way of a runaway automobile which suddenly appeared around the corner and but for the presence of mind and speedy action of his friend must surely have been killed. The child escaped with slight injury, but his rescuer was severely hurt and taken to the hospital, where it was feared he would not recover.

Cicely lost no time, but went up at once to the city and drove directly to the hospital. She was told that no one could see him, but she begged so earnestly to be allowed to go to him that permission was granted her. Philip was in a partially unconscious condition, muttering broken phrases in which she caught the sound of her own name.

Kneeling by his bedside, she laid her cool hand on his fevered brow and softly murmured: "Philip, dear Philip, I am here. Will you not speak to me?" At the sound of her gentle voice his eyes opened, and as they rested on the loved face an expression of absolute peace and happiness gave place to that of pain and agony. Too weak to more than utter her name, his hand clasped over hers, and he fell into a deep sleep.

On awakening Cicely promised, on condition that he would not try to talk or excite himself, that she would call again on the morrow.

Grave fears for his recovery were still entertained by the doctors and nurses; but, with Cicely now returned to him, he made a desperate struggle for life and won the victory over death. In a few weeks he was able to leave the hospital, though bearing marks of his heroic performance which would remain with him through life, and shortly after on a lovely autumn day these two, so long separated, were united never to part again.

They decided that the little newsboy who was indirectly the means of reuniting them should share their happiness and all the advantages which love and wealth could give.—St. Louis Star.

The Scrap Book

Appearances Deceitful.

She had all the earmarks of a green stenographer, and it therefore occurred to the fresh young clerk that here was one whom he could guy to his heart's content. After luncheon hour, when all the men were in the office, seemed the best time to show what a wag he was.

Tipping them that he was going to have some fun, he went up to her and said, "Oh, Miss T., I heard the funniest story today," and he proceeded to get off a time honored patriarch of a joke.

When he had finished she looked at him guilelessly and said, "Oh, Mr. X., if you ever hear the mate to that will you tell me?"

"The mate?" said he, rather bewildered.

"Well, you know," said she, "Noah took a pair of all things into the ark with him, and now that I know one of the jokes really I would love to know the other."—Lippincott's.

It Never Comes Again.

There are gains for all our losses,
There are balms for all our pains,
But when youth, the dream, departs
It takes something from our hearts,
And it never comes again.

We are stronger and are better
Under manhood's sterner reign.
Still we feel that something sweet
Followed youth with flying feet
And will never come again.

Something beautiful is vanished,
And we sigh for it in vain.
We behold it everywhere,
On the earth and in the air,
But it never comes again.
—Richard H. Stoddard.

According to Formula.

Judge Pennypacker was once asked by his brother Harry during a session of court for the loan of $5. Harry walked to the desk and whispered the request in the judge's ear. The latter, looking down over the top of his glasses without the suggestion of a smile, said loud enough to be heard throughout the room:

"Put your application in writing and present it to the court in a proper manner."

Mr. Pennypacker, thinking the judge's insistence upon regularity to be merely regard for the dignity of the court, wrote out the request and handed it to the clerk of the court, who in turn passed it to the bench. The judge read it quietly and seriously and then interrupted the pending trial long enough to say:

"Application for a loan of $5 made to this court is received and refused."

What the Sandwich Was For.

A stately old professor was approached by a young student one day in the western colleges. Trying hard to keep back a smile, the young man asked:

"Professor, you say you are an expert at solving riddles, don't you?"

"I claim that I am, my boy."

"Well, then, can you tell me why a man who has seen London on a foggy day and a man who has not seen London on a foggy day are like a ham sandwich?"

The professor studied for a long time, venturing several answers, which proved to be wrong. Finally, at his wits' end, he said:

"I give it up."

"It's easy," said the other.

"Give it up," repeated the professor.

"Why," was the reply, "one has seen the mist, and the other has missed the scene. Ha, ha! Catch on?"

"Of course I do, you lunatic! But what has the sandwich to do with it?"

After the youngster had recovered from a spell of laughter he chuckled:

"Oh, that's what you bite on."

Almost Too Far.

"Very good repartee—very good—but perhaps a little strong."

The speaker was a prominent actor. He resumed:

"It reminds me of a dialogue at the Lambs club between a New England poet and a Scot.

"'Bah!' said the Scot, hearing that the poet had a press agent. 'Bah, you Americans are possessed with an itch for notoriety!'

"The poet tossed back his long locks fiercely.

"'Well,' he cried, 'an itch for notoriety is better than a notoriety for'—

"But with a 'Tut, tut, gentlemen!'" said the actor, "I ended this unseemly wrangle ere it went too far."

Heroic Courtesy.

A French writer on "The Revolution, the Empire and the Restoration," cites an amusing instance of what he calls heroic courtesy. Percy, Lord Beverly, invited to dine with him a marquis who was one of the most valiant soldiers of the army of Conde. Wishing to honor his guest and the cause which he served, that of the French king, the English peer ordered his butler to bring him a bottle of fine wine 100 years of age, "a ray of sun shut in crystal."

He opened it carefully and offered a glass to the marquis, saying, "If you deem it worthy the honor, will you drink in this wine the health of the king?"

The marquis tasted the wine. "How do you like it?" asked the host. "Exquisite," replied the marquis. "Then," said Lord Beverly, "finish the glass. Only in a full glass can one drink the health of so great and so unfortunate a king." Without hesitation the marquis did as he was bidden. Only when the Englishman tasted the wine himself did he learn that what he had forced on his guest was castor oil.

BOSS KEELEY RESIGNS

Veteran Great Northern Employee Leaves Section He Has Worked for 31 years.

Is Pensioned for Life by the Road He Worked for So Long and Faithfully.

Everyone in Northern Minnesota knows the Keeleys—that is if they ever traveled any—for it is rather hard to take a trip without finding some member of the Keeley family running the train. The head of the Keeley family is Coleman Keeley, known to every railroad man in this section as "Boss" Keeley. For thirty one years he was section foreman at Euclid and last week sent in his resignation. Although nearly eighty years of age, he is still vigorous and has never lost his reputation of having the best section on the run.

The quality of his work speaks for itself in the fact that in the thirty one years there has been but one wreck on the strip of track over which Section Foreman Keeley held sway. He feels however that his home, which is the most attractive in the village has charms which outweigh the track for him during this warm summer weather and accordingly sent in his resignation which was accepted last week.

The Great Northern has instructed the agent at Euclid that Mr. Keeley is to draw a monthly check of forty dollars during his life time in acknowledgment of their appreciation of the thirty one years of faithful and efficient service which he has given them.

Mr. Keeley is not only a railroad man himself, but he has raised a family of railroad men. P. C. Keeley of Crookston has a passenger run on five and six. Mark Keeley is a freight conductor running out of Crookston. Peter Keeley is a conductor on the Soo running out of Thief River Falls, Tom Keeley is station agent at Northcote and George Keeley is yardmaster at Superior. Martin, the youngest son is the only son at home and he is operating his fathers fine farm adjacent to Euclid.

In point of continuos service as section foreman he holds the record on the entire Great Northern system, has grown up with the road, is personally acquainted with James J. Hill, and was one of the few who went in a body to the home of J. J. Hill about two years ago on the anniversary of the latters birthday, none of those attending having been in the employ of the Great Northern less than a quarter of a century. Only a few men on the Northern Division, Trainmaster S. H. Withey, and Thomas Stahl can claim kinship to him in years of service here with the Great Northern.

The Cost of a Field of Grain.

Few farmers know the labor cost of a field of grain. Few know whether the crop harvested pays the labor cost. It is less difficult than troublesome to keep a record, but if the farmer will carry a little book and make a memorandum of the hours actually spent in plowing, in preparing the seed bed, in sowing or planting, in cultivating, in harvesting—in fact a record, by hours, of all the time consumed by man, or man and team, he will discover a new light and begin to find remedies. An account should be kept with each field, as with an indivdual. Charge the field with the labor at a price the farmer would pay for it if he hired the work done. Each item of should be charged to the field. If a machine is broken, charge the expenses of repairs to the field in which the accident occurs. When the crop is taken off, credit the field with its value. The difference between the two footings will show where the loss or gain falls. Going further in book keeping, the cost of seed, to which the cost of cleaning etc., might be added and make a part of the record. When the farmers are making but 4 per cent on their investment in Minnesota, on a average, as shown by Experiment Station reports at University Farm, some making, others losing money, each should know for himself what he is doing, and if losing, apply the remedy and stop the leak of prosperity.

'Foley Kidney Pills Have Cured Me.'

The above is a quotation from a letter written by H. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind. "I contracted a severe case of kidney trouble. My back gave out and pained me. I seemed to have lost al strength and ambition; was bothered with dizzy spells, my head would swim and specks float before my eyes. I took Foley Kidney Pills regularly and am now perfectly well and feel like a new man. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me."—Sold by all Druggists.

Insurance Department Bulletin.

The Des Moines Fire Insurance Company, of Des Moines, Iowa, has withdrawn from this State. The Minnesota business will probably be reinsured in some other company.

The officers of the Minnesota Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Co., have returned to the treasury of the Company, the excess amount used for expenses, being the sum of $3,135.77 and have amended their by-laws and policies; have improved their methods of bookkeeping in accordance with the requirements of the Department and have licensed to do business.

The Midland Life Association of St. Paul, has been granted permission to reincorporate on the Legal Reserve plan.

The following companies have been licensed to do business in Minnesota:

Standard Marine Insurance Company, Ltd., Liverpool, England, Deposit Capital $230,000.00, Surplus to Policyholders, $371,270.39; licensed June 11, 1910.

Merchants Fire Assurance Corporation New York, N. Y., Capital $200,000.00, Surplus to Policyholders, $499,289.10, licensed June 20, 1910.

The people of Minnesota paid during the year 1909, in fire premiums the sum of $8,658,171.62, practically $4.00 for every inhabitant, and the losses paid during that year average $2.00 per capita. It is safe to say that the losses paid do not cover over two-thirds of the value of the property destroyed, so that the actual loss in this state last year was $3.00 per capita. The average loss per capita in Europe per year is about 33 cents. On this basis our fire loss last year would have been about $7000 000 00,—a saving of approximately three and one-half millions of dollars,

The per capita loss in Italy is about 12 cents a year, while for 1909 the average loss per capita in this country was $2 14 and in 1907 it was $2 51.

As we permit fire to destroy such an immense amount of property we are necessarily under a high expense to put out these fires and prevent general conflagrations. The cost of fire protection in such cities as St. Paul and Minneapolis, is annually about $2.00 per capita while the cost per capita in the large European cities varies from 8 cents to 30 cents.

The fire losses in Minnesota for May amounted to $825,000.00 as compared with $225,0000.00 in 1909. The losses in the United States were $15,177,000.00 as compared in May, 1909.

John A, Hartigan
Commissioner of Insurance.

Worth Considering.

A prominent firm, manufacturers of lightning rods, writes under date of May 27th, 1909, that a perfect lightning arrester on a wire fence is obtained by putting a galvanized wire about six feet long into the ground and moist earth and below the bottom of a fence post, connecting it with three wires on the fence. The connection can be made with the fence wires by wrapping in once or twice around each of three wires and then extending it into the moist earth.

Another prominent firm writes as follows: Wire fences are not in metallic connection with the earth and cannot well receive and discharge the stored electricity, and animals standing by such fence become the means of connecting the fence to earth, electrically, as posts are poorer conductors than animals, but if a ground wire is put on every fifth post no animals will be killed, as the wire is a better conductor than the animal. To put on this wire you can use a wagon box rod to punch a hole two feet deep, stapling the wire to the post so it touches the fence wires. This wire may stick an inch or two above the post. You can protect a pasture of 100 acres for 75 cents if you throw in one-half day of your time to do it.

Notice—If you want to sell your farm list it with Wm. Moeller, St. Hilaire, Minn., R. R. No. 1, box 9.

Crookston Agricultural School.

The Ladies' Dormitory and the Auditorium at the Crookston School of Agriculture are being rapidly pushed towards completion and everything is in favor of their being finished and equipped ready for the fall term. The Ladies' Dormitory has thirty-seven students rooms and will accomodate from seventy-five to one hundred girls. The building is to have parlor, bedroom, toilets and bathrooms fitted up with the most modern convenience and everything will be done to make the school life of the students pleasant as well as profitable. The Auditorium is to have a large Assembly Room 41 X 61 ft. with a balcony at the rear and a large stage at the front. This room will eat about 400 persons. This building also contains the Superintendent's offices, the Library, a Reading Room 24 X 34 ft., Shower Baths, Toilets and Locker Rooms, and a Gymnasium 41 X 61 ft. where the students may get physical training under the direction of a competent physical director.

The fall term opens October 3, 1910. Board and room will be $15.00 per month. Those wishing copies of the School Bulletin for 1910 and 1911 may receive them by addressing, Supt, Crookston School of Agriculture, Crookston, Minn.

Quite Badly Injured.

Warren Sheaf: Mrs. Andrew Melgaard was seriously injured in a runaway last Thursday at the farm. Mr. Melgaard had hitched up the team in order to drive to town and Mrs. Melgaard had entered the buggy and held the lines while Mr. Melgaard went over to the house to get some articles that they should bring along. In the meantime the frisky horses started to run and Mrs. Melgaard was unable to control them. She was thrown out of the buggy when the horses made a shary turn and landed in some farm machinery standing near the road. She sustained three broken ribs besides othes bruises on the body, and will not be able to be up and around again for several weeks.

Pays the Judge a Compliment.

The Verndale Sun in its write-up of the Fourth of July celebration held at that place, pays Judge Bishop, of this city, who delivered the oration of the day, the following compliment:

> The speaker of the day, Judge M. Bishop, of Thief River Falls, gave his hearers a most instructive and patriotic address and it is said by those who were fortunate enough to hear him that he got thru with a good deal in the short space of time that was given over to this part of the program. The Judge was highly complimented on his speech and has the thanks of the committee and citizens in general for his help in making this part of the day's program such a complete success.

Mrs. Guy Aubol Dead.

Thief River Falls friends will be greatly shocked to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. Guy Aubol at St. Luke's hospital in St. Paul last Thursday morning of blood poison after a very short illness.

Mr. Aubol, who is deputy revenue collector for this district, went to St. Paul two weeks ago and was accompanied by his wife, as he makes a stay of several weeks there once a year in submitting his final reports for the fiscal year just ended.

Mrs. Aubol purchased a pair of oxford ties which were a trifle loose and the rubbing caused a blister on her heel. She put on a pair of new silk stockings after the blister had broken, and unfortunately they had never been washed, and blood poisoning set in. She was taken to St. Luke's hospital and died a few days later.

Feed Grain to Live Stock.

The Experiment Station at St. Anthony Park, by its attention to the dairy cow, as well as to all other animals on University Farm, shows that stock provides the best market for Minnesota grain. With the dairy cow there is an abundance of skim milk and buttermilk for calves, pigs and poultry. Cattle, sheep, hogs, horses and poultry return to the soil fertility taken in the production of grain. No less grain may be raised but more will be sold in butter eggs, beef, pork and mutton. That means more money for the farmer than selling grain at the elevator. The acreage may be shorter but the yield will be larger, involving less labor. The methods of dairying and stock raising at University farm, if faithfully followed by the farmers generally, will soon pay the mortgages.

HUNT HAS A SCHEME

Says That the Thief River Falls and Roosevelt Line Can Be Built.

Says That Canadian Capital Stands Ready to Furnish Money.

Roosevelt, Minn. July 5 1910.

To the Editor of the Thief River Falls News.

After a long silence of the press, and a strenuous effort and unwavering confidence in the construction of the "Minnesota Air Line Railway I again appeal to the honest and true minded and thinking element of the Eastern Roseau Co, Eastern Marshall Co. to give one moment of their valued time. I have secured a propsition from British capitalists, of Montreal Can. that they can furnish the capital to construct our road, that they can furnish bonds underwritten by a Securities Co. of capitalists, which is well and favorble known without any advance charges, whatever, on certain conditions.

Now if the people of Thief Rivef Falls, Eastern Marshall Co., Eastern Roseau Co. are willing to consider this proposition which is up to them. I am willing to have a representative of this Securities Co. of Montreal, to make a visit over the line with our representative, and show the people the confidence they have in pushing the construction of this line to an overwhelming success, from Thief River Falls, to Roosevelt Zippel Bay with terminals at Warroad. Should this proposition meet with favor, I would call meetings along the line, and each end of the line correspond with the Securities Co. of Montreal and aid in bringing this movement to a speedy and successful conclusion.

Some Tax Levies.

In 1902, according to the records in the office of State Auditor S. G. Iverson at St. Paul, $9,556.43 was levied in Red Lake county for revenue purposes solely. This was to pay the ordinary expenses of the county. In 1909, $18,723.62; twice as much, was levied for the same purpose in this county. In addition to this the county revenue fund is overdrawn to the large amount of $12,654.90. This last sum represents unpaid warrants issued when there is no cash in the county treasury with which to pay them. Sound sense would dictate that expenses be cut down when the county revenue fund is in such a horrible condition. Seven years ago the expense of running the county business was so little less than what it should be now, that the difference is not worth mentioning. A study of the state auditor's figures shows that the expense of conducting the county business has been increasing of late years by leaps and bounds. There is nothing to show for this and no explanation is offered by the precious crowd, the third estate, which, behind the throne, directs the expenditures and pull the strings which move automatons at Red Lake Falls. What connection these stupendous expenditures have with new barns and new houses and pianos and improved farms and roads and bridges and indirect gifts to the hangers-on does not appear. But one thing is most evident and settled. The heavy taxes in Red Lake county and the burden of taxation, which is the highest in the state, has its source in the extravagance, the carelessness and the incompetency of those who administer affairs at the county seat.

Source of Information.

Every taxpayer has free access to the records of the county. These are found at the county seat and at the office of the state auditor at St. Paul. All the information which is being presented in connection with the discussion of the organization of Pennington is secured in these places. The figures can be proven correct or false by anyone caring to take the time to look the matter up. Explanations offered to refute any of the statements made are to be read with care and considered in the case with the same interest and attention given to the other side. They should also be considered in connection with the history of events in Red Lake county and particularly with the actions of those directly and indirectly associated with county matters for the last few years.

Beltrami county was saved from bankruptcy last year by the state's stepping in and taking control of her business and finances. Some of her officials were deposed, and for various reasons were not dealt with too severely. Itasca had a similiar experience, only a little more pronounced. That the same result will take place in Red Lake is not questioned by intelligent people; it is not a matter of doubt. The conditions in Beltrami county two years ago this date were not worse, not nearly so bad, as they are in Red Lake county. This county has now the highest average rate of taxation in the whole state and this in spite of the fact that she is one of the richest counties in the commonwealth, has splendid soil, intelligent, hard-working settlers, many creameries, factories, mills, railways and other sources of wealth. The conditions here are ripe for the results which took place in Beltrami and that they will transpire is as certain as the proposition that like produces like.

The terrible disgrace of such a consummation would be a blow from the which the county would recover in a decade. Better, far, to organize Pennington and cut loose forever from the south end, with which the new county has nothing commonin any manner.

A Candidate for Judge.

Ben Christienson was down to Red Lake Falls the first of the week and filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of judge of probate. Judge Richardson is undecided as to whether or not he will again be a candidate, and if he does not enter the field it is quite likely that Mr. Christienson will secure the nomination without opposition.

The White Earth Indians are coming to Thief River Falls Sudday and play a game with the local team. Indian Police Here.

N. J. Sero and J. W. Brogan, two special policemen of the Indian department who work under the direction of "Pussyfoot" Johnson, spent Tuesday in Thief River Falls investigating the sale of liquors to Indians. When seen by a representative of the NEWS they stated that they had nothing to give out for publication, but intimated that the number of saloons in Thief River Falls would be reduced to ten. As yet they have been unable to prevent the sale of liquor to the Indians of the White Earth, but state that arrests are being made every week and that they hope in the near future to prevent the introduction of liquor on the reservation.

The saloon at Lambert was visited on Monday by the agents and all of the liquor destroyed. From Thief River Falls they went to Moorhead and it is rumored that all of the saloons in that city are to be closed, as it is from that city the blind pigs on the White Earth reservation are getting their supply.

Both the quality and quantity of the fruit from the average home garden strawberry bed could be greatly improved were the number of plants allowed to set for bearing reduced by half or more. This would give the plants remaining more room, more light, more fertility to draw on and would thus greatly increase their thriftiness and bearing capacity. Some of the best yields of strawberries on record have been made by beds in which the plants were set closely in the original bed, but allowed to send out no runners whatever, being cultivated according to the hill system, as it is usually known. It is too late now to help beds that are ready to bear, but the bed set this spring for fruiting next year can be so handled as to prevent this crowding and stunting of the plants, while beds that are bearing their first crop this season can be so thinned after the bed is renovated as to bring about the right conditions for next season. If the row system is to be followed in the new bed no more new plants should be allowed to take root than will comfortably fill the row, each plant being allowed a space of seven or eight inches square.

Roses seem to appreciate an evening bath on hot days as well as do men and animals. In addition to supplying the bushes with needed moisture, the applying of the shower bath under good pressure will keep the leaves and flowers free from most of the slugs, red spiders and aphides which attack them.

A set of muley hames, with the projections above the collar minus, and an extra short doubletree should be in the equipment of every orchardist. They will make possible more thorough cultivation near the trees and fewer injuries to them.

Fifty dollars' worth of paint judiciously applied will often add five times that amount to the value of the premises in case one wishes to sell. And it's not a bad idea to get some of this paint on before the folks who have been living in the house move out.

A work shirt made of black or other dark stuff is much warmer when worn in the sunshine than lighter colored shirts of the same weight for the reason that instead of reflecting the rays of the sun it absorbs them, thereby greatly increasing the heat. It is true that the black shirt doesn't show the dirt as do shirts of lighter color, but this is the only thing that can be said in its favor.

One who has had extensive experience in the matter of ivy poisoning recommends a wash made by adding ten or twelve drops of carbolic acid to an ounce of distilled or rain water. Another who has also had experience suggests a paste made by moistening sifted wood ashes with water and applying to the affected parts. Both the remedies are cheap and can be easily tested and compared.

Recently a man in the southwest has sought to get rich without working by selling at 50 cents a pound the seed grain of what he claimed was California wheat, which, he declared, would yield from 200 to 400 bushels per acre. The agricultural department has investigated this claim and found that the seed in question is of a variety of sorghum known as shallu, which was tested several years ago and found to be only half as productive as Kaffir corn.

One has a greater respect for the Philippine islands commercially when he realizes that the thirty-seven provinces which constitute the group produced 563,000,000 pounds of hulled rice in the year 1908 and last year increased this total to 960,000,000 pounds, a part of the increase being due to more complete returns. While the Filipino is usually rated by Americans as of a low order of intelligence, it is worthy of note that the system of terrace irrigation devised by the little brown man generations ago for the culture of rice is now rated as one of the marvels of agricultural history.

Crop statistics are sometimes interesting in that they shed side lights on fundamental agricultural conditions. To illustrate the point, the average yield per acre of winter wheat for the ten year period 1900-1909 was 14.3 bushels per acre. For the preceding decade it was 12.9 bushels. This shows an increase of 1.4 bushels per acre for the later period. In both instances, however, the average yield is so low that it pays a mere pittance in interest on money invested after cost of production, taxes, etc., have been paid. An increase in yield per acre means little unless it stands for a better system of farm management which keeps in view a maintenance of the fertility of the soil.

If a measure which was introduced in the recent session of the New York legislature eventually becomes a law commission merchants of that state will have to put up a bond of $5,000 each as a guarantee of square dealing with customers over the state who may have no assurance of their integrity beyond claims made in newspaper advertisements or seductive circulars. Should the law pass it will mean that to start in the commission or jobbing business or continue in it a $12.95 typewriter, a batch of cheap stationery and a few bunches of penny stamped envelopes will no longer suffice. This law will put the shark and shyster out of business. To cure these commission swindles, which are country wide, a federal law of similar character should be enacted.

Dairy experts from the New York State School of Agriculture and officials of the Erie railroad took a very effective method of spreading the gospel of better dairying when they ran a "milk production" special over that road in April of this year. Forty-five minute stops were made at twenty-one towns, thirty minute lectures on the one subject of milk production being followed by a fifteen minutes' demonstration of a profitable and unprofitable type of dairy cow, the first being a Holstein with a record of 427 pounds of butter fat per year, while the other on but a trifle less feed made but 107 pounds of butter in the same period. In the lectures the fact was emphasized that to keep in business the dairyman must, in view of present high prices of feed, either receive more for his product or reduce in some way the cost of its production, which was shown could be effected in three ways—by the more economical feeding of home grown feeds (grain, clover, alfalfa, silage and beets), by weeding out the boarder cows by the use of the Babcock test and by grading up the dairy herd by the continuous use of a pure bred bull of a single dairy breed. Four thousand three hundred and twenty-one people attended the lectures and manifested an unusual interest in the subject of better dairying.

Lots of Water Coming.

Someone has figured out the amount of water that will flow down the Thief River this week from Mud lake when the dredge reaches that body of water and lowers its surface one and one half feet. The amount is given as follows: 456,799,200 cubic feet of water, or 3,425,994,000 gallons, or 68,519,880 barrels. Whether this is going to cause any flood on the Thief River is not known, but it certainly will make things lively for a few days.

SWEDEN.

+ + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + +

The Carl Friberg scandal has been the talk of the week in Stockholm. His swindlings amount to almost 100,000 crowns and many poor people have been caught in his traps, which were cleverly set for Swedes in America as well as in Sweden. He was arrested in London the other day and will be brought back to Sweden for trial. Friberg is also wanted in America, where he has conducted a series of swindles. He was at one time connected with a Swedish newspaper in Duluth, where for a time he enjoyed the confidence of his countrymen. Of a sudden he shook the American dust from his feet and set out for Sweden, where strangely enough he succeeded in gaining the confidence of United States Consul Adams and became secretary at the American consulate. Using the American consulate's stationery he soon began to do business, securing one sum after another from Swedish-Americans, who had died and left sums of money to be sent to their relatives in Sweden. They, of course, trusted him, as he was the secretary at the American consulate. In one instance he had stolen 1,000 crowns outright from the Andrew Andersson estate in White Rock, S. D. The money was sent to the American consulate to be delivered to Andersson's relatives in Sweden. Carl Friberg offered to handle the matter and, sure enough, he did. He stole the money. This is only one instance out of perhaps fifty where he has secured money from estates in America that were sent to relatives in Sweden through the American consulate. He lived high and insisted on being addressed as the consul general. He will soon be placed within the dark walls of "Landholmen" and when he has served his term he will be ready for the grave. "The way of the transgressor is hard," to say the least.

King Gustaf is at present at Ulricehamn sanitarium, where he will remain for at least two weeks. His health is not good. On the way to Ulricehamn the king paid a visit to Dala, where he was for a brief time the guest of Baron Nils Posse. In Kungslena he viewed the monument which is under course of construction there on the historic battlefield of 1210. The king is under the very best of medical care, but it is persistently rumored that his health is failing instead of improving. At any rate the king is not planning to assume active charge of the government for some time to come.

At this time of the year there are hundreds of travelers and tourists passing through Stockholm on their way to the fiords and North cape of Norway, the land of the midnight sun. St. Petersburg and Moscow are now but thirty hours from Stockholm by boat and numerous parties bound for the Russian cities stop on the way and see the magnificent palace and the wonderful museums of Stockholm. Norway receives the largest percentage of the tourist travel, however.

There are 7,000,000 crowns invested in automobiles in Stockholm at present. That is 700 autos are valued at this amount. The so called "morning boats"—small launches—are valued at about 2,000,000 crowns. There are over a thousand Stockholmians who use these small boats coming and going from Stockholm to their villas in the Malaren.

Over 12,500,000 crowns' worth of lingon berries were exported to Germany from Sweden last year. The lingon berry crop will not be as large this year as last, according to various reports from different parts of the country. It has been an exceedingly dry season and that has, of course, injured the berries.

The body of Ove Gude, Norway's minister to the United States, who died suddenly in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., on the evening of July 2, where he had established himself and family at a cottage for the summer, was taken to Washington, where the body was cremated and the ashes taken by his family to New York for shipment on the Kaiser II., which left last Tuesday. It is understood that the ashes will be deposited in the family vault at Christiania, Mr. Gude's former home. Minister Gude came to Washington as the representative of the Norwegian government on April 23, 1908. Previously he had been minister of Sweden and Norway at Copenhagen and was stationed at that post at the time Norway severed her connection from Sweden. Later he was made Norwegian minister at Berlin, whence he came to Washington. Minister Gude, was a scholarly man. He spoke eight languages fluently and had been educated in Germany, England and France. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mlle. Ingeborg and Mlle. Sigrid Gude. He was also a talented musician and a graduate of the Conservatory of Music in Paris. Gude was the son of one of Norway's famous men, Gude, the great landscape painter, who lies buried at Christiania beside two other distinguished Norwegians, Ibsen and Bjornson.

His majesty, King Haakon, returned from his father-in-law's funeral the other day and soon afterwards startled the country by taking a long submarine cruise in the Kobben, which was at the time making experiments for parliament and the ministers. The king and his party were on a battleship and he went down to make a personal visit and inspection on board the submarine, when suddenly, at his command, the tower was closed and the vessel disappeared beneath the surface. The king stayed below for half an hour and it is reported that he is the first reigning monarch who has ever gone down with a submarine boat. It now remains for him to fly in an aeroplane, a feat which has not yet been accomplished in Norwegian latitudes.

Tropical heat, with the thermometer at 35 degrees centigrade in the shade, has been the order for the last fourteen days all over the entire country, except possibly in the extreme northern sections. The melting of the snow in the mountains has caused all rivers and lakes to swell and in certain localities great damage has been done by the floods, which have surpassed the high water marks of the last thirty-five or forty years. Tremendous rafts of logs have broken loose and involved much expense in the regathering and a few thousand logs went down the Sarpfoss, the biggest waterfall in Norway, and out to the sea.

The yachting season has set in and all kinds of interest is evinced by enthusiastic yachtsmen. Johan Anker is the name in yachting circles which looms high at present. He is to Norway what Herreshoff is to America. Anker is the son of a rich man and he has had a thorough schooling as a yacht builder and naval architect. He has his own boat building establishment where the most beautiful craft are created in the winter months.

When Norway participated in the Olympian games in London it entailed an expenditure of about 24,000 crowns. The committee was unable to pay the expenses and now they have had to borrow money to cover the deficiency. The committee has found backers, however, in the persons of Captain Sverre, John Dahl and Goldsmith Frisch.

The Norwegian Packing company is the name of a new firm which has recently been organized in Bodo. No foreign capital is interested, the company consisting entirely of Norwegians. The company starts out in good hands and contemplates a large and successful herring business.

"Politiken," the leading Copenhagen paper, characterizes Bergen, Stavanger and Drammen as "Swedish provincial villages" in a recent article. The slur, of course, will not pass without a vigorous reply from the Christiania papers.

The Scandinavian Aerodrome company is the name of a new business institution which has recently been organized in Copenhagen with a capital of 60,000 crowns. The shares are pretty evenly divided between Swedes, Norwegians and Danes and the new institution will operate in Amager, where a Scandinavian flying school will be started and where everything that appertains to the flying industry will be practiced.

A young lady in Copenhagen was the victim of a peculiar accident the other day, while she was making a trip on a bicycle through the Kohave forest. While riding along the road she encountered a rooster, who became tangled up in the front wheel of the bicycle, throwing the young woman with such violence against the hard roadbed that she crushed her skull and had several ribs broken.

There is a trout farm at Hornslet station, which is doing an excellent business. The owner sends all his trout in a tank, which is freely supplied with oxygen, to Berlin, where he gets 50 cents a pound for them. There will be a number of trout farms started in the near future and it is believed that they can all do well.

Copenhagen is full of German, English and American tourists at present. They are there from all parts of the world, for that matter, and all the hotels and restaurants are doing a land office business.

POLITICAL NEWS.

The platform adopted by South Dakota Republicans declares renewed allegiance to the Roosevelt policies; commends President Taft insofar as he has been loyal to those policies; declares the new tariff law should be revised immediately; the Payne tariff law is declared a step in the right direction, but should have made many reductions; declares for a national physical valuation of railroads; for a graduated income tax; for a federal system of regulating corporations; for conservation of national resources; the new rules in the national house of representatives are commended, and still further modifications are favored to curb the power of the speaker. The recall and other state reform measures are declared for.

Theodore Roosevelt made it clear, not by direct statement, but by implication so strong that it admits of no misinterpretation, that he will support Representative Miles Poindexter in his fight for a seat in the United States senate from the state of Washington. In endorsing Poindexter Colonel Roosevelt places himself squarely in opposition to Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, whom Mr. Poindexter has opposed from first to last.

Making good his promise to serve as a free lance in the campaign in Nebraska, W. J. Bryan, in a declaration, draws the line between the faithful and the unfaithful in the Democratic ranks of the state and as good as reads out of the party nine Democratic senators who have antagonized him in his efforts to secure the adoption of the initiative and referendum as an opening for the adoption of county option.

"If the published report is true Mr. Roosevelt has been badly led astray by the deception of people who claim to be his friends," said R. A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, commenting on dispatches from Oyster Bay that Mr. Roosevelt intends to endorse the senatorial candidacy of Representative Miles Poindexter of Washington, an insurgent and an outspoken critic of Secretary Ballinger.

By an overwhelming majority Governor Jared Y. Sanders was declared the choice of both houses of the Louisiana general assembly for the seat in the United States senate left vacant by the recent death of Senator McEnery.

Politicians in Washington are firmly convinced that Theodore Roosevelt will be pretty active in the coming congressional campaign. Already he has made two engagements and is expected to make many others.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Jack Johnson, the big negro, defeated Jim Jeffries in the fifteenth round of a one sided battle at Reno, Nev., in the presence of 20,000 people. Jeffries failed to show his old time snap and dash and he lacked speed and staying qualities. After the tenth round it was apparent that Johnson was getting the better of the contest and toward the end of the fight he had everything his own way. While Jeffries landed many blows they lacked force and had no effect on Johnson. After the twelfth round Jeffries appeared tired and slow, but he continued to come right up to his opponent and take all the punishment given him. The knockout came near the end of the fifteenth round, after Jeffries had been floored several times, but managed to get to his feet.

Moving pictures of the Johnson-Jeffries fight will be prohibited in many of the larger cities of the country through fear of the renewal of race bitterness, as well as a possible lowering of the moral tone of the people. Following the lead of Washington many cities have prohibited the exhibition of moving pictures of the fight.

The four days' state Christian Endeavor meeting at Mankato closed with the election of the following officers for the ensuing year:

By a resolution passed the selection of the city in which to hold next year's convention was left with the executive committee.

Duluth is making a decided effort to land it and several other cities have extended invitations. The meeting was closed by an eloquent lecture by Field Secretary Walter D. Howell of St. Paul. The meetings throughout the convention were well attended.

CARRIES OUT HIS THREAT

Chris Engle Commits Suicide at St. Paul.

Chris Engle of St. Paul, who was at one time suspected of a part in the midnight assault upon Mrs. George T. Harris at the Fort Snelling hotel, has made good his threat to the police that he would kill himself. He put a bullet into his brain, dying some hours later.

While detained at the Central police station about May 20 last, Engle told one of the detectives that all he wanted when he got out of there was money enough to buy a revolver and kill himself.

Engle was fifty-seven years old and had been employed for twenty years as a hostler around Fort Snelling. He had been a heavy drinker and was subject to fits of depression.

He was arrested after the attack on Mrs. George T. Harris and Mrs. Mary Brose, her sister, but proved an alibi to the satisfaction of the police, who liberated him.

Nearing Quarter-Million Mark.

According to the estimate of the R. L. Polk Directory company, based upon the names in the new city directory, now in press, St. Paul has a population of 240,015. This figure, according to the directory experts, will correspond very closely with that of the government census completed about the same time.

Boy's Neck Broken by Fall.

William Riley, eighteen years old, son of John Riley, a farmer living near Lake Crystal, broke his neck and died almost instantly. He and his father undertook to recover a swarm of bees which had lodged in a tree. The lad climbed the tree, but a limb broke and he fell to the ground.

Minnesota Educator Dead.

Samuel B. Green, dean of the newly organized State School of Forestry, died suddenly in the state forest reserve at Lake Itasca, while working with a body of students, teaching them experiment work in forestry. Apoplexy was the cause of Dean Green's death.

Falls to Her Death.

Mrs. Marie Read of West Duluth died from the effects of injuries sustained from falling down a flight of stairs. She was seventy-five years of age.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The state board of health has begun a crusade against the public drinking cup and placards have been sent throughout the state telling of the dangers. The cards will be placed in public places, such as schools, town halls and courthouses. The practice of using a public drinking cup is described as unsanitary and dangerous, because of the contagious and infectious diseases that may be communicated by their use.

Professor C. B. Bull of the state agricultural school, St. Anthony Park, has issued a circular to farmers, recommending the planting of fodder corn as a hay substitute. The hay crop of Minnesota, Professor Bull says, will not exceed 50 per cent of a crop and it will be possible for farmers to meet a demand for feed and high prices that seem probable by putting in fodder corn now.

No passes of any kind whatever will be given by the board of managers of the Minnesota state fair for the exhibition which begins Sept. 5 and ends Sept. 10. In accordance with a resolution adopted by the State Agricultural society at its last annual meeting absolutely every one who enters the grounds will have to pay the entrance fee.

The Twin City and Lake Superior Electric line, which is to connect Minneapolis and Duluth, will have its terminus in the Midway district, according to plans now being worked out. It is the purpose of the company to put the road under construction at a rate that should insure its completion within eighteen months.

Foley, Welch & Stewart, the St. Paul railroad contractors, have been awarded the contract for constructing the seventy miles of road from Virginia to Duluth that will give the Canadian Northern road an entrance at the Head of the Lakes. The firm expects to start grading soon.

The stage of water in the Mississippi river is the lowest in years. Some of the Minneapolis saw mills are closed down for lack of logs and the flour mills are using steam as auxiliary to the water power.

Grasshoppers are still abundant and destructive around Foxhome. Hopperdozers are being used by farmers and the state entomologist is in the field trying experiments with a poisonous spray.

Graphite of high quality has been discovered on the Cuyuna iron range. It is reported that the mineral exists in commercial quantities and the discovery is therefore important.

The next annual tournament of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association will be held at Ada.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Stillwater was visited by a $30,000 fire and it was lucky that it was not much more destructive. A hard fight by regular and several hundred volunteer firemen saved the flames from sweeping away a number of other important structures in the business section of the city.

Esger Fanders, the five-year-old daughter of Frank Fanders, a farmer living eleven miles south of St. Cloud, was fatally burned while playing with matches and firecrackers. The child was severely burned about the head and body. She died five hours after the accident.

Chris Engle, who was at one time suspected of a part in the midnight assault upon Mrs. George T. Harris at the Fort Snelling hotel, St. Paul, has made good his threat to the police that he would kill himself. He put a bullet into his head and died twelve hours later.

Lester G. Toble, aged thirty-five, was drowned in the lake at Duluth off the shore of Minnesota point. He swam out about 300 feet and was caught in an eddy. Lifesavers arrived too late to save him.

John L. Pratt of St. Paul, real estate and tax agent for the Chicago Great Western railroad, was killed at Chicago when an automobile in which he was riding was struck by a street car.

James Whieka's new livery barn at Silver Lake, near Hutchinson, was destroyed by fire and fifteen horses cremated.

Ammonia fumes caused the death of Pyron Ide, aged thirty-five, night watchman for the St. Paul Gas Light company.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Dr. Henry C. Grover of Rushford is dead of old age. He was a member of the legislature in 1879 and was known all over Southern Minnesota, where he had been in active practice forty years. He was a surgeon in the Civil war, being in one of the Indiana companies.

The fight at Reno, Nev., proved too much for Olaf Olson of St. Paul, sixty years old. While discussing it on the street he fell suddenly and died a moment later. Death was caused by heart failure.

Mrs. Mary A. Hengen, who was born in a cabin in old St. Anthony in 1854, is dead at Minneapolis. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gersdorf, pioneer settlers in St. Anthony.

Thomas W. Van Vleck, aged seventy-four, a veteran of the Civil war, died suddenly at Sauk Center.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

WOMAN MURDERER RELEASED

Charity Worker Secures Freedom for Life Prisoner in the Stillwater Penitentiary.

About three years ago Myra Jane Williams, a friendless girl serving a life sentence in Stillwater penitentiary, expressed to the prison evangelist a desire to have some friend to write to. The prison preacher got her into correspondence with the wife of a charity worker in Salt Lake City whom he knew and this new friend, Mrs. E. T. Mackey, made a plea for the girl before the state pardon board which secured her release. Mrs. Mackey promised the board that she would take the girl into her own home and see that she would be well taken care of.

Myra Williams, according to the story Mrs. Mackey told the board, had not had a home since she was less than three years old. While quite young she married a man whose reputation was not good. They drifted to Brainerd and Williams forced his wife to an improper life. She had a baby and one night when she had been out drinking with three or four men and was coming home with them she tossed the child into the Mississippi as they were crossing the bridge. She was tried and given a life sentence for murder in the first degree.

At the prison she had a good record, but was somewhat despondent.

COULD NOT BE DEPORTED

Alleged Italian Murderer Now a Free Man.

Pasquale Choviotto, an Italian, fifty-three years of age, who is under sentence for twenty years' imprisonment in Italy for the alleged murder of a neighbor, but who escaped to this country, is a free man.

He was arrested at Duluth recently, but the Italian authorities refused to stand the cost of extradition and urged the immigration department at Washington to deport him as an undesirable citizen. Choviotto had been in America more than three years, however, and could not be deported.

TRYING TO RECOVER CORPSE

Italian Loses Life as Result of Another Tragedy.

Matino Gerimutfos, aged twenty-seven, an Italian railroad laborer of Chicago Heights, Ill., lost his life at Prior Lake, this state, while endeavoring to recover by diving the body of Irvin Arndt, seventeen years of age, son of Postmaster A. F. Arndt, who was drowned 300 yards from shore in Carr lake before the gaze of many persons.

The diver's body was recovered imbedded in mud. He had never come to the top after his third dive to locate the drowned boy.

WOMAN IS BURNED TO DEATH

Caught in Blazing House While Asleep and Unable to Escape.

Alice Spaulding was burned to death and five other persons narrowly escaped with their lives when the home of Arthur Spaulding, near Rushmore, was destroyed by fire.

Sleeping in the house in addition to the woman were Mr. Spaulding, his wife and Dr. Rose Smith and two children of Minneapolis.

The children, after being overcome by smoke, were thrown from a window. Firecrackers are supposed to have been the cause of the blaze.

DENOUNCE PRIZE FIGHTING

St. Paul Ministers Also Object to Pictures of Reno Battle.

Denunciation of prize fighting in general and unswerving opposition to the presentation of moving pictures showing the recent Jeffries-Johnson contest at Reno were proclaimed from St. Paul pulpits, including that of St. James' African church, while many of the congregations adopted resolutions which will be sent to Governor Eberhart and Mayor Keller insisting that pictorial reproductions of the fight should not be allowed in the state or city.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd., 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

Announcement.

I hereby announce my candidacy as a candidate for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st senatorial district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all my efforts to secure the re-districting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'NEILL.

John Lind again announces that he will not accept the Democratic nomination for governor. It looks as if John means it.

Now we know what was the matter with Halley's comet. It couldn't "come back."

Frank Day did not spend as much time fishing at Gull Lake as he had intended. No doubt he is worried over the prospects of Gov. Eberhart succeeding himself.

It is alleged by a sailor who claims to have climbed Mount McKinley that he found on the summit a flag which was left there by Dr. Cook. We suspect that the sailor has written an article which he wishes to have published in some magazine.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette says that it is going to take the part of the farmers in county division fight. The farmers had better be on the lookout. If King takes their part about all they will have left will be their ditch taxes.

The proclamation of Gov. Eberhart calling for a vote upon the proposition to create Pennington county is published in this issue of the NEWS. The legal description of the new county together with the names and residence of the board of county commissioners are given in the notice.

The committee selected to manage the Republican campaign in this state is—taken as a whole—a very strong one. Ed Smith, of Minneapolis, who is to be chairman, is a man possessing plenty of ability, but his legislative record is bad and open to attack. J. A. O. Preus, who still will be secretary, is a good clean young man and should have been made chairman as he has the ability and knows the game. The selection of A. D. Stephens, of Crookston, as one of the members of the committee at large, will be a positive damage to Gov. Eberhart in this section of the state.

According to the Red Lake Falls Gazette rigid economy was practiced by Red Lake county when it was first organized and that is the reason the tax rate is higher now than it was in former years. But the Gazette adds, "it may not have been practical economy." The down river paper believes that more money should be raised by taxation to build roads, bridges, etc., as it brings prosperity to the farmers. The Gazette is a great friend of farmers and why should it not be? The farmers—through their representatives on the county board—are paying the Gazette about $1,500 more for printing this year than was necessary. Of course the farmers could have built a few miles of good road with that $1,500, but they take more enjoyment perhaps in knowing that Brother King is able to live in St. Paul in a manner that is in keeping with the dignified position he holds as Red Lake county's member of Frank Day's kitchen cabinet.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is the only emulsion imitated. The reason is plain—it's the best. Insist upon having Scott's—it's the world's standard flesh and strength builder.

ALL DRUGGISTS

LINDQUIST

Prosperity in Red Lake county, unlike the biblical moisture which falls on the just and unjust alike is fickle with her favors hereabouts. Sometimes saints receive her kind attentions; and again sinners bask in the sunshine of her smiles. Whether providence or the "push" down river control her actions in old Red Lake cannot be exactly determined. However, a charitable view of a specific case, wherein a Bray township farmer leaped from a hardworking farmer to wealth in three short years, compels the ordinary observer to believe that "scientific farming" methods are the cause of County Commissioner C. A. Lindquist's sudden advance got rich-quick class; and that neither providence nor down river philanthropists had anything to do with his startling prosperity.

In a county famous for its up-to date farmers, it is not to be wondered at that Mr. Lindquist should also join the procession and by adopting modern methods of "scientific" farming operations, succeed in passing his steady going neighbors in the race for comfort and wealth.

It is also known that this successful farmer will pardon the personal allusion in this article. His generosity to Red Lake county, particularly the south half, will prompt him to second the proposition of informing his less fortunate friends as to the method of farming, whereby a man can become comfortable in the short term of three years on a Red Lake county farm. To be brief, Mr. Lindquist assumed the position of chairman of the board of county commissioners on Jan. 1, 1907. Since that time, by an approved system of financial management, by saving his earnings, by making hay while the sun shines, and by divers other secret methods not yet divulged but just bursting with significance, Mr. Lindquist has become what is known as a very prosperous farmer. Since Jan. 1 1907, according to county record he has paid off a mortgage on his property, something which takes the unscientific farmer half a lifetime; has erected the best house in the town of Bray a town noted for its costly homes; has bought a piano and a lot of new furniture; has secured a driving team and a new surrey, new farm implements, a windmill and feedmill and barn; in short, has broken out all over his house and farm and himself with the worst case of Rockfelleritis which ever afflicted a plain tiller of the soil. Of course, envious people in Pennington county who know nothing of science on a farm and science of finance at Red Lake Falls claim that he did not make all his wealth by ordinary farming; while his more generous friends down stream give him full credit for his extreme shrewdness and say that any farmer on the county board who will be "good" can get rich quickly, if he is a good financier and can see through the rounds of a ladder.

The truth of the matter is that Capitalist-Farmer Lindquist has all the other scientific farmers in the county backed up into a corner and squealing for mercy, when it comes to acquiring wealth in three short years from a couple of quarter sections of Red Lake soil. The unscientific farmers in Pennington and unbusiness like men in St. Hilaire and Thief River should promptly inquire of Mr. Lindquist why he, a public servant on a salary less than $200 a year, can afford to become so plainly prosperous in three years, in the face of the fact that Red Lake county has the highest average rate of taxes in the state of Minnesota. They should know what relation exists between County Commissioner Lindquist's prosperity, the high rate of taxes and his overwhelming devotion to the men in hiding down the river. They might also inquire, while they are about it, why the two north members of the board have never been favored by this fickle goodness of good things, why she has so persistently hovered about Charles A. Lindquist and has failed to embarrass Commissioners Aubol and Johnson and their predecessors with her favors. Messrs. Engelstad, Gustafson and that host of supposedly scientific farmers who honor Red Lake county with their efforts, should visit Bray and sit at the feet of this master farmer, should dig deep into his system of finance and learn how to pay mortgages and get rich in three short years off an ordinary farm in Red Lake county farm.

The only sad feature of this wonderful and interesting story is that Pennington county will mean the close of a whole lot of "Scientific farming" which for years past has been loading the farmers and commercial interests of the county with increasing taxes and with nothing to show for the burden.

Road and Bridge.

How long will the farmers of the county continue building roads and bridges for the people in the southern part of Red Lake county?

Take the town of Rocksbury as a good sample of a northern town and note what this town has paid into the county treasury for the building of roads in three years past, and then notice what the county commissioners have given the town back when they distributed the road and bridge tax. Of course, it must be kept in mind that the commissioners have the sole power of distribution of this tax and that is the intention of the law that they distribute it fairly and equitably throughout the county. The assessed valuation of Rocksbury for 1909 was $130,462, and it was less than this the two proceeding years. The county rate of tax for roads and bridges is two mills on the dollar. This compels Rocksbury to pay in $260 per year and a little less than $780 in the past three years. During this period the county commissioners have returned to this town only the following amounts: In 1908, $275; in 1909, $200; and in 1910 not one cent to date. Only $475 was spent on the roads of Rocksbury by the county, while it got about $780 from the farmers in this rich town. The balance to which the town is entitled is somewhere in the south end in a bridge or road—or somewhere else, very likely somewhere else.

Note how the commissioners treated a south end town. Take Poplar River, the richest town in the south end, and the one which should have had the least help, if the commissioners were seeking to aid those which required their assistance most. This town has a valuation of $172,020 and a two mill tax for roads would raise $344 yearly. In three years it would be taxed a little less than $1,032. During the years 1908, 1910 it received from the givers of all good gifts in Red Lake the sum of $2,518.94. The difference, $1,486.94, came out of the pockets of the farmers and business men of Pennington county. This comparison could be continued indefinitely and with the same results. Any person in the county can look up the records, and when they multiply this case mentioned by the number of towns in the county, and this by the number of years this kind of treatment has been meted out to the north end, then it is easy to understand why Red Lake Falls village has received almost twice as much from this fund in the last six years as all of the towns in Pennington county put together have received. Some persons would describe this kind of official action by names which would not appear proper in print. This deliberate attempt to compel the county of Pennington to build all the roads in the south half and to continue the process year in and year out has reached a climax. Next fall the pilfered pockets of the people in the north half will cease supplying funds for roads and bridges and other improvements noted in various parts of the south. When Pennington county is organized these farmers will have their taxes under the control of themselves and their highways will be the best in the state.

Laws Governing Election.

Candidates at the primary election have two months yet in which to file. The general election will be held this year on November 8. The primary election must be held on Tuesday, seven weeks preceding the general election, which is September 20. Candidates must file with the secretary of state or county auditor as the case may be, at least 20 days before the primary election which would make Tuesday, August 30, the last day for filing says the Princeton Union.

When the candidate is to be voted for in more than one county the filing must be made with the secretary of state at the state capital in St Paul, and with the county auditor if to be voted for in a single county only.

If the office be one for which pecunary compensation is provided the filing fee is fixed at $20, except in case of candidates for the legislature who shall pay $10 only, either to the secretary of state or the county auditor. Candidates for county commissioners, whose compensation is less than $300 annually are required to pay a fee of $5. If no compensation is provided by law for the office on filing fee is required.

A candidate for the legislature or for a county office may be nominated by petition, but the petition must be signed by at least 10 per cent of the voters resident within the district or political division from which the candidate is presented. No person who has voted at a primary shall be eligible as a petitioner for any nomination to an office for which nominees were voted upon at such primary. Such petition cannot be signed until after the date of the primary election.

A defeated candidate at the primary election is ineligible for nomination to the same office by petition.

Any candidate who has been duly nominated and paid a filing fee shall be entitled to have his name placed upon the ballot at the general election without paying an additional fee.

A Correction.

In an item published last week regarding the slander suit of Detlef Dau against Carl Klockman it was stated that Dau secured a verdict of $1 against Klockman and that the costs would have to be paid by Dau. This is not correct. The costs will have to be paid by Klockman.

I have a client who wishes to purchase for cash some improved farms within a reasonable distance of Thief River Falls. Let me know what you have before July 15th.

THE FAIR THIS YEAR

Red Lake County Fair Will Be Better Than Ever This Year.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 3, 4 and 5 Are the Dates.

The officers of the Red Lake County Fair association are all busy securing attractions, and that the fair to held in Thief River Falls this year on August 3, 4 and 5 will be a big success is an assured fact. The NEWS was in hopes to secure a list of the attractions for this week, but as the contracts have not all been signed it will be impossible to do so this week.

The baloon ascension, which has always been a feature of the fair, will this year be better than ever. Dorothy De Bonda, of Paris, will make three ascentions—one each day of the fair—and leap to the earth in a parachute. She is said to have no equal, and the fair management was indeed fortunate to secure her services.

The live stock exhibits as well as those of agricultural products, will be good this year. The farmers are each year taking more interest in the county fair and the prizes given pay them for their efforts.

The horse races this year are expected to be of the best. The races at Fargo and Grand Forks are the latter part of July and most of the horses that attend these races will come to Thief River Falls and compete for the prizes offered here.

Line Soon Completed.

Tracklaying on the Duluth line was started at Plummer last week and it will now be only a few more weeks before the rails that will connect Thief River Falls with Duluth will be all laid. The crew that left Plummer expects to meet the one coming from the east at Bemidji.

A Few Short Weeks.

Mr. J. S. Bartell, Edwardsville, Ill., writes: "A few months ago my kidneys become congested. I had severe backache and pain across the kidneys and hips. Foley Kidney Pills promptly cured my backache and corrected the action of my kidneys. This was brought about after my using them for only a few short weeks and I can cheerfully recommend them."—Sold by all Druggists.

School Election Saturday.

The school election to be held Saturday evening does not promise to be a all interesting. The terms of D. P. O'Neill and Lars Backe expire and so far as we have been able to find out there will be no opposition.

Hay Will Be Hay.

Hay is going to be worth money this year and any farmer in this vicinity who does not cut all of the hay that he can is going to regret before next spring. A large number of North Dakota farmers have made arrangements to drive their stock over here and have them wintered here, as there is absolutely no hay in North Dakota. One farmer from North Dakota in the city last week made a contract with a Germantown farmer to have fifty tons of hay delivered in Thief River Falls this winter, the contract price being $15 per ton.

The Fourth up North.

Beaudett, one of the live towns up on the border, had a Fourth of July celebration. We don't know whether or not it was a sane celebration, but there were quite a few accidents, as will be seen by the Northern News:

Moore, leg broke.
Laughlin, cut on head with beer bottle.
Murry, shot through hand.
Allen, cut on head and face with club.
Alport, cut on head and face with club.

INTEREST---

Is one of the most interesting things in the world.

If INTEREST works for you, it is interesting to you.

If IT works against you, it is interesting to some one else.

INTEREST never rests; IT works days and nights, Sundays and Mondays, rainy days and bright days.

YOU ought to set Interest to work for you. One dollar deposited in the Peoples State Bank today is a good beginning.

We pay five per cent on time savings.

Expensive as a Target.

Ole Henry, of Roseau county, has decided to shoot at crows or buy a few clay pigeons for targets instead of selecting deer at this season of the year. He shot a deer a few days ago but Game Warden Cooke, of Roseau, was soon on his trail, Henry was hauled before the court and fined $27 for his fun.

Mud Lake Reached.

A. M. Arpin came down from the Mud lake country the first of the week where he had been looking after the ditching operations of the Northwestern Drainage company. He reports that two of the big dredges on the Mud lake ditch will dig their way through this lake, going from three to four feet lower than the bottom of this lake. When the dredges reach the lake, the level of this water will be lowered about one and one half foot, the remaining part of the water being held back by dams in order to furnish water to float the dredges.

An Example.

A teacher was endeavoring to explain to her small charges the meaning of the word "congenial."

"Now, children," she said, "two people are congenial who like to do the same kind of things, who do not disagree, and it is a very strong indication of congeniality when two people think the same thing simultaneously. Can any of you, now, give me an example of two people who are congenial?"

"I can, Miss Mary," a little fellow shouted, waving his hand wildly.

"All right, Tommy." Miss Mary smiled, delighted that so prompt an understanding should have been manifested, as there were several visitors present. "Tell us who they are and what proved it."

"It's paw and maw," Tommy replied eagerly. "An' I know it, 'cause they thinks the same thing at the same time. Last night maw said she wondered how anybody with any sense could ever be fool enough to get married, an' paw said, 'I was having the identical thought, my dear.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Sleep.

Now, blessings light on him that first invented this same sleep! It covers a man all over, thoughts and all, like a cloak. It is meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold and cold for the hot. It is the current coin that purchases all the pleasures of the world cheap and the balance that sets the king and the shepherd, the fool and the wise man even.—Cervantes.

What He "Saved."

Peter Clay was a coachman. His master found him one winter morning lying on top of a snowdrift in the front garden quite drunk.

"Why, Pete, you scoundrel," the master cried, "what do you mean by getting drunk at this time of day? Your breakfast has hardly settled, and you're drunk!"

"LAPPED UP ALL I COULD."

"Well, sir," Pete answered, rising carefully, "my excuse is that, sir, on the way home with a demijohn of whisky for my wife's rheumatism I fell on a cake of ice, sir, and the demijohn busted, and the good liquor all run out. It lay in little pools and puddles between the frozen ruts. I got down and lapped up all I could, sir. That's how I got overcome."

"You swinish scoundrel," said the master, "how much did you drink?"

"Well, sir," said Pete, "I guess I must have saved close on to a quart and a pint."

A scarecrow is sometimes effective in keeping marauding crows from the cornfield, but better still are two or three dead crows hung up by the hind legs on poles and placed at conspicuous places in the field. We have tried the plan, and it works like a charm.

THE FARMER NOT RESPONSIBLE.

There has not been a time in the past thirty years when the prices of the necessities of life, and particularly foodstuffs, have been higher than they are today and no time when folks were looking into the cause of high prices more than now. It is very easy to take it for granted that the original producer—the tiller of the soil, farmer and gardener—is the person chiefly responsible for the high cost of living, but a close study of price conditions which is being made does not seem to bear out this contention. Investigators have found that of the dollar which the consumer spends for meat, breadstuffs, fruit and vegetables, the producer or grower, who does the bulk of the working and sweating and who bears all the loss in case of unfavorable weather conditions, receives the munificent sum of 35 cents, and out of this must come all expenses of production. The other 65 per cent is appropriated, absorbed, or whatever you want to call it, by the chaps who handle it after it leaves the producer's hands—the transportation companies, the commission or middle man and the retailer. On the supposition that these three factors in distribution share equally, they absorb close to 22 cents apiece on every dollar's worth of stuff which the consumer buys, but this is certainly not the case with many articles of consumption. However, in the case of meats, a recent investigation showed that the town and city retailer was exacting a profit ranging all the way from 20 to 55 per cent. On the supposition that middleman and retailer appropriate 10 cents each, the railroads absorb the balance, which is 45 cents. While feverish agitation may not result in lowering prices in an appreciable degree, the average consumer, out of sheer curiosity, if for no other reason, would like to know a little more definitely where that 65 cents goes to.

THE SCHOOLMA'AM AND TEN ACRES.

There is little doubt that the conservative purchase of favorably situated fruit lands in many sections of the west is a perfectly safe proposition, but such purchase ought to be made with a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the future contingencies, especially in some of the heavily timbered sections. The point we would make in this is nicely illustrated in the case of an eastern schoolma'am whose purchase was detailed to us the other day. This girl, who has saved a nice little nest egg, has thought to insure her material well being for coming years by purchasing a ten acre tract of raw land in a heavily timbered section, not seeming to have taken into account the fact that the cost of clearing the land alone before the little trees are set will range from $125 to $175 per acre, the word of zealous real estate agents to the contrary nowithstanding. At best there must be a wait of five or six years before the trees begin to bear, and then not enough to pay for their annual care. Of course potatoes, strawberries and other small fruit crops may be grown between the tree rows during the first few years, but this means a degree of hard and painstaking work that one who has not had experience in horticulture has little conception of. On the other hand, if the tract in question was bought as an investment only, to be sold to some one else to develop, the question is entirely different so far as the schoolma'am is concerned. When she starts to develop her tract she will doubtless consider it wise to sell.

"IN THE BARNYARDS."

A well known agricultural authority and student of conditions prevailing throughout the great cotton belt has recently said that the economic and agricultural salvation of the south in years to come lies in the barnyards of that section, meaning thereby the adoption of dairying and stock raising with attendant crop rotation in place of the present shortsighted one line production of cotton which every year leaves the land poorer and keeps the cotton grower dependent on the outside world for his breadstuffs, meat and dairy products and for the grain and forage supplies needed for the few beasts of burden he does keep. In some sections of the cotton belt the force of the above agricultural truth is already being realized, and the "better way" is being inaugurated. What is true of the south is true, in some degree, of the east, west and north, of New York and Massachusetts, of Iowa and Minnesota, of Kansas, California and Nebraska, of Georgia and Mississippi. This doctrine of agricultural salvation needs preaching in season and out of season from every platform and in every newspaper and magazine in the country. It is the only way out, and the sooner we realize it as a people the better will it be for our own generation and those to follow.

It beats all how so many of the things which tickle the palate most are the hardest to digest.

Conducted in as slipshod a manner as the poultry busines is, yet the value of the eggs laid annually in the United States is twice that of the total value of all the precious metals mined during a like interval.

The automobilist who will crowd a team off a narrow highway is full brother to the teamster who is deaf to a chauffeur's toot for half the road and keeps his horses in a slow walk to tantalize the fellow behind him.

The work in the garden with hoe or cultivator may be made far more effective and satisfactory if the tools are kept sharp with a good sized broad file. It makes all the difference between drudgery and enjoyable work.

Any one who wages relentless war on the common housefly along any one of the many lines which are recommended for their extinction not only greatly safeguards his own health and peace of mind, but may properly be termed a public benefactor.

The western ranchman is not tempted to use his orchard tract for a calf pasture because there is no grass in it—only the finely mellowed soil resulting from frequent cultivations. There is a scad of calf pasture orchards that ought to be handled in this same way.

The thinning of apples on horizontal limbs shows the best shaped as well as the largest sized fruit to be on the underside of the limb. This is doubtless due to the fact that as a result of the law of gravity a major portion of the sap flows along the underside. For the same reason a wound will heal over more quickly on the under than on the upper side of a limb.

One appreciates more readily the possibilities of destruction by forest fires in parched sections where the conifers abound when he sees how like gasoline a small cypress will flare up and burn. What takes place when a forest of these pitchy trees catches fire and is fanned by a high wind is simply beyond the power of words to describe.

The little slug, half snail and half worm, which consumes the leaves of cherry and pear and sometimes apple trees, leaving but the skeleton framework of the leaves, can be easily killed by spraying the infested trees with commercial arsenate of lead at the rate of two and a half pounds to fifty gallons of water. If it is more convenient to use paris green about five ounces should be used to the same quantity of water, a little freshly slaked lime being stirred in to prevent a possible burning of the foliage.

Aside from the fact that water sprouts which grow up from the lower part of the trunk and from underground give the orchard a most slovenly and unkempt appearance, there is a still stronger reason for their removal from the fact that if they are visited with the pear blight, an easily transmissible and most dangerous tree disease, the infection will be more quickly communicated to the trunk or roots where its eradication is not only difficult, but may result in the serious disfigurement or destruction of the tree. All these sprouts should be removed well up into the head of the tree, as well as fruit spurs, which are equally susceptible to infection.

Perhaps the most important of the later sprayings for the codling moth is that which is given between July 20 and Aug. 1, depending somewhat upon season and locality. For this a standard make of commercial arsenate of lead should be used at the rate of from two to three pounds to fifty gallons of water. The spray should be applied with good pressure, and both fruit and leaves should be well coated with the poison. While paris green may be used for this, there is much greater danger of a burning of the leaves and russeting of the fruit, while it does not adhere to the fruit as well as does the other poison.

The southern cotton farmer consoles himself with the thought that raw cottonseed meal returned to the land is a valuable fertilizer and restores much of the strength removed in the harvesting of the cotton crop, when he should rather take note of the other fact that if this same cottonseed meal were fed to dairy cows there would be just as much fertilizer to return to the land in the shape of rich manures, while the fertilizing elements would be in a form to be much more readily assimilated by the soil and he himself be ahead in the dairy products resulting. In other words, the dairy business promises him more prosperity than does furnishing oil for the oleo manufacturers.

Chickens are about the only kind of live stock that can safely be allowed the run of the orchard, and there is no question whatever that they render a very important service in the destruction of a great variety of insects, including bugs, worms, ants, etc. Some husky half grown chicks which have the run of the writer's orchard have got on to the fact that the ants, which do much damage by moving their "dairy cows," the aphides, from twig to twig on the young apple trees, make headquarters in the cracks in the soil at the base of the tree, and they are frequently seen very industriously scratching this soil away that they may get the ants and their larvae. We plan to have ten times as many chicks doing the same thing next season.

Pouring a small quantity of kerosene into the hills of ants near the house is said to be an effective means of driving them away.

As soon as the breeding season is over the hens will endure the hot weather and shed their feathers just as well if the roosters are put in a yard by themselves or into potpies.

Experiments carefully conducted show that calves and pigs, like growing plants, make the most rapid growth when they have abundant sunshine. It is a cheap tonic and should be used without stint.

The expenditure of the same ingenuity and energy will give larger financial returns from the raising of onions than fussing with ginseng and from the growing of "murphies" than monkeying with mushrooms.

It bids fair to be a serious problem what the women will do with their spare time when they all have vacuum cleaners, fireless cookers and electricity for washing and ironing. Doubtless they will be out in the back yard trying the old man's airship.

It is little wonder that a good many cows contract tuberculosis when one takes into account the poorly lighted, poorly ventilated, dusty and filthy stables in which they are housed during several months of the year. Human beings who existed under similar conditions wouldn't live as long as the cows do.

Young breeding animals of whatever kind should be given roomy and comfortable quarters by themselves where they will be quiet and unexcited and have conditions which will be most conducive to the development of the vigor and vitality which are so essential to their usefulness as breeders when they have arrived at maturity.

It is a bit strange that the chief movers for the repeal of the present oleomargarine law before the recent congressional hearing were representatives from southern states, where for every dollar which cotton belt farmers receive for cottonseed oil made into bogus butter they receive $107 for bona fide dairy products. It looks as if these beef trust allies from the south were putting a small cart before a pretty good sized horse.

Some figures that are worth while remembering relative to ensilage and hay as farm rations are that the former requires but fifty cubic feet of storage, while hay occupies 500 cubic feet. Again, it costs 63 cents per ton to put in ensilage and $1.50 to secure a ton of hay. Lastly, the installation of a silo means the doubling of the value of the corn crop. These are practical arguments and should be sufficient to induce many a corn belt farmer to build a silo this summer for the more economical disposal of his corn crop.

While hawks will now and then vary their bill of fare by pouncing down on a juicy young chicken, it is rare indeed that they do so. Especially is this true of the so called hen hawk, which spends the greater portion of its time circling over field and meadow in search of mice, gophers and rabbits, of which it kills large numbers in the course of a summer season. When the small boy brings down a hawk (and this applies with equal force to owls) he puts out of business one of the best friends the farmer and the fruit grower have.

Investigations which have lately been made by the commission appointed in New York to look into the operations of the milk trust show that the dairyman—milk producer—is getting from 2½ to 3¼ cents per quart for his milk, barely enough to reimburse him for cost of feed and care, while the consumer in the large cities is paying from 8 to 10 cents a quart for the same milk. It looks mightily as if the transportation companies and the milk trust were robbing the farmer on the one hand and practicing extortion on the consumer with the other. There will likely be something doing when the commission gets through with its hearings.

Tank outfits for treating posts with preservatives are now on the market and can be bought for about $50. This is quite a bit larger outlay than the man with average fence building on his hands will feel that he can afford, yet a way out would seem to offer in the purchase of such an outfit by himself and several of his neighbors. The equipment could be installed at a central point and the posts taken there for treatment. With post timber becoming scarcer every year and in view of the fact that the treatment of them with creosote or other preservatives increases their life from three to five times, the profitableness of the operation would seem to be clearly proved.

A Mr. Archer, who received first prize for the highest yield of corn at the Virginia state fair in 1909, raised 144 bushels to the acre on his farm one mile south of Richmond, on the James river flats, the land raising corn year after year and not having been reenforced with any kind of fertilizers. The variety grown was Cocke's Prolific, the rows being three feet apart and the stalks averaging ten inches to the row. The seed was planted early in May and given three cultivations during the season, the dirt being thrown to the row with a turn plow the first time, the cultivator being run close and deep the second time, while in the last tilling the earth was ridged up to the corn with a turn plow. To mature the crop in question required 125 days.

There is many a canine that seems to serve no other earthly purpose than to eat scraps from the table, which might better be given to the chickens, and lie at the corner of the house to rush out at passing pedestrians and teams. This type of dog should be given burial honors at the earliest possible moment.

Every mother who has little children who drink milk should take the precaution of inquiring into the health of the cow which furnishes the milk supply, and this holds whether the cow in question is one's own or belongs to a neighbor. This simple precaution may save doctors' bills and funeral expenses.

The rain barrel at the corner of the house will cease to be a fertile breeding spot of the mosquito tribe if a board cover, piece of wire screen or mosquito netting is placed over it. Stagnant pools on or near the premises may be kept from being a harbor for the pests if a cupful or two of kerosene are poured on their surface.

A Minnesota hog raiser whose herds have been immune from cholera when his neighbors' have been heavy losers attributes his freedom from loss to the fact that he has purchased generous quantities of slack coal and scattered it where the hogs could get it whenever they liked. While this simple preventive of cholera is not vouched for by veterinary authorities, it is inexpensive and worth trying.

There is a whole lot about creed, theology and the hereafter that we don't know, but it seems to be a practical as well as safe conclusion that none of us will enjoy the heaven to be in a large or satisfying degree unless we do what we can to promote the happiness of those with whom we live here below by fair dealing, kindness, sympathy and unselfishness. Our religion will doubtless be tagged "counterfeit" if as a cloak it is put on only in prayer meetings and on Sundays and thrown aside or forgotten the rest of the week.

In answer to a query of a reader of these notes living at Dover, Del., which is typical of several which have been received, the writer would say that he has published no book under the title "Farm, Orchard and Garden," but simply prepares three columns of weekly notes which appear in many news and agricultural papers over the country. The matter is put in stereotype or plate form by the American Press Association of 45 Park place, New York city, and may be got in this form from any one of the company's sixteen branch houses over the country. Any individual may have the regular reading of this matter by subscribing for a paper which uses it.

The bindweed, or wild morning glory, belongs to that pestiferous class of weeds like the Canada thistle and quack grass, which not only propagate by maturing seed, but also by means of their root stalk systems, every piece of which will start a new plant a-growing; hence eradication of it involves an entire digging of these root systems from the soil or a careful plowing at blossom time, when the vital energy of the plants is taxed to the limit, and the heavy broadcasting of millet, buckwheat or rye, which will germinate at once and whose dense, rank growth will smother the bindweed out. The plowing of this growth under early in September usually puts on the finishing touches, so that there will be no further trouble from the pest the following season.

Veterinary science has done much to safeguard the health of our domestic animals, and one of the direct results of its recommendations is the quite general use to which the dipping tank is put as a means of ridding hogs, sheep and cattle of parasites or bacterial ailments. A dipping tank for grown cattle is a large affair and quite expensive, but a tank large enough to accommodate hogs, sheep and calves may be bought at a very reasonable figure. And it is a good idea to give these animals an occasional dipping as a preventive measure. Not only their health is safeguarded and improved, but they are more thrifty and make a more rapid growth, as a result of the treatment, which is the prime consideration with every grower. Disinfectants for use in the dipping solutions are on the market and are both cheap and entirely effective.

The only way that seems possible of explaining the all too limited use to which the King road drag is put is that its very simplicity and cheapness of construction have tended to place it in disrepute, whereas if it were an implement of road improvement which cost ten times what it does it might have come into more general use. But, whatever the reason, the facts as they stand prove that as yet we come a long way from taking advantage of the means within our reach for road improvement. Another phase of this same regrettable failure to do the best we can is shown in the very limited use of broad tired wagons when they are not only handier in everyday use, but would do wonders for our highways if used instead of the narrow tired vehicles in hauling bulky produce to market. In some states and counties a portion of the road tax is abated to all users of broad tired wagons. The plan ought to become far more general than at present.

WASTED THE CROP.

Destroying It Did Not Bring the Promised Reward.

"Tom Angus was an architect of Tombstone," said the story teller. "When they expected Mrs. Langtry in Tombstone, Tom was appointed to decorate the railway station and the streets. He did so, and he made a good job of it, and after the mayor had congratulated him he said:

"'Well, Mr. Mayor, since you like my work, introduce me to Mrs. Langtry at the banquet, will you?'

"'Sure, I will,' said the mayor, 'but you must knock that spinach off your chin first. Mrs. Langtry is a lady, and she could never stand for a rusty alfalfa field like yours.'

"'But,' stammered Tom—'but, Mr Mayor, the king'—

"'Cut down the alfalfa crop,' the mayor interrupted, 'and I'll introduce you. Vice versa,' he added, very decidedly.

TOM REMOVED HIS RICH WHISKERS.

"So Tom removed his rich whiskers, and that night among the banqueters his white, nude chin was a conspicuous object. But the mayor didn't introduce him to the beautiful Mrs. Langtry, after all. After every course and all through the speeches Tom kept winking and nodding at his honor, but it was to no purpose. He didn't get introduced.

"And the next day, after Mrs. Langtry was gone, the mayor, when Tom reproached him, gave a loud laugh.

"'Was that you,' he roared, 'nodding and winking all last night? By Jove, I didn't recognize you, Tom, without your whiskers.'"

Anger.

If you wish not to be of an angry temper do not feed the habit. Throw nothing on it which will increase it. At first keep quiet and count the days on which you have been angry.—Epictetus.

Diplomacy.

Down on New York's west side there's a 'longshore saloon where they set up a huge schooner for 5 cents. When 6 o'clock blows the place is thronged by the thirsty, fortifying themselves for the long walk home.

One night a huge Irishman in a red flannel shirt, open at his brawny chest and rolled up over swelling biceps, stood in the crowd and tapped his nickel on the bar. Just as the barkeeper set out the schooner the swing door burst open, and a little Irishman rushed in, flung his coat on the floor, threw his hat beside it and, jumping on them, yelled in a high voice quivering with rage:

"Which one of yez beat up poor Pat Murphy?"

The big Irishman in the red shirt tapped his chest. "'Twas me!" he bellowed hoarsely.

The little Irishman whirled round. "Gee!" he piped. "Ye did him up foine."—Lippincott's.

Napoleon's Gift.

A former viceroy of India was once a guest at an official banquet in London and found himself placed next to a portly London alderman.

"My grandfather knew Napoleon," said the latter to the distinguished guest. "The emperor gave him a lovely snuffbox. There is a hen on the lid."

"Dear me!" replied the viceroy. "It is probably an eagle, not a hen."

"No, it is a hen," persisted the alderman, producing the box from his pocket and proudly displaying the initial "N" of the emperor's name in brilliants on the lid.

A Valuable Signature.

Whistler's professional as well as legal signature was a butterfly. It appeared on his paintings and was the only signature recognized at his bank. Autograph fiends schemed in vain and would have paid handsomely for Whistler's autograph in script.

One day the painter was visited in his studio by a dealer who appeared to be very angry. He had received Whistler's check for £1 5s. and wrathfully demanded a proper signature that would draw the money at the bank.

Whistler, genuinely enraged at the thought that there could be any one so ignorant as not to know about the famous butterfly, wrote his name on the check, knowing that the bank would refuse it and picturing to himself with joy the dealer's punishment in forfeiting the £1 5s. owing to him.

The next day the painter was so furious he nearly had a fit on learning that within an hour the dealer had sold the rare signature for £[illegible].

The Scrap Book

A Mill Worth Seeing.

Joe Grim, the Italian pugilist of Altoona, was known as the human punching bag on account of the awful amount of punishment he would take. Fitzsimmons in one bout knocked Joe down fifteen times in six rounds, yet couldn't put him out. While Grim never won a fight, he was always willing to meet almost anybody who came along and was absolutely fearless. He paid no attention to class and regarded it as a sort of duty to meet every new fighter whose name showed on the pugilistic horizon. Some time ago his friends were arranging a fight for Joe in Altoona, and there was some bickering over the percentages. Joe wanted the fight held in Philadelphia or Pittsburg, as he thought it would draw a bigger crowd in either city. To this his friends objected, insisting that Altoona was a good show town.

"Why, Maxine Elliott played to a $400 house here the other night," said one of the fight promoters.

Quick as a flash Joe snapped back:

"I'll fight that Max Elliott too!"—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Life.

We are born; we laugh; we weep;
We love; we droop; we die.
Ah, wherefore do we laugh or weep?
Why do we live or die?
Who knows that secret deep?
Alas, not I!

Why doth the violet spring
Unseen by human eye?
Why do the radiant seasons bring
Sweet thoughts that quickly fly?
Why do our fond hearts cling
To things that die?

We toil through pain and wrong;
We fight and fly;
We love; we lose, and then ere long
Stone dead we lie.
O life, is all thy song
"Endure and die?"

—Bryan Waller Procter.

His Point of Order.

A prominent clergyman was asked by a colored minister to preach in the colored people's church, and he gladly consented. Reaching the church, where he was the only paleface present, the preacher delivered a sermon full of helping advice, made an eloquent prayer and then announced that the service would be closed by singing the hymn "Wash Me and I Will Be Whiter Than Snow." At this point one of the darksome congregation rose to his feet.

"Look heah, pahson," said he impressively, "yo' will hab to scuse me, but I rise to a point of ordah."

"What is it?" asked the preacher, with large symptoms of surprise floating over his features.

"It am dis way," replied the parishioner. "Yo' hab ebidently made a mistake in de crowd. Dis am a cull'ed congregashun, an', sence all de pump watah an' sof' soap in de county can't make de words ob dat hymn come true, I jes' wish dat yo' would change her to some udder tune."

Stranger Still.

A Buffalo man took a relative recently arrived from Scotland to see Niagara falls. The two gazed at the falls in silence a long time. Then the Buffalo man heaved a sigh and said:

"Ah, Cousin Donald, did you ever see anything so beautiful and strange?"

The Scotchman after a moment's thought answered calmly:

"Weel, for bonnie yon's a' richt, but for strange, no, fur I once saw in the town o' Peebles a peacock wi' a wooden leg."

Poor Mule.

This is the story of a Kansas mule. The corn was about ready to lay by, and his master was in the midst of the final plowing when the mule decided that he was through with work. No amount or form of moral or other suasion could induce him to "pull the hat off your head." Exasperated beyond endurance, the master at last succeeded in leading him to a nearby corncrib, where he fastened him with a log chain with the expressed intent of leaving him there until he came to his senses.

The day was as hot as—Kansas. The flies were Kansas flies and thick as they grow in Kansas. The crib was full of popcorn. By and by the mule began to register his protest against the outrage, for such he conceived it to be, by a lively tattoo against the side of the crib. "An' he kicked an' he kicked an' he kicked" until his shoes became red hot and set fire to the corncrib. The fire popped the corn, which fell about in such profusion that the mule, believing it was snowing, lay down and froze to death.—Louisville Times.

A Pious Wish.

The parish church in a well known Scotch village being in sad need of repair and the money required for such not being in hand, a meeting of the parishioners was held to see if the necessary funds could be raised by subscription.

The local laird, noted for his wealth and also for his meanness, was asked to officiate as chairman. Addressing the villagers, he reminded them of the object of their gathering together and by way of example subscribed a guinea toward the cost of repair. When on the point of sitting down a lump of plaster falling from the ceiling struck him a clout on the head. Looking upward, he exclaimed:

"Yes, friends, I see the church does need repairing badly. I'll raise my subscription to 2 guineas."

Upon hearing this an old lady in the audience exclaimed:

"O Lord, give him anither clout!"

TO BE TAKEN TO NORWAY.

The Runestone Found at Kensington to Be Examined by Experts.

Believed That a Full Investigation Will Prove it to Be Genuine.

The runestone found some years ago at Kensington, in Douglas county has figured in the limelight more than any other stone ever found in the United States, but it will obtain even greater fame for its owner and chief sponsor, Hjalmar Rued Holand, of Ephraim, Wis., who will take it to Christiania, Norway, for the inspection of the leading archeologists and runologists of the Norse capital. It is also likely the scholars of Sweden and Denmark will be given an opportunity to see it at the same time.

Mr. Holand will leave for Christiania in response to a public invitation from the scholars of that city. In a recent issue of Aftenposten, the big Norwegian daily, there appeared on the first page a double-spaced article by Professor Gustafson, head of the deparment of archeology in the University of Christiania, in which it was stated that the judgment of the Norse scholars, who have declared the Kensington runestone a fake, may have been too hastily given, and that Mr. Holand ought to bring it to Norway, so that it may be critically examined by all competent to pass an opinion.

Mr. Holand has decided to accept the invitation and will deliver the same lecture on the stone before the University of Christiania that he has given before various historical societies and other learned bodies in the United States. As Mr. Holand is a comparatively poor man, contributions to defray the expense of the trip will be made by Norwegians of the United States and others interested in the promotion of historical research. Among those who will receive contributions for this purpose is Dr. O. Th. Sherping of Fergus Falls.

The scholars of Norway and Sweden, who have expressed an opinion, have declared against the Kensington stone, to which is due most of the doubt in the minds of the people in this country, despite the action of the Minnesota Historical society in pronouncing it genuine, after a thorough consideration of the linguistic objections raised by the objectors, and after an analysis of the stone by geologists.

But none of the Norwegian authorities have had a chance to see or examine it, having merely seen photographs, and Mr. Holand hopes they may change their minds when he gets to Christiania. The fact that Professor Gustafson admits that the judgment of those scholars may have been too hasty indicates that there is a strong possibility of a change. Should they change, then all doubt as to the stone's genuiness would speedily pass away, as it is taken for granted that they ought to be the best authorities on the subject.

Mr. Holand and Olaf Ray, an attorney of Chicago are about to undertake a search at Pelican Lake, twenty-five miles south of Fergus Falls, for the bones of the ten Norse explorers supposed to have been massacred by the Indians in 1362, as mentioned in the runestone inscription. Last fall Mr. Holand and Rev. O. Normann of Ashby found two skerries at the south end of Pelican lake, answering the description and requirements of the skerries mentioned in the inscription, and it is on a wooded point, opposite these skerries, that the two investigators will excavate.

The discussion of the Kensington stone still continues with unflagging zeal in the Norwegian press of America, and recently Dr. George T. Flom, professor of Scandinavian in the University of Illinois, published a pamphlet on the subject, declaring emphatically that the find is a fake. His arguments, however, are marked by various inaccuracies, and Mr. Holand says they can be easily riddled. R. B. Anderson of Madison Wis., has recently published several hostile articles, in which he advances the theory that the runic inscription is the work of an eccentric Swedish scholar, Rev. Mr. Fogelblad, who lived close to the home of Olaf Ohman, the finder of the stone.

Professor H. N. Winchell of the Minnesota Historical society has visited Kensington several times of late and feels more confident than ever that there was no faking on the part of Olaf Ohman or his neighbors.

Prairie Chickens Plentiful.

Almost every farmer in this vicinity reports prairie chickens plentiful this season. The spring was ideal for nesting and the hens have come off with large broods. There was no heavy rains to drown out the chicks and the weather has been favorable to them up to this time. Hunters are preparing for the sport on September 5, and if some big kills are not made it will not be because the chickens are scarce.

Laying Off Men.

As a result of poor crop prospects in some parts of Dakota and Minnesota, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads are commencing to lay off men at various points along both systems. The laying off process commenced first with section men, then was extended to the shopmen and finally to the general offices. Now station hands are being dropped off at different points.

Tobacco Tax Goes Up.

Higher internal revenue taxes on tabacco takes effect with the beginning of this fiscal year. On smoking and chewing tobacco the tax is increased from six to eight cents a pound. The the tax on large or cigars of ordinary size is unchanged. In small cigars the increase is from 54 to 75 cents a thousand, and the same for small cigarets. On large cigarets weighing three pounds or less to the thousand the tax will be $1.25 instead of from 54 to $1.08 as now, and on those weighing more it will be $3.70 instead of the present $3 tax. It will evidently remain for the tobacco trust to determine whether the consumer will bear the whole burden of the increase or not.

Frank Benston Dead.

Tom Benston last Thursday received a telegram from Missoula, Montana, to the effect that his son, Frank Benston, had died out there very suddenly of heart disease. Length of Life of a Horse.

What was probably the oldest horse in the world, Punch, the petted scion of a famous line of polo horses, died last month near Poughkeepsie, N. Y. This horse was 45 years on May 12th. For the last 23 years he had been relieved from work and well cared for by his owner and had every consideration for his comfort and welfare. When he was buried, this distinguished individual's grave was filled with flowers. One of the well known horse breeders of the country said that he did not think there was an authenticated instance of a horse living longer than 45. The oldest horse he could recall died at the age of 35 years.—Ex.

Wherein Europe Beats Us.

The people of Minnesota paid during the year 1909, in fire premiums, the sum of $8,658,171.52, practically $4.00 for every inhabitant, and the losses paid during that year average $2.00 per capita. It is safe to say that the losses paid do not cover over two-thirds of the value of the property destroyed, so that the actual loss in the state last year was $3.00 per capita. The average loss per capita in Europe per year is about 33 cents. On this basis our fire loss last year would have been about $700,000.00—a saving of approximately three and one half millions of dollars.

The per capita loss in Italy is about 12 cents a year, while for 1909 the average loss per capita in this country was $1.14 and in 1907, it was $2.51

As we permit fire to destory such an immense amount of property we are necessarily under a high expense to put out these fires and prevent general conflagrations. The cost of fire protection in such cities as St. Paul and Minneapolis, is acnually about $2.00 per capita, while the cost per capita in the large European cities varies from 8 cents to 30 cents.—From Insurance Department Bulletin No. 34.

Mail Order Business Kills Off Towns

When your catalog comes from the mail order house, wait until you get home before removing the wrapper, then wait until aftersupper, when the chores are done, draw an easy chair to the table where the light will shine on the page, put on your glasses, that no bargains may escape your eye, and settle down for an hour of quiet enjoyment, says the Price Current.

What a wonderful book it is to be sure, wonderful for what it does not contain as well as for what it does. We miss some things we would be glad to see. Where is their offer to pay cash or exchange goods for your wheat, oats, corn sheep and hogs "free on board?"

How much tax will they pay for improving road and bridges, for the support of the poor, the expense of the town county and state? On what page is their offer to contribute money or services in the establishment and maintenance of a church or Sunday school for the moral tone of your community.

What line of credit will they extend to you when your crops are poor, your money gone, when through illness or misfortune you are not able to send cash orders for your groceries, clothing, farm tools, and crockery? Where is their offer to contribute to entertainments you have from year to year? After you read these valued catalogs go into a dark corner and sincerely consider the fact that they contribute a big nothing—Bemidji Pioneer.

In addition to the foregoing we would suggest that local merchants make their local advertising as interesting to the public as the mail order houses do their catalogs. It is a fact that many orders are sent to catalog houses for goods that could be purchased as cheaply at home and the only reason for this is that the local merchants do not take advantage of the opportunity to quote prices through the columns of their local papers. No man will go to the trouble of sending out of town for goods and take chances on paying something he has not seen if he knows he can buy as cheaply, or even pay a trifle more. Merchants can do a whole lot toward preventing the mail order business from killing off all towns if they would quote prices on the goods they carry in stock.

TAX COMPARISONS BASED ON PER CAPITA EXPENSE.

From whatever angle the expense of running the county of Red Lake if viewed, the same result always obtains and the same conclusion of extremely high taxes is reached. By an examination of the statistics covering the cost of meeting the ordinary expenses of all the counties in the state, it is discovered that the large counties invariably have the high taxes and the small ones the least. There are exceptions of course, as in the case of Marshall county, well known to all readers of this paper. A few other large counties show small tax rates, but these results are always the work of economical county commissioners. In fact the smallness of the southern counties tends to economy, while the large sums received by taxation in the larger counties cause extravagance.

Viewing the tax levies last year for county purposes only and dividing these levies by the population of the county some interesting results are disclosed. These figures will give the per capita tax in each county and should form a fair way of comparing Red Lake county expense with that of other counties. In this manner the following results are obtained: Red Lake county levied $62,924.39 last year for county tax only and this sum is now due as taxes. This gives an average tax to every man, woman and child in the county of $3.32. This tax does not include the state, the town or village, or school tax but is solely for the running of the county. For the same year Beltrami county levied something over $4 per head to maintain its running expenses; Polk, $2.30; Stearns, $2.10; Cass, $5.56; Itasca, $16.78. (The last named county might be classed as an exception to the run of the larger counties for reasons which it is not necessary to state here). In contrast with these results it is found that the small county of Douglas has a tax of only $1.87 per head; LeSuer, $1.13; Rice, $1.54; Swift, $1.73; Houston, $1.67 and so on through the list of large and small counties. The arguments of those who oppose the division of the county merely because it will be more expensive to run Pennington county, will not hold with intelligent people when they read the above and know that the figures are taken from the state auditor's annual report.

Expense of Getting to Red Lake Falls

The division of the county will not alone cut down the cost of maintaining the present extravagant county government, but it will lessen many expenses which the towns and villages are compelled to incur every year in their relations with the county seat town. Taking but one case—that of the two annual trips which the assessors must make to get their assessment books and to return them in June to the county auditor's office—it is found that this expense will be cut in less than half when the assessors of Pennington county take these trips to Thief River Falls in place of to the present county seat. Let any farmer in any town in the new county ask his assessor what his expense was in making these two trips and he will discover that the town or the assessor is subject to a heavy tax each year to comply with this law. Nearly all the northern assessors lose the best part of three days and the expense incident thereto in making the first trip and almost as much the second time. He hired an auto with three other assessors on his last trip and left the down town village in the evening after depositing his books rather than remain down there over night and thus saved a few dollars.

The same business could have been transacted at Thief River Falls in one day and without any unnecessary expense; at least, it would be not over one third what it is now.

In case the county is divided, then for all time to come, the farmers of the north half must contribute of their hard earned dollars to meet this uncalled for expense. If this one specific case is not as deep as a well nor as large as County Commissioner Lindquist's new brick house, still when it is multiplied by the cost of trips to attend court, to be present at county commissioners' meetings, probate court and other necessary business calls, it is easily seen why the present taxes are the highest average in the state, as the state auditor's records disclose. Why not cease trying to reform well established conditions which have obtained through long years of abuse, and organize Pennington county and have the control of the north half of the county in the hands of the people who pay the bulk of the taxes?

County Tax Levy.

It is not the purpose of the articles on the division question to explain any of the extraordinary and extravagant expenses which a study of the county records disclose are spent for the running of this county. This can be done by those who are "next", but for the consideration of some honest inquirers it might be stated that last year the sum of $62,924.39 was levied for county purposes only. This does not include any town, state or school tax, but is solely for the county expense. For revenue purposes $18,723.62 was levied. This is for the salaries of the officers, for printing, for the special expense in securing legal advice for the board of commissioners, though the people elected Mr. Michelet for this purpose. $7,489.38 was levied for roads and bridges, and of this amount Pennington county is paying about $4,000 and the south half of the county already has received almost all of it in appropriations for roads and bridges this year. $5,242.32 is levied for bonds and interest other than state loans. This large amount is suspiciously large for the purpose indicated. $14,979.03 was reported by the state auditor as levied for the support of the "County Poor", but as the poor in Red Lake county are supported by the towns and villages this sum must have something to do with the new court house, which by a stretch of the imagination might be classed as for "poor" purposes. "Other Special Taxes"-with the emphasis on the "other" and "special", of $16,490.01 are levied for the same year. In addition to these very large amounts, it is found that the revenue fund is overdrawn nearly $14,000 on the first of June this year. What some of these taxes are for is best known to those who are in authority, but it is "up to" the taxpayers to do some close quizzing and learn where all the overdrawn revenue fund went and for what this "other special taxes" are paid out.

How long these terrible conditions are going to be permitted to exist is not known. But it is certain that those who have to pay the freight are becoming extremely anxious and are beginning to wonder if the steady rise in their taxes will ever cease and if it is possible to throw off the incubus which clings to their purse strings with the determination of death. Pennington county, with a free court house and with a sure and positive knowledge that the farmers in the north end will not have to pay for the court house at Red Lake Falls and with a board of farmers running the county of Pennington, will be the refuge from this deplorable state of public affairs.

Engebret Nilson's Views of County Division.

Editor and Readers of the NEWS:

I am a farmer and very busy at that, so I can not do well at writing for your paper, but since you wanted to hear from the farmers on the Pennington County proposition, I'll do the best I can.

I certainly favor this, which should have been done years ago, and I'm by no means the only one here who does. I have made a point of interviewing my neighbors and those who come by here from the east—way out to the Clearwater County line, and I never found one who opposed it, except one of my neighbors, and he is lined up for Pennington now.

There would have been a small percentage of opposition east from here if Red Lake county had been run decent, but as it is, it is so rabidly corrupt that I believe it has practically wiped out that little opposition to Pennington County. Just think! they took trust funds (farmers' ditch money) and tried to build the court house—with it, and they stuck a poor fund on us, when each town has to take care of their own poor! Talk about graft! Why this is the boldest I've heard of. They can't even send up a set of straight ditch-viewers, but send men that do things so careless that the fellows who are assessed nearly all have to go to Red Lake Falls to the last hearing. This is money in Red Lake Falls' pockets, but how about us farmers? We must take three days, and likely have our teams standing idle. Why I would not make that trip over again for $20. Some time ago they sent up a bunch of viewers who nobody saw out here, but I heard later that they had done all the viewing in one of the back rooms.............. down town. I believe the main trick is to assess one man so low that all but him will be "way out of sight", as this way they can get nearly every one assessed to come down to Red Lake Falls.

Say farmers, if you want fair play, you must get representation, on the county board in proportion to the number of people. If you want representation you must get Pennington county, for the courts have decided that the county commissioners are the sole judges regarding the re-districting of our commissioner districts, and then you can just imagine what show we have to get the county re-districted in such a way as to get a fair representation.

If we don't stop this grafting right now, by voting for Pennington county, the chances are that we will get our reputation for high taxes so well advertised that land values will depreciate, instead of increase as they naturally should do in such a good, beautiful farming community as here, where we can raise a nice little crop without rain all summer.

Say, farmers and everybody, for the sake of justice and self-protection vote for PENNINGTON COUNTY!

Very truly yours,
ENGEBRET NILSON.

BIG HOTEL IS SURE

Senator Charlie Plain, of Milton, N. D. Buys the Crocker Corner In This City.

Will Erect a Building 100 x 140 Three Stories High Next Summer.

A deal was closed the first of the week whereby Charlie Plain, of Milton, N. D., becomes the owner of the Crocker corner. The corner has a frontage of one hundred feet on La Bree avenue and 140 feet on Second street and is one of the best business locations in the city.

Senator Plain has purchased this property with a view of improving the same and next year will erect a three story building upon this corner that will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. Considerable of the first story will be rented for store buildings, and the second and third story and part of the first story will be used as a hotel, thus giving Thief River Falls what it has long been in need of—a first class hotel. Work of putting in the foundation will be commenced this fall.

Senator Plain is reported to be worth in the neighborhood of a million dollars and will not lack capital to carry out the undertaking. It is also rumored that Mr. Plain will probably remove to this city and make his future home here.

A Big Attraction.

The Red Lake County Fair association is to be congratulated upon securing as one of the best attractions, Capt. J. W. Akard, of Fairplay Mo., the best rifle shot in the world. Capt. Akard will represet the Union Metallic Cartridge company and will give an exhibition lasting for one hour on the afternoons of Thursday and Friday, August 4 and 5. He will be assisted by George Trout, of Brainerd, one of the best marksmen in the Northwest and others. Capt. Akard does all kinds of fancy shooting and will be worth coming miles to see.

Capt. Akard has made a record of breaking 1,500 marbles thrown in the air in succession with a 22 rifle.

King May Be Fired.

It is said that Gov. Eberhart is going to fire John King, state librarian, for being perniciously active in political affairs. If the report is true and Gov. Eberhart ousts him out of his soft snap, it will mean that the governor's popularity in Red Lake county will be increased about 100 per cent.

Germantown.

In spite of the drouth that still remains unbroken the crops are alive and in shape to take advantage of any stray shower of rain that will come its way. Haying is now on and as large amount of that staple will be harvested this year as usual in this vicinity. Grains and vegetables will not be what they could have been under more favorable conditions, but the prospects at present are that there will, even at worst, be something of everything.

The steeple on the Lutheran church is now nearing completion and F. Hegtvedt who has the building contract is to all appearance, doing an all around satisfactory job. This addition to the building together with a new coat of paint, is a very noticeable improvement on the church and the town beautiful.

Contracts for road grading were let by the Town Board week before last in the northern and western part of the town to the amount of $225 and the work is now nearly finished. That in connection with the regular road work and about $300 worth of work by the country within the town places this summer among the best ever for improvement of the roads, the dry seasons permiting about all the work to be done where most needed; in the lowest places.

John Cook was up from Crookston last week for a visit with Germantown relatives and friends.

The Foss farm also known as the Jenson or Gunderson place 5 miles northeast of here was sold last week to Mr. Thompson of North Dakota. The new owner was up last Friday viewing the hay crop.

The time schedule for the mail service on the routes between Thief River Falls and Grygla has been changed so as to leave both places in the morning and make connection here at noon, going back in the afternoon, this affording a through service one way during the day between Thief River and Grygla.

Ed Johnson manager of the co-operative store was a Thief River caller Saturday and Sunday.

J. H. Roller and family returned last Friday from their Wisconsin visit, to make hay when the sun shines and to relieve the chore boy of the care and responsibility of farm management single handed and alone. They report things dry as Germantown and drier all along the line.

While remembering our vain endeavor at "hitting the nigger to win extra cigars" for the same money on Fourth of July celebrations, carnivals and the like, it was no surprise that Jeffries was whipped in that bout at Reno, Nevada, on the Fourth.

The annual school meeting Saturday evening was a little better attended than has been the case for the last few years and developed into a meeting about that much more interesting. Among other matters it was noted to have eight months of school the next year and that a first grade teacher be hired. The necessary amount of money was raised to cover the running expenses of a first class school and $100 for improvements such as fencing, improving the grounds and repairing the buildings. L. Bendicksen was elected Director for a three year term to succeed J. H. Roller who has served satisfactorily in that capacity since this district was organized. The Board has again fortunately secured the service of Miss Annie J. Fallman, of St. Hilaire as teacher, insuring another year of good work ahead. The fall term of school will commence Sept. 6th.

Rev. A. D. Maes, state Evangelist of the American Sunday School Union commenced a series of meetings in the Hopkins Union Chapel on Sunday.

With the filing some time ago, of Louis Hamre as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of County Commissioner from the fifth district, Grand Plain for the first time in many years offers the services of one of its citizens as a county officer. We do not venture to say who of those that have filed or may file for the same office ought to get it, but speaking from impressions gained in 12 years of acquaintance with Mr. Hamre the writer does not hesitate from fear of torment by a bad conscience, to recommend him to the earnest consideration of the voters of this district, feeling confident that if nominated and elected he will fill the position in a manner satisfactory to all concerned and that the affairs of the fifth district at the hands of the county Board will be in safe keeping under his care.

Michelet Has Filed.

Wilhelm Michelet filed Tuesday as a candidate for the Republican nomination for county attorney. He will not have any opposition for the nomination, but it is rumored that Charles E. Boughton, of Red Lake Falls, will become an independent candidate.

Health Officer Grundy has received word from the State Board of Health that Thief River Falls can secure the state tuberculosis exhibit on October 3 and 4 if the city so desires. Dr. Grundy is taking the necessary steps to secure the exhibit.

Must Be Above Suspicion

Kidney and bladder ailments are so serious in their consequences, and if unchecked so often fatal that any remedy offered for their cure must be above suspicion. Foley Kidney Pills contain no harmful drugs, and have successfully stood a long and thorough test.—Sold by all Druggists.

To Judge the Stock.

Supt. H. R. Danielson, of the State Agricultural School of Crookston, has consented to come to Thief River Falls during the fair week and act as judge of live stock. This will insure the work being done right and no one will be favored.

"Is Life Worth Saving?"

Mrs. Mollie McRaney, Prentiss, Miss writes that she had a severe case of kidney and bladder trouble, and that four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cured her sound and well. She closes her letter by saying: "I heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to any sufferer of kidney disease. It saved my life."—Sold by all Druggists.

City Council.

At a meeting of the city council held Tuesday a resolution was passed calling for a special election on the 22nd of August to vote bonds to the amount of $25,000 to pay for the completion of the Auditorium. Those bonds were voted last spring, but owing to the fact that they were for a term of twenty five years, the bonding companies would not buy them, claiming that it is not legal to issue bonds for a period longer than twenty years. This makes it necessary to vote the bonds again.

E. M. Jaranson had in the lowest bid for making repairs to the water tank his bid being $315 for painting it both inside and outside and making the other necessary repairs.

A resolution was passed which gives each member of the police department a vacation for two weeks out of the year.

The matter of having the city hall, which is to be given to Pennington county, remodeled was talked over and it is quite likely that bids will be asked for in a short time.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd., 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

Announcement.

I hereby announce my candidacy as a candidate for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st senatorial district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all my efforts to secure the re-districting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'NEILL.

We really can't help it if Lindquist does not want Red Lake county divided.

One thing is rather certain and that is that Ed Smith will keep Frank Day busy this fall.

The last fair to be held in Red Lake County will be on August 3, 4 and 5, and it will be a hummer. Next year it will be the Pennington county fair.

The Democrats will hold their county convention in this city on Saturday. No doubt John King will come up from St. Paul and tell the boys what to do.

Perhaps John King is of the opinion that County Commissioner Lindquist is the farming population of Red Lake county and that is why he is so anxious to take the part of the farmers.

The next thing we know John King, who is championing the cause of the farmers in Red Lake county, will be pointing with pride to the glorious record of County Commissioner Lindquist.

There will be a bitter fight for the office of county attorney in Marshall county this year and it will be hard to predict the outcome. A. N. Eckstrom, of Warren, who is law partner of W. J. Brown, the present county attorney, will be a candidate against E. A. Brekke, of Argyle.

It is said that A. D. Stephens will not file as candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator from Polk county, but will let Representative Saugstad receive the nomination without opposition, and at the general election will become an independent candidate. Senator Stephens no doubt desires to put off defeat as long as possible.

D. P. O'Neil, of Thief River Falls, has filed as a candidate for representative in the upper end of this district comprising Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake counties. Among other issues that he declares himself for is liberal appropriations for advertising. We would be pleased to vote for Mr. O'Neil ourself.—Twin Valley Times.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS

Who Is a Liar, Hunt or King?

(From the Red Lake Falls Gazette, July 14.)

NOT THE GAZETTE.

The statement published in a recent issue of the Sunbeam, that the Gazette is being advertised for sale by John E. King is incorrect.

(From American Press, July 9)

FOR SALE—ONLY NEWSPAPER and job office in live town of 1,300; eight pages, all home print; independent Democratic; first class equiment; Babcock tapeless press, vast amount of type, all in excellent condition; big advertising and job business; third county printing; clears over $2000 per year; price $3,750, $2,000 cash, balance long time. JOHN E. KING, State Librarian, St. Paul, Minn.

In advertising the Red Lake Falls Gazette for sale, Mr. King says that he he gets one-third of the county printing. The Gazette is the official paper and naturally gets paid for all of the county printing. Where the money goes after it gets into King's hands we are unable to say. We suspect that one-third finds its way into the pockets of Harry Ives, but who in the world gets the other one third? We can't for the life of us understand.

The Roseau Region, which is edited by Representative G. H. Mattson, says that the election of Albert Berg as senator from this district is of more importance than anything else to Northern Minnesota and believes that the re-election of Senator A. L. Hanson would be a calamity. Mr. Berg formerly represented the Roseau county district and we would like to have the Region inform us as to what Mr. Berg accomplished for the district and what measures he supported that were in the interest of the people as a whole.

Editor Hunt, of the Sunbeam, says that he does not want to take any part in the county division fight, but desires to give his readers the facts, and then goes on to tell the people that the taxpayers of Pennington county will have to pay their share towards the new court house being erected at Red Lake Falls. They will if they remain in Red Lake county, but otherwise not. When the division is made Pennington county will have to assume its share of the bonded indebtedness of Red Lake county, but it will also be credited with what assets Red Lake county has. If Mr. Hunt wants to be fair let him state the facts.

SPEAK UP MR. CONNERS.

Thomas F. Conners, of Brooks, has an article in the last weeks issue of the Red Lake Falls Gazette which that paper says is "an argument against county division that is unanswerable." Mr. Conner says that he owned a farm in Scott county on which he paid taxes from $40 to $42 per year and one in Red Lake county on which his taxes are $33.10 this year. Scott county, he says, is a smaller county than Red Lake and for that reason he believes that the taxes are higher in Scott county than in Red Lake. We know nothing of the conditions as to the value of the two farms, but we do know that the average rate of taxation in Scott county is only about one-half what it is in Red Lake county.

As Brooks is Mr. Conners post-office, we presume his home is in the town of Poplar River. Poplar River is in the extreme southern part of the county, and, as was shown by an article published in this paper last week, the town of Poplar River in the past three years payed in less than $1,000 in taxes to the county road and bridge fund and during that time received appropriations from the county road and bridge fund to the amount of $2,518.91—nearly three times what was paid in. No wonder Mr. Conners is so anxious to have us remain in dear old Red Lake county.

And there is just one other thing we would like to call Mr. Conners attention to. Inasmuch as he lives in the town of Poplar River, he is no doubt acquainted with County Commissioner Pigeon. During the past four years Mr Pigeon has been a member of the county board he has always made it a point to vote to award the county printing to the highest bidder. This year the county commissioners are paying John King $1,500 more than it was necessary to pay for better service. Does Mr. Conners approve of this? Is that the way they did business down in Scott county?

STEENERSON AND HIS WORK.

That Halvor Steenerson, the Ninth district's member of congress, is looked upon at Washington as one of the great men of the nation, is becoming more evident each year. In the August number of the National Magazine, under the heading of "Flashlights of Public Men" Clarence Edward Curtis has the following to say of our representative in congress:

Once upon a time William Howard Taft at Barnesville, Minnesota, told his audience that he "was glad to stand up by your tall Congressman and congratulate you on having such a representative. He does you honor in Washington, and looks after your interests, as I can assure you." He referred to Halvor Steenerson, and expressed a truth to the Congressman's constituency that is common knowledge around Washington.

Mr. Steenerson has qualitis that cannot fail to command success—he is first of all a tireless worker; but even more than that he is resourceful. When the War Department decided against establishing a reservoir at Red Lake in his district, after Mr. Steenerson had succeeded in incorporating a provision (subject to the approval of the Department), in the Rivers and Harbors Bill, the Congressman simply took another hitch on the proposition, lined up the Senators and Representatives from Minnesota and North Dakota, and marched his colleagues forward in solid array in support of a measure to embrace all the head waters of the Red River of the North in a comprehensive general plan to establish a system of reservoirs that will regulate the streamflow in the interest of navigation and commerce, and prevent the disastrous floods that in recent years have destroyed millions of dollars in property. And the indications are that this latest move of Mr. Steenerson's in this direction is going to meet with success.

Mr. Steenerson was the pioneer in the advocacy of federal aid for the drainage of swamp lands. In January, 1906, he introduced bills; first, appropriating the proceeds of public land sales in the state of Minnesota, to form a permanent fund for the reclamation of swamp lands, and second, to provide for a drainage survey of all the ceded Indian lands in Minnesota. The last named bill became a part of the Indian appropriation law of 1906, and carried $10,000, and was continued in the two subsequent years, so that in 1909 the drainage survey was completed. This work was very thorough, costing about $30,000, and is the foundation upon which the present extensive drainage works are based. Although Congress might reasonably decline to appropriate money to reclaim lands already given away to the state it was urged by Mr. Steenerson that the swamp land grant did not apply to the ceded Indian lands in Minnesota, which were held in trust subject to entry at a price of four dollars, and some at $1.25 per acre, and as a result Congress, in 1908, passed the so-called Volstead bill which provides that unsold Indian lands and untaken public lands shall be subject to drainage assessment the same as if the property of a private person, with the proviso that purchasers at the tax sale of these lands must pay in addition to drainage assessment the amount due the Indians.

This has proven a very important law, for it enables the people themselves to reclaim all lands worth reclaiming. Over one thousand miles of drainage ditches under the new law are now in course of construction, and these will convert hundreds of thousands of acres of hitherto worthless and useless lands into cultivated farms and thousands of farm homes.

As chairman of the Committee on the Militia, Congressman Steenerson has had charge of many matters of broad national legislation, and has been the author of a number of bills for the benefit of the militia. The Steenerson-Dick law was cited in the Republican national platform as one of the splendid accomplishments of the party. He favored the reform of the rules so as to take from the speaker the power to appoint the standing committees and voted with the Insurgents in the late crisis in the House when the Speaker was removed from the powerful Committee on Rules, and in all important general legislation such as the tariff, and the regulation of railroads has been classed with progressive Republicans or Insurgents.

There are many reasons why men go to Congress—but the men who make their work a business after reaching Washington are the ones who ultimately succeed. In the case of the Minnesota Representative, he devotes 365 days a year to his district. He has been a powerful opponent of ship subsidies, not because of hostility to the upbuilding of the merchant marine, but because it was not the right way to accomplish that end, and because it involved the taking of millions out of the postal receipts at a time when the Department was trying in every way to economize to reduce the deficit, and because he wants every available dollar of postal receipts spent for extending and improving rural delivery service and better postal facilities to the people throughout the country. Although the older sections of the district are now pretty well covered by the rural service, it is his ambition to see the newer sections developed and occupied by settlers, so as to justify the extension of the rural service to every farm home.

Halvor Steenerson can certainly be counted as a successful Congressman, and whenever he wants anything in particular for his district he will get it sooner or later. If one plan doesn't work he invents a new system of approach, and with persistent determination keeps on the move until he lands what he goes after. His people at home have learned the force of such methods, and that is why they return him to Congress year after year.

IS THIS INDUSTRY THREATENED?

Under the new railroad bill any proposed advance in freight rates may be suspended by the Interstate Commerce Commission for ten months, pending full investigation as to its reasonableness, and "the burden of proof to show that the increased rate is just shall be upon the common carrier." In other words, railroads cannot levy an increased transportation tax upon the country without showing good reason for it. Thus the principle that railroads shall not, on the whole, earn more than a fair return upon the investment is pretty firmly established.

It is rather fashionable in railroad circles to say that this condition must lead to Government ownership of the roads, because private capital will not venture into a field where its gains are strictly limited and there is no impregnable guaranty against loss. But out of the seventeen billion dollars nominally invested in railroads, eleven billion is very much in that position today. This eleven billion is represented by bonds and preferred stock the returns on which are strictly limited to four or five per cent, though there is no indubitable guaranty against loss.

Wall Street has a more relevant criticism. Setting a limit upon railroads' dividends, it says, will tend to discourage the trade in railroad shares. There will be less opportunity for whooping Great Northern up to 348, as was done in 1906 under the stimulus of a prospective melon cutting, or for advancing Union Pacific from 138 to 195 within four months, with a "trade" of about fifteen million shares. In this objection, we think, there is considerable force. Government regulation does, to an extent, threaten Wall Street's premier industry and tend to make railroad stocks a legitimate investment instead of an object of stock-market manipulation. But before condemning the new bill on that ground one should take into consideration that the magnificent advances mentioned were followed, the next year, by a panic in which Great Northern sold at 107 and Union Pacific at par.—Saturday Evening Post.

Foley Kidney Pills Have Cured Me.

The above is a quotation from a letter written by H. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind. "I contracted a severe case of kidney trouble. My back gave out and pained me. I seemed to have lost all strength and ambition, was bothered with dizzy spells, my head would swim and specks float before my eyes. I took Foley Kidney Pills regularly and am now perfectly well and feel like a new man. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me."—Sold by all Druggists.

The Chautauqua held at Detroit last week was a failure in point of attendance and also financially. The promoters face a heavy deficit. The Detroit Record declared that less than 200 people turned out to hear Governor Folk of Missouri, and less than one-half that number heard Hon. Richard Yates, former governor of Illinois. A strong bill of attractions had been provided and the record is quite at a loss to figure out why the attendance was so light.

A lady who understands advertising says "No lady wishes to be looked upon as a shopping fiend, she does not care to go into a store and have a merchant show all his stock in order to find out whether he keeps what she wishes to purchase and whether the article is sold at the price she can afford. It is easier and pleasanter to look through the advertisements in a paper than to bore the clerks and waste her own time. Next to the local news items, the advertisements in a paper stating articles for sale with prices, will keep much of that money that goes to the large cities at home."

A boy by the name of Clarence Olson, living near Fosston, died last Friday from injuries received by diving in a swimming hole in Poplar river from a step ladder. He was trying to imitate the high diver who appeared with a carnival show at Fosston, and had climbed the ladder higher than usual, falling forward with the expectation of turning a summersault and landing upon his back in the water. Instead of doing this, however, he went head first into the water, which was quite shallow, and struck the bottom with the back of his neck, injuring his spine in such a manner that he became paralyzed below the neck. He died the following day.

Hay a Profitable Crop.

The drouth in North Dakota is proving a profitable thing for the settlers living northeast of here and as a result thousands of tons of hay that annually has gone to waste will this year be cut, and the prices will be sufficiently large to pay the settlers a good profit for their labor. Many North Dakota farmers have made arrrangements to drive their stock over here to have it kept during the winter, while others will have the hay cut and shipped to North Dakota. Wild hay will be worth in the neighborhood of $15 per ton in Thief River Falls this winter.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Gifford Pinchot has left for California to take the stump in behalf of Hiram Johnson, who is seeking the gubernatorial nomination and who is endorsed for that honor by the Lincoln-Roosevelt league of California. Mr. Pinchot also will take the stump in opposition to Congressman McKinlay, one of the leading standpatters in the lower house. Shortly preceding his departure Mr. Pinchot held a conference with ex-President Roosevelt.

Theodore Roosevelt has declared with emphasis that he has taken no stand as yet in favor of either the progressives or the regulars in the Republican party and he desires to correct any impression that he is showing favoritism. Of the situation within the party in New York state he said that he saw only harmony ahead.

Theodore Roosevelt and Charles E. Hughes, governor of New York, held their long expected and much heralded conference on New York state politics at Sagamore Hill. No word of the result was allowed to become known beyond the fact that the entire political situation in New York state was taken up.

President Taft has stated the position he is taking with regard to Republican state platforms and candidates. The president does not think he should be called upon to write the party declarations in the different commonwealths or to name men for any of the elective offices.

Professor Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, will be the Democratic candidate for governor of New Jersey at the election next November. This was decided at a conference between Professor Wilson and a dozen or more prominent New Jersey Democrats.

Determined to make a fight for the governorship of New Hampshire Mrs. Marilla M. Ricker has presented to the secretary of state her declaration of candidacy for the Republican nomination at the direct primary in September, accompanied by the $100 fee required by law.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Scores of forest fires, big and little, are among the consequences of the long drouth in Montana. From every section of the state and from adjoining states comes news of the destruction of timber by flames; stories of gallant warfare against fire by forest rangers and settlers and tales of peril to the logging camps, ranches and villages.

Fifty representative Minneapolis men will take hold of a new Union station plan that a sub-committee presented to the public affairs committee of the Commercial club and which has already met the approval of the heads of all roads entering Minneapolis except the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, to whom it has not yet been submitted. The cost of the structure is estimated at $3,650,000.

Surveyors for the Milwaukee railway are at work in the vicinity of Fergus Falls on a line direct to Winnipeg from Hutchinson. It is the supposition that the company, by building into Fergus Falls, will enter Barnesville and either run a line directly to Winnipeg parallel with the Great Northern or else enter Fargo from the east and then swing northward.

Dean W. S. Pattee of the college of law at the university announced that rumors of his resignation from the law college are without foundation. The name of Judge Charles L. Lewis of the state supreme court, who was defeated for renomination at the Republican state convention, has been mentioned in connection with the deanship at the law college.

According to reports which have come to the state board of health large quantities of fish in the shallow lakes throughout Minnesota are perishing during this dry season. One complaint from a doctor at Cambridge said that a lake near there was almost covered with dead fish.

At a meeting of St. Paul progressive Republicans resolutions were adopted protesting against Senator E. E. Smith continuing as chairman of the Republican state central committee and denouncing the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill as a repudiation of the pledges of the party.

About 1,000 delegates from all parts of the country will attend the meeting of the League of American Municipalities when it meets in St. Paul Aug. 23, 24, 25 and 26.

E. W. Durant, for sixty years a resident of Stillwater, has left for Charleston, S. C., to make his future home with his son.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

On pleas of guilty Judge Taylor, at a special term of the district court at Moorhead, sentenced three young men who were caught attempting to burglarize the Moorhead Hardware company on June 30. Ernest E. Gulles, who had served a reformatory sentence at Syracuse, N. Y., was sent to the prison at Stillwater for two years and Walter Thompson and Harry McGregory were committed to the reformatory at St. Cloud for indeterminate terms.

John Dahlin, a farmer residing near Milaca, committed suicide by hanging himself from the limb of a tree near his home. He was despondent because of trouble with his sons and had attempted to end his life several times before.

Two "mashers" were sentenced in police court at Minneapolis to straight terms in the workhouse. In sentencing the men Judge Leary said he would do everything in his power to stop "mashing" on Mill City streets.

Harold Proehl, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Proehl of Mapleton, is dead at Mankato as the result of a fractured skull. The lad was playing around a hay loading device, when he was struck on the head.

The "army worm" has destroyed the entire timothy crop near Heron Lake and the insects, in unprecedented numbers, are ravaging the fields in other portions of the state.

Arthur Caswell, the twelve-year-old son of Arthur Caswell of Anoka, accidentally shot himself in the leg. The bullet could not be located and an X ray will be used.

Fire which started in the engine room of the Park Rapids Lumber company destroyed the planing mill and drying sheds, entailing a loss of $30,000 or more.

James Mulvey, millionaire lumberman, is dead at Stillwater following a lingering illness. He was seventy-five years old. Mr. Mulvey was born in England. He reached Stillwater fifty-seven years ago and was prominently identified with logging and lumber operations on the St. Croix and other sections of the Northwest and the Pacific coast. He served in the Civil war as a member of Company C, Eighth Minnesota volunteers.

ABOUT THE STATE

ADOPTS STRONG RESOLUTIONS

Upper Mississippi River Improvement Association Ends Its Convention at St. Paul.

The ninth annual convention of the Upper Mississippi River Improvement association at St. Paul concluded its deliberations and adjourned after adopting a series of strong resolutions in which the following points were given special emphasis:

First—That the use of the Mississippi river for carriage of freight commensurate with the future needs of production and exchange requires a six-foot channel from St. Paul to St. Louis; ample terminals, adequate facilities for handling freight and craft which will insure satisfactory freight service.

Second—That it is the duty of municipalities along the river to see that such terminals and landings are provided.

Third—That it is the duty of Mississippi valley shippers to encourage the construction of modern craft and to use the river route, if possible, no matter how small the cargo.

Fourth—That five citizens be appointed at each principal shipping point along the upper river to further the work of the association in its efforts to have the river improved for navigation.

Fifth—That an educational campaign be inaugurated at once to include public meetings at principal shipping points along the river and a general propaganda through the press.

Sixth—That the reservoir system of the upper Mississippi be endorsed and that reservoirs at the headwaters of all our rivers be advocated as a means of developing inland waterways.

Seventh—That St. Paul's policy of local harbor improvement be commended and that in the construction of an enlarged harbor and a new depot lie splendid opportunities for cooperation between water and rail to advantage of the entire Northwest.

DRY DISTRICT IS EXTENDED

Supplementary Order Affecting Sale of Liquor on Ceded Lands.

Prohibition will be extended by the national government on ceded lands in Minnesota.

The bureau of Indian affairs has decided to enforce its anti-liquor regulations on a larger area of these lands than previously has been attempted.

All the lands within and adjacent to the White Earth and Leech Lake reservations will be embraced in the prohibited territory. Some places within this area previously have been permitted to maintain saloons, but these will be abolished now and the ban on the introduction of intoxicating liquors will be applied to the following counties:

Becker, Cass, Clay, Hubbard, Mahnomen and Norman; southwestern portions of Beltrami and Itasca and southeastern part of Polk; southern portions of Clearwater and Red Lake; those parts of Crow Wing and Wadena lying north of the Mississippi and the northern portion of Otter Tail.

This action was taken by the Indian bureau in order to protect the red men adequately against whisky and also to enforce, so far as its appropriation will permit, the provisions of the treaties by which the lands were ceded.

These conventions prohibit the introduction of intoxicating liquors in the whole northern part of the state, except by consent of congress or the president, and, if carried out strictly according to their letter, it is said, would embrace even Minneapolis and Duluth. There is no present likelihood, however, of the Indian bureau invading these two cities with its temperance crusade.

Moorhead, with forty-five saloons, where the thirsty of Fargo have for years secured their drinks, is included in the territory made dry by the Indian bureau's latest edict.

Alleged Italian Murderer Now a Free Man.

Pasquale Chorlotto, an Italian, fifty-three years of age, who is under sentence for twenty years' imprisonment in Italy for the alleged murder of a neighbor, but who escaped to this country, is a free man.

He was arrested at Duluth recently, but the Italian authorities refused to stand the cost of extradition and urged the immigration department at Washington to deport him as an undesirable citizen. Chorlotto had been in America more than three years, however, and could not be deported.

Minnesota Educator Dead.

Samuel B. Green, dean of the newly organized State School of Forestry, died suddenly in the state forest reserve at Lake Itasca, while working with a body of students, teaching them experiment work in forestry. Apoplexy was the cause of Dean Green's death.

FARMERS GET MORE MONEY

Volume of Business at South St. Paul Increasing.

A gain of $6,000,000 in the amount of money paid to the farmers of the Northwest by meat packers and other buyers of live stock at South St. Paul is indicated by the figures of the Packingtown bank clearings for the first six months of the present year. From January to July, 1910, the total was $24,340,969.25, while $18,342,401.73 was the total for the same period in 1909.

While part of the gain in banking operations is to be attributed to the growth of South St. Paul, President J. J. Flanagan of the Stock Yards National bank ascribes by far the greater portion of the increase to the enlarged operations of the market and the higher prices that packers have paid for stock purchased from the farmers. The average gain of a million dollars a month at the South St. Paul yards reflects the growing magnitude of the live stock industry in the Northwest and also that of the local market.

It further indicates that farmers in general are engaging more extensively in live stock raising because of the increased profits and that confidence in the business has been restored, and is now more firmly fixed among Northwestern farmers than at any time since the 1907 season, which was marked by financial disaster.

Freed From Stillwater on Plea of Charity Worker.

About three years ago, Myra Jane Williams, a friendless girl serving a life sentence in Stillwater penitentiary, expressed to the prison evangelist a desire to have some friend to write to. The prison preacher got her into correspondence with the wife of a charity worker in Salt Lake City whom he knew and this new friend, Mrs. E. T. Mackey, made a plea for the girl before the state pardon board which secured her release. Mrs. Mackey promised the board that she would take the girl into her own home and see that she would be well taken care of.

Myra Williams, according to the story Mrs. Mackey told the board, had not had a home since she was less than three years old. While quite young she married a man whose reputation was not good. They drifted to Brainerd and Williams forced his wife to an improper life. She had a baby and one night when she had been out drinking with three or four men and was coming home with them she tossed the child into the Mississippi as they were crossing the bridge. She was tried and given a life sentence for murder in the first degree.

At the prison she had a good record, but was somewhat despondent.

ACCUSED OF DOUBLE MURDER

Farmer Alleged to Have Poisoned Two Children.

Martin O'Malley, a wealthy farmer of Dereynane township, Le Sueur county, has been arrested by the sheriff and lodged in the county jail, charged in the warrant with the murder of his stepchildren, Francis Bergel, aged five years, and Mary Bergel, aged three.

A month ago O'Malley, a widower of forty, and with eight children, married Mrs. Bergel, a widow with three children, the oldest of whom was six years. Not long afterward two of the Bergel children died and were buried. A Le Sueur Center doctor diagnosed their disease as spinal meningitis, but suspicion was aroused, the bodies exhumed and the stomachs sent to the state university for examination.

The chemists' report was that the children had been poisoned by arsenic, which was found in their livers and stomachs. The arrest of O'Malley followed.

Cut to Pieces Under Engine.

Jack Scott, a negro porter employed on the Soo line, was run over by a Northern Pacific engine in the Union depot yards at St. Paul. The body was dragged fifty feet and mangled beyond recognition.

Falls to Her Death.

Mrs. Marie Read of West Duluth died from the effects of injuries sustained from falling down a flight of stairs. She was seventy-five years of age.

AND THEREFORE, that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, which by reason of the facts aforesaid has become operative, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the land and premises therein described and covered thereby, situate, lying and being in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, and described as follows, to-wit:

INOCULATION FOR LEGUMES.

Considering the value which attaches to the growing of legumes as a means of restoring soil fertility much practical interest will attach to circular No. 63 issued by the bureau of plant industry at Washington under the title "Methods of Legume Inoculation." In this brief pamphlet are discussed the two methods which are at present followed in soil inoculation preparatory to the growing of leguminous crops. There is pointed out the fact—conclusively demonstrated in this and foreign countries—that each species of legume may be inoculated more successfully by using the bacteria isolated from that species than those isolated from some other species. The two methods of inoculation are by transfer of soil from an established field of the legume which one intends to grow and by the use of pure nitrogen fixing cultures. In the former case from 200 to 300 pounds of soil from a healthy old field of the same crop or a thrifty new field are mixed with several times its weight of ordinary soil and the mixture drilled or broadcasted on the land to be sowed to the legume. If broadcasted the field should be harrowed immediately, and, if possible, this should be done toward evening or on a cloudy day, as sunshine is very harmful to the bacteria. In the second case a bottle of the pure culture of the proper kind of bacteria is opened shortly before the seed is to be planted and mixed with the proper quantity of water and this applied to the seed in such a way that all of it will be moistened, though not soaked. Drying of the seed may be hastened by adding sufficient dry, sifted earth. Attempts to inoculate soil by either of the above methods may not be successful if climatic or other conditions are not suited to the growth of the crop in a given locality. However, the department of agriculture is anxious to aid in this work of introducing the growth of the legumes in new sections and will furnish the pure cultures free in reasonable quantities, requiring only the filling in of blank reports, which are forwarded for the purpose from time to time.

A SERIOUS CORN PEST.

The larger cornstalk borer is an insect pest that does much damage annually to the corn crop from Maryland south and as far west as Kansas. It was originally an enemy of the sugar cane and is supposed to have been introduced into this country with cane cuttings from the West Indies, Central and South America. It is also found in British Guiana, Java and Australia. The damage by the worm is of two kinds—that done first in the tender, growing stalks when the leaves and the crown are often riddled and that which is done later in the season when the worm bores about in the base of the stalk just above and below the surface of the ground. This damage is not always apparent—in fact, seldom so unless the weakened stalk is broken over by the wind, which prevents the maturing of the ear. In some southern cornfields losses from this source have run as high as from 30 to 50 per cent. As in the case of other pests which work injury to grain crops, the work of the stalk borer can be largely done away by a system of crop rotation in which small grains and legumes are used, as the pest does not persist unless there are stalks in which pupae may spend the winter. In case corn follows corn the damage done by them may be reduced by plowing the corn stubs under to a good depth early in the spring or by removing the whole stalks from the field and burning them.

THE CHINESE WAY.

An entertaining correspondent of the Rural New Yorker gives a very distinct account of Chinese agriculture as followed in the province of Shantung, one of the most densely populated of the empire. One farm which he visited consisted of 2.5 acres and supported a family of twelve people, besides one work cow, one donkey and two pigs. A forty acre tract in America as densely populated would afford a living for 192 human beings, sixteen cows, sixteen donkeys and thirty-two pigs. The crops which were grown on this Chinese farm were wheat or barley (both of which crops were kept hand hoed), millet, soy beans and sweet potatoes. Instead of hauling their manure afield, as here, the Chinese farmer takes considerable quantities of soil from the field to his premises and there enriches it with stable manure, night soil and every possible kind of refuse which, decomposed, will nourish plants. When this is thoroughly composted and its fertilizing elements brought to the right condition it is dried, pulverized and applied to the soil as is the case with our concentrated commercial fertilizers. The Chinaman is behind the American in a good many ways, but the latter could learn many a lesson in soil conservation from the orient.

RED LAKE COUNTY FAIR NEXT WEEK

POLITICAL POTPOURRI

What the Red Lake County Office Seekers Are Thinking of These Days.

Quite a Nnmber of Contests on for the Different County Offices.

As the day of of the primary election approaches it is quite evident that there will be quite a number of contests for office in Red Lake county this year. As near as can be learned there will be a contest for every office, with the possible exception of county auditor. Mr. Letandresse, the present incumbent, is a south end man, but he is not taking his orders from the gang down there, and is looked upon as a straightforward and competent official. Of course if the north end wanted to bring out a good man and give him a solid support there is no question but that the defeat of Mr. Letandresse could be accomplished, but, as the county is sure to be divided and Mr. Letandresse has made good, it would be spending a whole lot of energy for no good result. Therefore it is quite probable that Mr. Letandresse will be given a clear field.

For county attorney, Wilhelm Michelet will undoubtedly secure the nomination without opposition, but at the general election it is rumored that he will be opposed by Charles E. Boughton, of Red Lake Falls.

There is going to be quite a contest for the Republican nomination for sheriff and it is more than likely that the winner will have another contest at the general election. L. A. Nelson, the present sheriff likes the job so well that he is willing to serve again, and Charlie Follman, of St. Hilaire, also wants the job. The result is going to be a contest—and it will be a lively one.

Ira C. Richardson, who was appointed judge of probate by Gov. Eberhart and has made an excellent official, desires to again be elected as does also Ben Christianson. Either will make good officials and it is simply going to be a matter of personal choice with the voters.

Clerk of Court O. W. Johnson will again be a candidate, and it is rumored that Oscar Post, of St. Hilaire, will be his opponent for the Republican nomination. Mr. Johnson has made a good official and his friends believe that he is entitled to a second term. Mr. Post is one of the pioneer residents of the county and has many friends who will work for his success.

H. E. Ives believes that the county's cash is safer in his hands than in the hands of any other person the voters could name and will ask for the Republican nomination. He will be opposed by G. G. Keneseth, of Red Lake Falls. Mr. Keneseth recently made a visit to this city and states he received the promise of considerable support here. He is also very strong in the south end of the county and will get many votes in all sections of the county.

Frank Jeffers will of course again be candidate for register of deeds. He will secure the Democratic nomination without opposition and it is quite likely that E. L. Quist will go after the Republican nomination and will have no opposition. The fight will come at the general election.

All Liquor to Be Sold Over the Bar.

At a meeting of the saloonkeepers of Thief River Falls held last Thursday evening, it was agreed to discontinue the sale of liquor, wine or beer except over the bar. In other words no jugs of liquor or cans of beer will be sold. Everything that is sold will have to be drank in the saloon. This action was taken by the saloonkeepers to prevent the possibility of any liquor going into the hands of the Indians. The recent closing orders of "Pussyfoot" Johnson has frightened the local dealers.

Joseph Sleff Dead.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: On Monday a telegram was received here containing the sad news that Joseph Sleff, son of Mrs. Louis Sleff, had died at Omat, Washington, the previous day, after a brief illness with typhoid pneumonia.

The deceased had been in the west only a few months. He left Red Lake Falls last March with a string of horses belonging to his step-father, Louis Sleff. The horses were used by A. Guthrie & Co., railroad contractors, and Joe was there to look after the horses.

A few weeks ago, in a letter to his parents, he said that he was not feeling very well, but he was not alarmed over his condition. On the 9th of July he rode up to a ranch on horseback and told the people there that he was sick. There he was cared for by the lady of the house until he could be taken to the company hospital at Omat. He seemed to improve and encouraging reports came from the west until the announcement of his death which came as a shock to the family and many friends in this city.

Deceased was a bright boy and the announcement of his untimely death causes general regret. He was seventeen years old last December. He was born in Chicago but the family had lived in Red Lake Falls for a number of years. He is survived by his mother, his step-father, five brothers and two sisters.

The remains were shipped to Chicago and are to be interred at Waldheim cemetery beside those of his father. All of the members of the family have gone to Chicago to be in attendance at the funeral.

Working The Roads.

Any convenient method of working a road that will prevent the formation of ruts is an important feature of road building. Everybody knows that ruts hold water which softens the road bed. The process of dragging and smoothing a road is so simple that in the opinion of those best enabled to have intelligent opinions on the subject, there is no excuse for allowing a road to remain rutty and rough. The split log drag is cheaply made and of tremendous utility in road work. Every farmer can have one with so little expense that it is surprising that each one does not make and use one on the road adjacent to his premises after each storm. If no logs are at hand for the purpose, the same contrivance may be had by using some timbers from the lumber yard at an expense of two or three dollars. The drag should be used when the road is wet—a time when puddling and smoothing are easily done. Every farmer can obtain useful information, inluding pictures showing how to construct the contrivances named, by asking Geo. W. Cooley, state highway commisioner, capitol, St. Paul, for his bulletins on the subject.

Goes to Richville.

Ed Iverson last week traded his farm in the town of Clover Leaf to M. V. Evenson and T. P. Hamre for a stock of hardware at Richville, south of here on the Soo line. Mr. Iverson left for Richville the first of the week to take charge of the stock. His family will continue to reside in Clover Leaf.

Put Out of Business.

The summer resort of Ebner Smith near Walker has been virtually put out of business by the government men who are engaged in trying to keep liquor out of the so called Indian territory. The proprietor was making no attempt to sell liquor to his guests or to any one else, but most of the guests came supplied with beer flasks of whiskey. The government men went through the grips and baggage of the guests and confiscated all the liquor found. As a result the summer tourists all pulled up and left the camp on the day following the raid. Some of them had engaged cottages for the season.

Cheap Lands.

During the past nine months says the Osakis Review, it is stated by the authorities at Washington 15,000 settlers have returned to the States from Canada since the drouth which has ruined the prospects of thousands of settlers across the border, there is a general backward movement that promises to assume unheard of proportions. Even in districts of Alberta where the Canadian governments maintains its irrigation projects farmers are anxious to get back if they can sell their holding. The American farmers are dissatisfied with the character of the land and the climate adds to their discontent. How any person who is looking for a farm home can pass up the opportunities for cheap land on this side of the border and the undisputed advantages offered in God's country, and track across the bleak, dry prairies of Northwest Canada to take a barren homestead, is beyond understanding. There are not only great opportunities to acquire cheap, productive lands right here in Minnesota, where the farmer is surrounded with conveniences that it will take decades to bring about in the far Northwest, but there are better semi arid lands on this side of the border that may be homesteaded, where the climate is better, the distance from market much less, and freight rates materially lower. The past season with its attendant hardships in many sections of the country where crops have been burned out by the heat and drouth, will not be without its advantages. It will prove the biggest boost for farm lands that this section has experienced in years, and will emphasize stronger than ever the claim that right here is a section of country where crop failure was never known.

Hundreds of farmers have left this section the past few years and gone into Canada where they have been lured by the talk of free land and cheap land. Many left their farms in this Garden of Eden in the hands of renters, and will have something to fall back on now that they may be forced to return to the States. Others have sold out their farms here and will buy back in many cases. Talk about cheap lands why, it is a matter of wonderment among people who know what good farm lands are that land in this locality is selling as low as it is today. There is no place in the United States, probably, where lands of like productiveness are selling as low as in this vicinity. Farms no better than ours are selling in Iowa and Wisconsin for $100 and over the acre. And the time is just as surely coming when farm lands in this section will be in demand at these prices—That time will come when farmers get over passing up the best country that lies outdoors and pushing on into Northwest Canada, Montana and Dakota to buy cheap land. There wil always be cheap land out there. It is always going to be unreliable in productiveness. Land in such countries will be cheap in price and dear at any price.

The Minnesota Seed Corn Week

The Extension Division of the Minnesota Department of Agriculture is insistent upon holding a seed corn selection week, from September 12 to 17, next, throughout the state, and this early impresses upon the farmers the fact that there is no source from which they can get better seed for the main part of their crop than from a variety of corn that has done well on their own farms. In his circular, recently issued, Supt. Wilson, of the division, says: "Seed corn, to be reasonably sure of growing the following year, should be selected early enough in the fall so that it may become quite thoroughly dried before cold weather," and that in this state it should be picked and husked before October. It is often possible to select enough seed corn in one day to largely increase the value of the crop the following year over what the farmer would receive if he neglects to save his seed in good condition, and consequently is obliged to use weak seed.

DEMS HOLD CONVENTION.

Leaders from the North End of the County in Full Control.

John E. King's Name Not Even Mentioned as a Delegate to the State Convention.

The Democrats of Red Lake county held their county convention in Thief River Falls last Saturday afternoon. The convention was dominated by the Thief River Falls leaders, and, they operated a steam roller without any friction. John E. King, state librarian and big chief in the Democratic state affairs was not even mentioned as a delegate to the state convention.

The convention was called to order by W. B. Fuller and he was named temporary secretary.

Upon the motion of John Morgan, the chair was given the power to appoint committees on credentials, permanent organization and resolutions and Mr. Fuller named the following committees:

Credentials-S. Kenison, Herman Berndt and M. C. Burns.

Permanent Organizations-C. C. Jackson, Nels Berg and Martin Moylan.

Resolutions-Milton Forder, Math Barzen and N. W. Tarrant.

After a short recess the committee on credentials reported those entitled to seats in the convention and the committee on permanent organization reported that the temporary organization be made permanent.

The committee on resolutions reported a short set of resolutions. They endorsed the administration of the late Gov. Johnson, declared for re-apportionment tariff revision good roads and a liberal appropriation to advertise Minnesota. No mention was was made of county option.

John Morgan then made a motion that the chair appoint a commitee of three to name nine delegates to the state convention. The chair named Milton Forder, C. C. Jackson and S. Kenison and these gentlemen named the following delegates:

George Jarman,
Math Barzen,
O. R. Crandall,
Frank Jeffers,
John Morgan,
E. M. Stanton,
George Williams,
Mike McAndrews,
W. B. Fuller.

The delegates were instructed to vote as a unit on all questions, but otherwise uninstructed.

Chairman Fuller was given power to name the Democratic county central committee.

N. W. Tarrant was selected as Red Lake county's member of the state central committee.

May Take Out a License.

The Minnesota Supreme Court in an opinion written by Justice O'Brien, has sustained the validity of the law passed by the last session of the legislature, requiring all persons buying milk or cream, for the manufacture of butter or cheese to take out a state license. This means that approximately 1800 buyers must pay a fee of $1.00 forthwith or be subject to prosecution for violation of the law.

The statue went into effect January 1st, and at that time about 1200 persons in the state took the examination prescribed by the dairy and food commission. R. E. Cobb, a St. Paul dealer objected to the state however, on the ground that it was an unwarranted interfence with business and hence unconstitutional, and went into the courts with the case. When this action was taken, Andrew French, Dairy and Food Commissioner, stopped the collection of all fees for licenses, pending a decision of the case. Mr. Cobb won in the lower courts but the state appealed to the Supreme Court and has just won a decision.

Notices will be sent out at once to all persons who passed the required examination that they may now get their licenses on payment of the fee. A warning will be issued to all others buying milk and cream for manufacturing purposes, then they must conform to the statue. One dollar pays for a two years license.

Agent Killed Himself.

Dawes Amidson, aged 22 years and station agent at Hendrum, killed himself last Friday. The young man went to the railroad culvert a short distance from the village, some time during Friday afternoon and there committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. No reason for the unfortunate young man's desire to end his life can be given, as his habits were known to be of the best and no trouble of any kind has been apparent. The auditor had been at Hendrum Friday and reports that any shortage there may have been was so trifling as to have been out of the question as a motive for the deed.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd., 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

Announcement.

I hereby announce my candidacy as a candidate for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st senatorial district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all my efforts to secure the re-districting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'NEILL.

Last weeks issue of the Red Lake Falls Gazette had nothing to say about county division. Can it be possible that John King has deserted the farmers?

The Roseau Times celebrated its sixteenth birthday last week. Ever since the Times started it has been under the editorial management of Roger J. Bell, and that gentleman has perhaps done more for the up-building of Roseau county than any dozen men that could be named. We hope to see Mr. Bell continue to edit the Times for many years to come—for the Times without Bell as editor would be like Rome without a pope.

DIRECT ELECTION OF SENATORS.

A New York newspaper has been interviewing the members of the United States senate on the question of direct election of senators, and it found thirty-three senators for it, fourteen frankly against it, and fifteen non-committal. Fifteen were absent when the poll was taken. Of the fourteen senators who were not afraid to express their opposition to this extension of popular government, ten are "regular" Republicans and four are Bourbon Democrats.

The poll is interesting, but it is neither important nor conclusive. It is not a question whether the senators desire direct election, but whether the people desire it. This is not a move in the interests of senatorial aspirations, but in the interests of the people's aspirations for closer control of their government, and for a greater manifestation of government by and for the people. That is why it is not particularly important how the senators feel about it

The poll is not conclusive because it is notorious that there are senators who favor direct election openly, because they know their talk rings pleasantly in the ears of the voters of the state, but who oppose it secretly.

The people need not fear what is done in the open in Washington. They do need to fear what is done in secret. The fate of a measure providing for direct election of senators does not depend on how senators talk about it for publication, but on what they do with it in the committee rooms.

The house of representatives has passed several times a measure providing for a constitutional amendment making senators elective by the people. These measures invariably have been sent to the proper committee in the senate, and that has been the end of them.

So it isn't important at all whether every senator talks in favor of direct election of senators, or against it.

What counts is whether the people want it, and whether their demand for it is strong enough to force a few more state legislatures to call upon congress to summon a constitutional convention for the purpose of amending the constitution so as to provide for it.

Nearly enough states have demanded a constitutional convention now. When two or three more make the demand, congress has no option under the constitution but to call the convention.

There isn't much use bothering to ask congress to submit such an amendment. It won't do it. It wouldn't do it if every member of the senate had gone on record in favor of it. Going on record in favor of it is one thing; getting it out of the committee is another. It is easy enough to get senators to go on record in favor of it. It is impossible to get the senate to adopt it.

Let a few more states demand that congress call a constitutional convention. In that way only is it possible to have direct election of senators.—Duluth Herald.

FARMERS AND AUTOMOBILES.

That the prodigal farmer is likely to ruin the country has been pointed out several times of late by persons whose names carry weight in the highest financial circles says the Saturday Evening Post. "A large class of the American people are running wild in useless extravagance; they are buying several hundred million dollars' worth of automobiles annually," said recently, an able banker who probably owns half a dozen of those ruinous contrivances himself. He added that the farmers, whose economy had heretofore been our salvation, were now rioting in the front ranks of the wasteful crew. Another financier declared that "the mad desire of farmers for automobiles" had lost a single Western state millions of dollars.

No doubt, prosperity in this country has been overdone-that is, it has become so extensive that a good many of the people who create the country's wealth are now actually spending it. From the point of view of high finance that condition is dangerous; the ideal condition is one in which much wealth is produced, but its producers are unable to retain more than enough for their needs, thus leaving all superfluous spending to the manipulators of wealth, who, being comparatively few and intelligent, may be trusted to keep extravagance within safe bounds.

Even from the point of view of high finance the situation is even far more desperate. The diamond studded, tailor-clad, touring-car farmer is pretty much a myth. A five cent cigar is still the limit of extravagance for a majority of those who produce the country's wealth. The forthcoming census report on average farm incomes will probably cause alarmed financiers to cheer up.

Andrew Trovoten's Views.

Editor "News."—In answer to your suggestion that the farmers of this county express themselves, regarding the pending proposition to establish Penington County, allow me to say that I am heartily in favor thereof for the following reasons:

1st Red Lake County contains too large territory for one county It always has, and always will be a question what the approximate number of townships in a county should be, on account of conditions being so different in localities, but McCleary, in his "Civil Government," which for years has been a textbook in our public schools, says that a county should not be larger than at th every resident therein can start from home in the morning, drive to the county seat, do his business at the court house, and return home the same day. Now I feel confident that every farmer will appreciate the logic of this reasoning, as it is generally next to impossible for a farmer to leave home days at a time, without serious inconvenience. It costs more, proportionately, to exercise government properly with very large counties. For instance a criminal case from here would cost the county three times as much mileage as it would in Pennington County, and mileage is the biggest part of the expense for sheriff, witnesses, and jurors. Of course the grand jury members will be doubled, by division, so the saving in their mileage will be offset, but not so with the sheriff and witnesses. There is a large net saving in the small county.

The members of the grand jury will be located, on an average, twice as closely, so that they can get at crime with reasonable accuracy, which is more than they can do where the county is as large as Red Lake. As for those county officers who get fees, it makes no difference in expense, whether the county is large or small. The officers who get a salary, will come cheapest in a county that is just large enough to keep one man busy in each office, for if they have deputies and clerks, they will waste most of their own time looking after them.

2nd I favor Pennington County, because I do not believe in taxation without representation. The way it is we have no more proportionate representation on the "Eleven Towns" than the Indians there used to have.

3rd I favor division because this county has two rival towns. One has the county seat, and the other wants it, and will never give up the fight till its "it," as it is entitled to have it for the majority wants it there. Now this factional fight is a continual drain on the county treasury, not to mention the individual expense to those carrying on the fight. This condition also necessitates the keeping in office of county commissioners who will disregard the law so far as it pertains to allowing a vote on county seat and re-districting the county in proportion to population. Now, dear farmer friend, how much would you bet on the integrity of a man who is bound to disregard certain laws or else sell out those who put him into office? No, this business has got to be stopped if we shall ever get a true county government of the people, by the people, and for the people. And if they have as shrewd politicians and business-men down at Red Lake Falls now as they had 15-16 years ago, in their campaign against Crookston, they will take it mighty cool during the coming campaign, as they know they would be only buying trouble and expense by hindering the setting off of Pennington county.

I should like to have written a few pages more on this subject, but I do not wish to tire the readers, nor take up too much of the space in your valuable paper.

Let me say just a few words in regard to my friend D. P. O'Neil, whom, I am greatly pleased to note, is a candidate for the legislature. Mr. O'Neil is a man who is ALTOGETHER with the common people. Nothing half-hearted about him. He has had experience in the legislature already. He is not only a farmer but a true STATESMAN, and a man who is not afraid to talk his convictions against the special interests. In fact, the only fault I have noticed in him is that he may use a trifle strong language in criticizing the "big guns", and we can forgive that. Let's all pull together for O'Neil, and get a "somebody" down to St. Paul from this district as there are plenty of stick "nobodies".

Very sincerely yours for Pennington county and popular government

Agricultural School Opening.

The Minnesota School of Agriculture will open Monday, October 3rd, 1910, and continue until March 22nd, following. Students should be present on the first day of the term, and in the meantime should correspond with Prof J. M. Drew, University Farm, St. Paul, with a view to making the necessary arrangements for registration.

Entrance requirements are good character, and completion of eight grade work. Young men and women who show a capacity for work but may not have completed the eighth grade, and are too old to care to go to the district school, will be admitted to the School of Agricultural, and allowed to make up any work in which they may be behind. All boys admitted must have at least six months actual farm experience.

Hard on Farmers.

The government has shut the water off on the irrigated farms in North Dakota and Montana, where payment is over due. This is tough on the farmers and should teach others that there is a place to buy raw prairie land where irrigation is unnecessary, a country that has proven that it can stand the most severe drouths; that it is close to market—but there is so much that might be said about Mahnomen county.—Mahnomen Pioneer.

What Father Said.

A young lady who taught a class of small boys in the Sunday-school desired to impress on them the meaning of returning thanks before a meal. Turning to one of the class, whose father was a deacon in the church, she asked him:

"William, what is the first thing your father says when he sits down to the table?"

"He says, 'Go slow with the butter, kids; it's 40 cents a pound,'" replied the youngster.—Everybody's Magazine.

Let me figure upon your cement, cement blocks, cement sidewalks, sand and gravel. A. H. Fasel.

Weeds Cost Money.

Weeds reduce yields. They pump out moisture and take out plant food. And the crop is reduced by that much. When the grain is growing they take out moisture, and after the crop is cut they still keep on. When the grain is cut the ground will usually plow nicely but in a month or two the weeds have pumped out so much moisture that the ground is too dry to plow, breaks up in lumps, so that it is left in poor condition to take in moisture and also gives it up easily. In this way next years crop is cut short.

A good deal can be done discing as soon as the grain is cut, Then plan to grow a crop of corn and a crop of clover every four or five years. This will do much to kill out weeds and to increase the water holding capacity of the soil. A thin application of stable manure will also be helpful. It furnishes humus which acts like a sponge or blotting paper in holding moisture.

The plowing under of a green crop is also helpful.

This will do much toward increasing the yield and insuring a crop under adverse weather conditions.

Crazy for Three Days.

Considerable excitement was created in Plummer the fore part of last week, says the Plummer Pioneer, over the dissapearance of Fred Gove, a member of the Steel Gang. Fred had been drinking some for several years and came up to Plummer from Minneapolis to get straightened out. He showed himself to be a bright, intelligent workman, and an agreeable companion in every respect until Sunday when he began to show signs of dementia. Policeman Rose went to the camp that evening, and altho he found Fred talking rather loony and peeking thru the keyhole of the car looking for his parents, did not think his condition serious enough to warrant taking him into custody, and left Fred in charge of his bed partner.

Fred became restless during the night, left the car with nothing but a shirt on and went to an engine telling the fireman that he wanted to get warm. He left there at 4 A. M. to go to camp, but strayed into brush and was not seen again until Wednesday evening.

The people of Plummer immediately began a vigorous search of the surrounding territory and sent word to Edwin O. Gove, Fred's father a prominent hotel man of Minneapolis. Monday's search resulted in no sight or sign of the missing man. Tuesday morning Mr. Gove arrived and immediately engaged some special men to keep up a constant search. Even the united efforts of these men aided by numerous citizens failed to locate the man, who was all the time not more than three quarters of a mile from town.

Wednesday afternoon after all hope had been given up of even finding Fred alive, he appeared about seven o'clock with a blanket wrapped around him at the home of Pete Moorisette about three quarters of a mile out of town. Fred was quite rational and after being fed and clothed was brought to town and to his anxious father. He was, indeed, a sorry looking specimen of humanity so far as externals were concerned. His body and legs were pretty well scratched up by snags and brush, and his feet were so swollen and sore that he could hardly walk. Considering that he had been without food and almost in the brush for three days, he come out of it very lucky. He appeared to be all right Wednesday evening and was able to talk and joke with the boys much the same as ever. His mind, however, is a blank as to how he spent his time in the woods. He left with his father Wednesday night for Minneapolis where he will be carefully watched until he has fully recovered.

Why Do Men Advertise?

The man who conducts his business on the theory that it doesn't pay and he can't afford to advertise, sets up his judgement in opposition to that of all the best business men in the world. Says an experienced advertising authority: "With a few years' experience in conducting a small business on a few thousands of capital, he assumes to know more than thousands whose hourly transactions aggregate more than his do in a year, and who have made their millions by pursuing a course that he says doesent pay."

If advertising does'nt pay, why is it that the most successful merchants of every town, large or small, are the heaviest advertisers? If advertising doesn't pay who does the most business? If it does not why do business firms spend millions in that way. It is because they want to donate those millions to the newspaper and magazine publishers, or because they don't know as much about business as the six for a dollar merchant who says money spent in advertising is thrown away or donated to the man to whom it is paid. Such talk is simply ridiculous and it requires more than the average patience to discuss the proposition of whether advertising pays or not with that kind of a man. His complacent self conceit in assuming that he knows more than the whole world is laughable, and reminds us of the man who proved that the world doesn't revolve by placing a pumpkin on a stump and watch it all night.—Pine Poker.

Every foot of good land within 3 to 4 miles of a city like Thief River Falls will bring $50.00 per acre in less than 5 years and as a matter of fact is worth it now. Julius Pleth, Plummer, Minn.

Killed By Lightning.

During the storm last Saturday morning, Old S. Olson, a settler living up near Grygla was struck by lightning and instantly killed. Mr. Olson was in Grygla at the time doing some trading and had his team in the Newton barn. This barn was struck and Mr. Newton, who was standing close to Olson was rendered unconscious. Mr. Olson has been a settler up near Grygla for four years and leaves a wife, but no children.

Facts About Pennington County.

Unpaid Warrants.

On July 1, 1910, over $17,000 or to be exact $17,192 40 in unpaid county warrants were outstanding in the hands of bankers and drawing interest. This amount added to the $62,924.39 levied for county purposes last year makes $80,116.79 of indebtedness incurred by those in authority in county matters in one year. This is levied as a tax on the farmers and business men this year in Red Lake county.

This is a terrible amount to exact from the taxpayers even in such a rich country as Red Lake and the worst feature of the whole matter is that there is no escaping it Were there anything to offset this tax, there might be a little satisfaction felt by that poor taxpayer when he digs down for his share, but nothing, so far as anyone knows, can be found to balance this tremendous levy. Where it goes is a study, but where it comes from is too well known to the fellow who must pay the freight. For less terrible conditions, revolutions have been started and bloody battles fought. That the battle of ballots in November next will end this tyranny is as certain as the fact the betrayal of public trust always has rebounded on the heads of the authors of the same.

Cost of Reaching the County Seat.

Pennington county pays a heavy toll every year to Red Lake Falls. This amounts to thousands of dollars of indirect tax on the farmers and other business interests. Were Pennington county established with Thief River Falls as the county seat, all those residing in the county could reach the county seat in one day and also transact their business and return home by team or rail before sundown. In fact, all the trips which now consume so much time and expense might be cut to one day and no unnecessary expense. There may be a few exceptions to this, but ninety nine per cent of Pennington county people can make the round trip between sunrise and sunset when the roads are in good condition. And in this connection it might be added that all the roads would be good were the road and bridge taxes raised in the county spent therein and not in the south half The saving by making this short trip would amount in a few years to more than the cost of the present expensive court house now in course of construction at the down river town.

If no other reason existed than the one stated above, it would be sufficient to cause every voter to favor county division as a matter of economy of time and money.

Some More Revelations as to Revenue Tax.

The cause of the high taxes in Red Lake county, the highest average in the state, may be easily understood from the amounts levied for the support of the county government in recent years. In 1909, $62,924.39 was levied for county purposes only. In 1908, $19,212 83; in 1906, $37,614.88; in 1901, $22,627.33; and in 1897, the year the county was organized, only $11,523.37 was levied. It cannot be argued that the growth of the county requires this increased expenditure, for the tax is increasing twice as fast as the property and ten times as fast as population. These official figures show that three times as much tax is needed to run the county now as in 1901, only nine years ago Today the county has exactly three times the assessed valuation as it had in 1897, but the board of county commissioners levy six times the tax. Why this great discrepancy between property and taxes occur is accounted for only on the grounds of extravagance and waste of public money and utter disregard for the pocket books of the taxpayers. Unless a halt is called, either by the organization of Pennington county or by other more drastic means, Red Lake county will soon reach that condition known as bankrupcy. Other adjoining counties have gotten into this deplorable state and so may others which spend more than they raise in taxes.

The Dry Territory.

N. J. Sero, special government agent, located in Bemidji, in charge of the work of enforcing the order relative to the sale of intoxicating liquor to the Indians, has received official notice from William E. Johnson, chief of the Indian agents, giving in full the new order issued by the Indian department, creating the "dry territory." The latest ukase just issued creates the southwestern part of Beltrami county as "dry," but does not include the city of Bemidji, the line being drawn through range 31, west, making Bemidji "wet" for a distance of nearly two miles west, the north line being south of the old Red Lake reservation line, and is covered by the treaty of 1855.

The order forbids the sale of "all liquors." It takes in Wilton, Solway, Shevlin, Ebro, Lengby and Fosston, Walker and Cass Lake, Bena: Schley and Deer River. The order also covers a large portion of Hubbard county, but does not hit Grand Rapids in Itasca county.

In the order Johnson says: "It is hoped the liquor dealers in towns surrounding and contiguous to this district will so conduct their business that further extension of the boundaries of this district will not be necessary."

"Is Life Worth Saving?"

Mrs. Mollie McHaney, Prentiss, Miss writes that she had a severe case of kidney and bladder trouble, and that four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cured her sound and well. She closes her letter by saying: "I heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to any sufferer of kidney disease. It saved my life."—Sold by all Druggists.

Dedication Exercises Next Sunday

After having been without a church for 6 months, the German Lutheran congregation will have services in their own church, just erected, next Sunday, when it will be dedicated, the morning service beginning at 10:30. Rev. O. Richter of Vergas will preach in the German Language, in the afternoon at 3, Rev. A. L. Ostjen of St. Paul, supt. of Mission of Minn., wil preach in the English language. The church choir assisted by the choir from the Norw. Luth Synod church will render appropriate selections. Prof. Wm. H. Seltz, of Mankato a brother of the local pastor, will preside at the organ. Weather permitting, a great number of friends from other congregations as well as from this city and community are expected.

Is a Candidate.

John Ristau and Louis Hanson were in from Germantown yesterday. The latter gentleman is going to be a candidate for county commissioner this fall and has the sole backing of the township of Grand Plain for the office. That is a recommendation that should insure an election, as the farmers of that township are always right on all matters and they are sure they are making no mistake in backing Hanson.

A Sudden Death.

DAY ADDED TO CONGRESS

Programme for St. Paul Conservation Gathering Completed.

The programme of speakers for the National Conservation congress at St. Paul has been definitely decided upon and all difference of opinion is at an end, according to a telegram from Chicago. It was also decided at a conference between representatives of the Twin City committee, B. N. Baker and Thomas R. Shipp of the national body that an extra day should be added to the four days of the congress, to be known as "President's day," when President Taft is expected to be the guest of honor and open the meeting with an address. This extra day is to be Sept. 5 and the congress, as originally planned, will extend through Sept. 9.

It is proposed that "President's day" shall be devoted to addresses by the governors of the Western states who were put on the programme at the request of the local board. The governors themselves are expected to arrange their programme. They will be given free rein in choosing their topics and will be allowed to speak of the conservation movement from any view point they desire.

LIND SEEMS TO BE CHOICE

Only Name Mentioned at Democratic County Conventions.

John Lind—despite all refusals, letters, telegrams and interviews—is the choice of Minnesota Democrats for governor and summarizing the reports from the county conventions held Saturday it seems certain that Mr. Lind will be the nominee of the state convention at Minneapolis.

In the conventions the name of John Lind was almost the only one heard. At the same time there was sentiment in most of the counties against the issue for which Mr. Lind will stand—county option.

Most of the early grain on the ridges has been harvested and it has been noted that about 60 per cent of it is worthless for grain buyers.

The village of Holt is certainly growing slow but sure in its size. Another fairsized cottage is now in course of construction for the Lutheran minister.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER DROWN

Perish in North Lake at Lindstrom While Attempting to Save Woman Guest and Her Young Son.

Mrs. John Crosby and her daughter Pearl, nineteen years old, lost their lives in North lake, a branch of Lake Chisago, in an attempt to save Mrs Chris Miesen of St. Paul and her son John, nine years old. Mrs. Miesen and young son were rescued by John Guenther, a St. Paul man, who was fishing nearby.

The Miesen boy was the innocent cause of the double tragedy. Accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Crosby and daughter, he went to the southern shore of North lake to bathe. A sandy beach lines the shore for a considerable distance, but not far from the water's edge there is a drop treacherous to one not a swimmer.

The lad found a raft and, jumping on it, was soon carried far out. He leaped merrily from one side of the improvised boat to the other, finally losing his balance. Tumbling into the water he screamed and the women heard. Without reasoning that she was unable to swim Mrs. Miesen ran toward where her son was splashing in the lake and, upon reaching the place where the depth of the water becomes greater, she, too, soon was endeavoring to save herself from drowning.

The screams of the woman and son urged Mrs. and Pearl Crosby to action. Though unable to swim they rushed through the water to assist them. About the same place where Mrs. Miesen sank they, too, went down.

John Guenther of St. Paul, who spends his summers in Lindstrom, was fishing on North lake and a short distance from where the quartet were battling with death. He hurriedly rowed toward the Miesen boy and pulled him into the boat. Then he rowed toward where Mrs. Miesen was endeavoring to keep herself from sinking and saved her. By this time Mrs. Crosby and her daughter had gone down for the last time.

LAKE PILOT KILLS ENGINEER

Slayer Claims Victim Was Making White Slave of Daughter.

Edward Lucia, a steamboat pilot on Leech lake, shot and killed James Boardwell, engineer at the Leech Lake Lumber company's sawmill at Walker, the shot taking effect in Boardwell's forehead, death being instantaneous. Lucia says Boardwell and his stepson, Earl Hover, were making a white slave of his sixteen-year-old daughter, Cora.

Arriving at the tent where Boardwell and the boy were together with Mrs. Boardwell, Lucia opened up on the man, firing three shots, and then took to the woods back of the premises. The village was at once aroused, and men with guns organized themselves as a posse and commenced a search of the woods for Lucia, who was found after half an hour by Robert Block of St. Paul. Block took the gun away from Lucia and the man went peaceably to the county jail, where he is now in custody. The shooting was evidently premeditated, as Lucia went to the place with a gun and a woman heard him remark that he was going to shoot both the man and his stepson.

Lucia's daughter had been staying at the Boardwell home for some time, and her father had had words with Boardwell on prior occasions because she remained at the latter's home. The girl is exceedingly good looking and has a tinge of Indian blood in her veins, her mother being a halfbreed. She has always borne a good reputation. Boardwell was about forty-two years of age, and Lucia is sixty-four.

FAVORS BALLOT FOR WOMEN

Governor Eberhart of Minnesota Goes on Record.

Governor Eberhart has declared that he is heartily in favor of woman's suffrage. He believes in its principle and its application to the residents of Minnesota.

The governor's statement was issued following the report that the women are soon to wage an active campaign in this state. The governor said:

"While I do not believe in forcing suffrage upon the women of the state, I do sincerely believe that they should be given the right to vote the instant they desire it."

LABOR NEWS.

General Manager W. H. Myers of the Pennsylvania railroad and the committees representing the 15,000 trainmen and conductors employed on the lines of the road east of Pittsburg agreed on a basis for the settlement of the wage controversy. Each side says it has gained all it had contended for in the negotiations which have been in progress for the past six months and which culminated last week in the strike vote by the employes.

A strike of the conductors and trainmen of the Grand Trunk railway has begun, which, it is claimed, will tie up the entire system from Portland, Me., to Chicago. Three thousand trainmen and conductors on the Grand Trunk and 350 on the Central Vermont, a subsidiary line, are affected directly by the strike. In addition 5,000 men engaged in shop work will be temporarily laid off.

A peace pact of great importance to organized labor has been reached between officers of the American Federation of Labor on the one side and members of the Stove Founders' National Defense association on the other. The effect of the agreement is to end the bitter warfare between the Federation of Labor and the Buck Stove and Range company of St. Louis.

All possibility that the conductors and trainmen of the Canadian Pacific railway would strike was removed when a definite agreement was reached between the company and the men. The gist of the decision is that the standard rate of pay for the territory east of Chicago is recognized by the company. The men have gained about 90 per cent of their demands.

Fully 7,000 workmen connected with the building trades unions are on strike at Chicago, completely crippling all construction work in that city. The strike is the climax of a long struggle between the elevator constructors and the Otis Elevator company, which has been employing machinists to do the work of the other organization.

The attempts of MacKenzie King, Canadian minister of labor, to effect a settlement of the Grand Trunk strike, have fallen through, at least for the present, the Grand Trunk management taking the view that the time for arbitration has passed.

As a result of the strike of Grand Trunk trainmen and conductors the Wabash railroad is partially tied up.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL

On account of the low water in the Fox river in Wisconsin the government has refused to permit the water power users on the lower Fox to use any water, resulting in all of the pulp and paper mills at Neenah, Menasha, Kaukauna, Depere, Appleton and Kimberly being closed down, throwing thousands of employes out of work temporarily.

The general committee appointed by the shippers of the country at the rate conference held in Chicago May 17 last reconvened in that city and the general committee refused by resolution to entertain a suggested compromise between shippers and the railroads regarding the rate controversy.

All records in the deportation department at Ellis Island have been broken in the last six months. More than 10,000 immigrants have been sent back in that period, while in previous years the deportations have not exceeded 7,000 a year.

THE CAUSE OF INTERFERENCE

Why Pennington County Leaves Red Lake.

Some persons fondly hope that in the future, someway, somehow, the financial affairs of Red Lake county will be administered in the interests of the taxpayers; that the county business will be economically conducted and that the conditions which have obtained during the last few years may be changed. This hope is as visionary as a dream of night. Those familiar with county matters know that these conditions are impossible of change and that new set of county officers and particularly of county board members, would work no difference in the peculiar atmosphere which envelopes all public business at the present county seat. The citizens of the north half are confident that divorce from the south half and the organization of Pennington county is the only safe and sane action under the circumstances. They favor this procedure, because it will save them from increasing and excessive taxation and will also permit them the privilege and right of expending their own taxes for their own needs—a right never yet denied an intelligent citizenship in civilized countries.

The situation at the county seat is something like this: Several years ago Red Lake Falls was a prosperous town, enjoying a good local trade and receiving the support of a large country business. Its citizens were prosperous and cared little for and gave no heed to county matters, as they were busily engaged in the pursuit of their own personal affairs. Mills were constructed and enjoyed an ever increasing and liberal patronage; substantial business blocks in the little city indicated the confidence of the citizens in the future of their locality; the professional people and all others were contented and happy in the knowledge of present prosperity and of a golden future. During this period, which extended from the organization of the county up to about 1902,03 or 04, the officials of Red Lake county attended strictly to the county business and the citizens of Red Lake Falls as diligently attended to theirs. Then a change took place or began to appear.

Frequent and unfortunate fires occurred and not a few business places disappeared and their owners, financially embarrassed or ruined, removed to other fields of activity. The mills ceased their operations and the small places of manufacturing closed for various reasons and the laborers left for other towns to seek employment. The competition of neighboring cities and villages cut in on and narrowed the available territory tributary to the doomed city. The building of the Soo on the east the dismantling of the Great Northern in the southwestern part of the county did their share in destroying trade. Farmers for various reasons were selling their places at any price and moving to Canada and elsewhere out west. Fires became so frequent that insurance rates were raised, but this only seemed to increase the tendency of the houses in Red Lake Falls to fall prey to the flames. Even the court house was finally destroyed and the local fire department—one of the most successful, if not the most successful, in competitions in annual tournaments—appeared paralyzed every time an inopportune or opportune fire destroyed a deserted store or shop building or vacant residence. Empty buildings multiplied rapidly and the inevitable fires followed so regularly that unkind comment gave rise to ugly rumors as to their supposed cause. The population dwindled to half its former size and stagnation paralyzed every remaining activity in the decrepit village. The necessary expenses demanded increase taxes and, despite heavy local taxation, the sidewalks became delapidated, roads were not repaired, all public improvements ceased, not a new building was erected for several years, and the town assumed a neglected, dishevelled, run-down and untidy appearance. Gossip became rife that the city revenues were being diverted from their proper channels to illegitimate ends.

With these changed conditions began the active interference in county matters and as a result came the high county taxes. Lacking little other support, county business necessarily became Red Lake Falls business. In a few short years nearly every interest of the county was perverted so that it was made to furnish some support for those who still remained residents of the decaying village. Court sessions, county commissioners' meetings, and every variety of public business were utilized to supply returns for residents of Red Lake Falls. Every man, woman and child in the doomed little city appeared possessed with a desire to squeeze every penny possible from those in attendance at the county seat. Hotels, saloons, liveries and small boarding places, hangers-on and all manner of people "laid for" the county seat visitor. Attorneys secured county jobs as special advisers of the commissioners when they could not be erected by the people and even the banks also took advantage of the disjointed situation. All ditch viewers and teams for the same, no matter where needed in the county, were secured in Red Lake Falls; the two newspapers were united and the county bled to help support this one; in fact, the decay of the village was a fair measure of the interference by Red Lake Falls citizens. Also started at this time and by stress of those deplorable conditions the manipulation of county boards and of county funds. Money raised for ditch purposes mysteriously found its way into other funds. Strange levies of county taxes were made, "Special" and "Other Special Taxes," according to the annual report of the state auditor were laid on county property and the Lord knows where spent. Taxes mounted higher and higher. Red Lake Falls grabbed, and used within the city limits, more of the county road and bridge fund in the last six years than all the towns in Pennington have received in the same period, though this fund is supposed to be raised for the building of country highways. Persons with no apparent source of revenue became well-to-do, and gave evidence of possession of considerable means. Several of those connected with county affairs became suspiciously prosperous. In truth, conditions passed from bad to worse and have become so threatening and menacing that the county, through this interference, is on the verge of bankruptcy. It has the highest average rate of taxation in the state of Minnesota, and with nothing to show for it.

The gist of the whole matter is that Red Lake Falls is largely supported by the county and its future prosperity depends solely on its close and intimate relation with the finances of the county. Every resident of that village acts as though the county seat were his particular property and that he has some sacred and vested right in it and its possibilities as a revenue producer. From stable boy to mayor it has become a part of their religion to consider the county seat as Red Lake Falls and not as a place for the transaction of county business. The county is a fair field for exploitation, and the farmers instruments to produce the where-with-all to support a dying and disappearing community. A protest from tax burdened citizens is ignored and a request for lower taxes is met by a higher tax levy. In fact, the situation is deplorable. It cannot be corrected until Red Lake Falls feels the return of its former prosperity, which is improbable, if not impossible.

The decline of this once prosperous little city has no parallel in the history of northern Minnesota. It is absolutely the only instance in this great upper empire wherein a town surrounded by the richest soil under the sun, with a great water power, with once excellent railway facilities, with all the advantages which nature could pour into the lap of any one community, utterly fails to "make good," but falls into decay, a prey to circumstances which on their very face carry the mark of mismanagement and incompetency and inefficiency and possibly something worse.

This article is necessarily long, but this peculiar and distressing state of affairs has such a close and significant relation to the high taxes in Red Lake county, and its history of recent years and the operations of some of its active citizens arose suspiciously interwoven with Red Lake county business and interests, that this story must be recited in full in order to give them it setting in the county division proposition. A perusal of this topic and an investigation of the matters suggested in the article will convince any person that no hope can be sought in any direction from this sad condition but in the division of the county.—As long as Red Lake Falls exists, the present conditions will continue; they cannot be remedied or changed. Pennington county will grant Pennington citizens the conduct of their own business and will leave the south half in the enjoyment of a state of affairs for which they are solely responsible.

Berg Visits the City.

Albert Berg, formerly secretary of state and candidate for state senator from this district, spent last Thursday in Thief River Falls sizing up the local political situation in regard to his candidacy. He reports having received much encouragement and believes that he will be nominated. Mr. Berg is a good campaigner and is strongly in favor of re apportionment, and believes that this issue is of more importance to Northern Minnesota than anything else.

Set Forest Fire and Now In Jail.

Bemidji, Minn., July 29.—G. W. Pearson of Clearwater county, was brought to the Beltrami county jail to serve a sentence of thirty days for the violation of the state law relative to the setting of forest fires.

Pearson pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 or in lieu thereof to serve 30 days in jail. He could not pay the fine.

The "Don't Need To" Theory.

In a recent debate at Reno Mr. James J. Jeffries failed to convince Mr. John Johnson.

Some seven or eight years ago Mr. Jeffries was the leading man in his line of work. Business was good and profits were big.

Having all the money he could handle at the time he concluded to take a rest.

To be sure, he planned to get in the field again at the proper time.

But everything was rosy and there really seemed no good and sufficient reason why he should spend so many hours a day keeping his muscles lithe and strong and his wind good and his heart and nerves in trim.

Eventually the meeting with Mr. Johnson was arranged. Mr. Jeffries was still tolerably content with what he had done.

(Brother, a has-done is about as bad as a has-been.)

Mr. Jeffries did not care to stand up in the training ring and punch and take punches. He did not see any necessity of practising sidesteps and feints and rushes.

He knew all about them. Why, seven years ago he had done all of that he ever needed to do.

Mr. Johnson did not overlook the boxing and the wrestling and the clinching and and the sidestepping, etc.

As a result, Mr. Jeffries received Mr. Johnson's compliments on the point of the jaw and his business career closed.

Advertising a business is the training of that business.

Advertising keeps a business healthy.

It tones up its liver, strengthens its biceps, steadies its heart and keeps its nerves in order.

Once in a while a man decides that he is doing so much business that he can stop advertising for a while and run on momentum.

Momentum is the gradual process toward a full stop.

The momentum business is usually prematurely full-stopped by the straight left jab of the well-trained competitor who finds his opening in the fifteenth round.

If you want to stay in business stay in the advertising field.

No matter how much business you may be doing, keep up the energy that makes it.

You might as well cut off your legs because you are running well in a foot race as to cut off your advertising because your business is good.

You might as well tell the insurance man that you are so healthy you will drop the policy for a few years as to stop advertising because the orders are piling up.

"Don't need to" is the eventual preliminary to "can't do it."

The only man who don't need to advertise is the man who has retired from business.

The only policy holder who doesn't need to pay his premiums is dead.

Mr. Jeffries doesn't need to train any more. He is licked.

For State Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

ALBERT BERG,
Spooner, Minnesota.

Surveyors Heading This Way.

The alleged Milwaukee road surveyors have got into Otter Tail county and began running lines in St. Olaf township the first of this week. The theory that they are Milwaukee men is disputed by those who assert that the Canadian line, the Grand Trunk Pacific, is planning a line to Chicago, and that it would naturally enter this region. The farmers along the route surveyed by the engineers are greatly interested in the probable railroad, but thus far they have failed to find for what railroad the party is at work. A number of Fergus Falls and Otter Tail county plats have been purchased by the chief of the surveyors.—Fergus Falls Weekly.

Crookston Burglaries.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 2.—Last night A. O. Bustured's hardware store was entered by burgulars, who smashed the glass in rear window, and took about $12 from the till. The robber was jocular in that he rung up money paid out $10 05 The bills and checks had been placed in the safe and no attempt was made to blow it. A revolver and some ammunition is also missed. Other articles may have been stolen but not in large quantities.

Joseph Lebanc's meat market was also burglarized of $3, there was in the cash register. Considerable meat may also have been taken. The crime is laid to the hangers on of a carnival company which spent the night here en route to Stephen and Thief River Falls. The police searched several suspects but no arrests were made. Many of the attaches of the carnival company were intoxicated last night and Capt. Eck was called to the boarding car, where one man was badly slashed about the face with a knife, but not dangerously injured, although permanently disfigured.

Will Serve 90 Days.

Davids Phillips, a man who had been employed as a special salesman at the E & E Clothing company's big sale this week, was caught stealing articles from the store Tuesday and placed under arrest. In all Phillips had stolen over $10 worth of goods and he admitted his guilt. He gave his home as Chicago and pleaded with County Attorney Michelet and Judge Bishop that he be given the privilege of returning to "dear old Chicago town," but instead was given a sentence of 90 days at Red Falls which is considered the greatest punishment that could be inflicted.

The New York state department of agriculture has lately issued a book of some 200 pages giving descriptions of occupied and unoccupied farms in the Empire State which are for sale or rent. Doubtless such descriptions would give a prospective buyer a fair idea of these properties; but, as is equally true in the purchase of lands in the west, they should not be bought without being given a careful first hand inspection. There is little question that many of these places are real bargains—price, quality of land and nearness to market considered—while there are some others which would hardly justify paying a price which would equal the taxes and cost of keeping in repair. Notwithstanding this they might well be looked into carefully by those who are looking for "homes on the land."

The conviction seems to be growing in the minds of those who have inquired into the matter that sweet clover—until lately viewed as a useless roadside weed—may have much to commend it as a substitute for alfalfa in sections where climatic or soil conditions seem to forbid the growing of the latter most valuable legume. No soil seems so thin and unpromising that the sweet clover does not flourish and do well on it. It is a rank grower, laughs at dry weather and yields a hay that is nutritious and that stock will readily acquire a liking for if cut before the stalks get too dry and tough. There are firms which have the seed for sale, while the conditions for sowing it are about the same one should follow in getting a start with alfalfa, including a well mellowed seed bed, free from weed seed and inoculated with soil from a spot where sweet clover has been growing thriftily. A few who have tried it speak encouragingly of the results which they have had with it. Others might well make a trial of it.

An invention which gives promise of being of immense benefit to the orange packing industry has lately been installed in the plant of the Redlands Orange Growers' association. In brief, it is a device in which the fruit is subjected to an alcohol bath, the perfectly sound and solid fruit going to the bottom of the tank and the light and imperfect fruit remaining at the surface, whence it is removed by an endless conveyer. This simple device not only accomplishes what the human hand and eye cannot, but it has been found that fruit given the alcohol bath keeps longer and in a better state of preservation through a destruction of all rot spores on the surface. The cost of the operation is 1½ cents per box for alcohol and 2¾ cents for labor.

Swedish-American Singers Continue Their Triumphal Tour Through Sweden—Ski Tournament on a Midsummer Day One of the Year's Novelties in Norway—Rats Causing Great Annoyance at Copenhagen.

SWEDEN.

The Swedish-American singers are continuing on their triumphal tour through Sweden and have been giving concerts during the past week in Halmstad, Jonkoping and Norrkoping. In all these cities they received an enthusiastic reception and their singing captured the audiences every time. Swedish audiences are surprised at the splendid way in which the American singers are rendering Swedish songs and cannot understand that they are able to preserve the gems of Swedish song out in the far West. When they arrived in Stockholm June 30 the Central station was filled with thousands of people and the surrounding streets were crowded to their fullest capacity. They were received at the Central station by United States Consul Winslow, "Kammarherre Buren" and other members of the reception committee. A double quartette selected from the Swedish-American society of Stockholm rendered "America" under the direction of Herr Assar and the American singers responded with the Swedish national anthem, "Vart Land." On Thursday evening, June 30, followed the regular concert in Ostermalm's cathedral. It was filled to the last seat with an enthusiastic audience and the singers were at their best throughout the entire programme. On the evening of July 4 the singers were received by King Gustaf in the "Hvita Hafvet" at the palace and after greeting the king with a song the singers had the pleasure of listening to a speech of welcome from the friendly monarch. A little later Director Ortengren and Olof Nelson of Chicago were called forth and were awarded the Order of Vasa. This is quite a distinction and both Mr. Ortengren and Mr. Nelson were visably affected. The singers also were entertained by the Stockholm Press club and at Hasselbacken.

There are some very notorious night scenes in Stockholm, although it is regarded as a comparatively peaceful city. The other night a wealthy country gentleman, who owns large estates, was taking a promenade on Mastersamuels street when a woman suddenly appeared and commenced to embrace him tenderly. Just as suddenly a man appeared on the scene and while the woman was engaged in embracing the country gentleman he made for his large pocketbook, which contained several hundred crowns in paper money, and made his escape with it. The gentleman from the country, however, began to cry "robber" and soon a crowd gathered and went in pursuit of the man and woman, resulting in their arrest. The woman was found to be a notorious prostitute and the man proved to be none other than the daring card sharp and swindler, Erik Enok Johansson. Similar occurrences have been rather frequent this summer and the Stockholm police are very much on the alert at present as a result of it.

Miss Valfrid Palmgren is the first woman member of the city council in Stockholm and the other evening she made her debut as a speaker in the large city council room. She spoke on her favorite theme, the "Betterment of the City's Morals," and her address was listened to with rapt attention throughout. Her address also teemed with piquant criticism against methods that are in vogue at present in the regulation of city affairs and while there were replies, and sharp ones, too, it was cheerfully conceded that her points were well taken. When she had closed her maiden speech the room was filled with applause and bravos. The members of the council concede that in Miss Palmgren they have received a valuable member and she will no doubt be a force for much good influence in that body and inaugurate reforms which will be of immense benefit to the city of Stockholm.

NORWAY.

A correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal writes under date of Christiania, June 25, as follows: "The great event of the week has been the ski meet at Finse. It has never been tried before anywhere in the world to have a ski tournament on a midsummer day, but some of the enthusiasts thought it would be a good thing to try, as all the conditions were perfect, and so Finse was selected as the most suitable place. Finse is one of the stations on the railway between Christiania, on the east coast, and Bergen, on the west coast, of Norway. It is situated in the mountains, where the snow lies all the year around. The grandeur of the scenery from the railway station is immense. The air is bright, dry and clear as crystal, so that some of the craggy peaks to be seen seem to lie close by, when the fact of the matter is that they are fifty to seventy-five miles away. The trains carried the crowds from the station to the nearest point on the line, about two miles distant from where the jump could be reached conveniently, and at 8:30 the first bugle call announced the start of the first runner. More than 100 athletes tried the jump and the records went into 100 feet and more for standing jumps, showing that the question of training or lack of training does not cut a big figure among the ski experts. The midsummer ski tournament at Finse undoubtedly will be repeated every year after this and as its successful possibilities have been proved beyond a doubt the preparations and attendance naturally will grow from year to year until it will be recognized as an international event of great importance."

"The First Norwegian Physician in America," is the title of an interesting lecture by Professor Ludwig Hektoen of Chicago university, which has recently made its appearance in print. The lecture was delivered by the professor not long ago before the Scandinavian Medical society's annual meeting in Chicago. The name of the first Norwegian physician in America was Hans Martin Klaveland, who was born in Trondhjem in 1722. When he first settled in America he chose Bethlehem, Pa., as a place to follow his profession and later on he moved to Wackovia, N. C., where he remained a practicing physician until his death. Professor Hektoen describes him as being a man who was considerably ahead of his time and was also an able botanist and gathered a most valuable herbarium which is still in existence. He conducted his own experiments and used herbs as medicines with a great deal of success.

Dr. A. Doe, a prominent Norwegian physician of Chicago, who is at present in Christiania, has written a spirited article in the "Aftenposten" in which he demands that those who have accused Chicago firms of importing horse meat to Norway to either "show up or shut up." In his article he reproduces letters from leading Chicago packers which flatly deny that such a thing has ever been engaged in on their part. The article in question has served to clear the atmosphere a bit and it is not likely that there will be any charges to this effect any more.

This is a great and successful fishing season in Norway. Not for many years have they been catching such large quantities of herring as this year. "Torsk" to the amount of 74,000,000 pounds already have been caught. The herring fisheries in the North sea also have been excellent and fishermen generally are reporting large catches.

The government contemplates setting aside 4,000,000 crowns for the country's fortifications within the next twelve months. Half of this sum will be expended on the navy, which for a small country like Norway is becoming formidable. The theory, "in order to preserve the peace, prepare for war," seems to hold good in small nations also.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson's address to his wife on her fiftieth wedding anniversary has been translated into the Italian by Madame Ragnild Lund and has been reproduced in a large number of Italian papers. It will also be published in the French language and will appear in a number of French magazines.

Last year 16,152 persons emigrated from Norway to foreign lands. Most of them went to America and the majority of those emigrating have gone to the Western states to build homes of their own. Such is the Norwegian spirit in America

The National Anti-Tuberculosis society was organized in Christiania at the university recently. It will be a powerful organization and it will not be long before it will have plenty of money at its command.

DENMARK.

The large rats which were present in such large numbers in Copenhagen some years ago have returned and are causing any amount of trouble again. The authorities are preparing for another rat war and are going to set the police force and others busy to once more clear the city of the obnoxious rodents. They are especially present in large numbers around "Kongen's Nytorv," where they are proving to be a great nuisance

The Copenhagen police have lately been conducting a series of raids on some of the gambling dens in the city and have succeeded in discovering several of them and closing them up. A large number of arrests have been made. It appears that the city this summer has been infested with foreign gamblers as well as native ones and the police are going after them in a way which is most gratifying.

The management of the Dagmar theater at Copenhagen has engaged Professor Rils-Knutsen, formerly director of the theater, as scenic director. He has had a great deal of experience in this line of work and his selection for the position has received much favorable comment from the Copenhagen papers.

Rev. Mortimer Kennedy, for many years pastor of the English Episcopal church in Copenhagen, has been appointed one of the court chaplains at King George's court in London and will depart for his native country within a few weeks.

With the English the Dorking is the favorite table fowl. It is a remarkably full breasted bird and, though a slow grower, attains a large size at maturity.

The steer should be graduated from the feed lot to packing house by the time she is three, and the hen should be made into potpie when she is two years old.

The weather never is to one's liking all the time, but the way the weather clerk superintends the department probably gives as general satisfaction as if the job were turned over to some other fellow.

The boys may feel greater interest in keeping the fields clean if a new and up to date cultivator is substituted for that wabbly old rattletrap that has been doing duty for the past ten or twelve years. The growing crops, too, may give decided evidence that they appreciate the change.

Where sawdust is available it makes a very good absorbent for the liquids in stable manures. Fresh sawdust contains an acid which tends to neutralize the alkali of the manure, and, while it adds little to the soil in the way of fertilizer, when decayed it furnishes a valuable mold or humus.

The French way of slaughtering horses after they have outlived their usefulness in the harness has some advantages over the practice quite too common in this country of selling broken down animals to some heartless brute who will exact the last ounce of work from them, quite likely killing them in the process. The old country way means at least a quick and merciful death.

That humus—decaying vegetable mold—is a requisite for the proper growth of vegetable life is shown nicely when a crop such as corn is planted on spots which have been scraped off in the process of leveling a piece of land. The growth that is made is stunted and the plants are of a sickly color. It usually requires several seasons of fertilizing and tilling to bring such soils to a normal productive capacity.

Swamp muck might be used on many a farm to good advantage as an absorbent of the moisture and liquids in the stable manure. Such treatment would arrest the dissipation and decomposition of fertilizing elements, while the muck soil would furnish a type of humus that the average soil stands much in need of. For winter use in cold latitudes the absorbent could be thoroughly dried during the summer months and stored under cover where it would be available.

The housewife—it is superfluous to call her busy—can save herself a whole lot of hot work over the ironing board if she will fold the bed linen, towels and all of the underclothing and hose carefully after they are dry and put them away without ironing. If she feels that she must put a crease in them this can easily be done by putting the folded clothes under a heavy weight for a few hours. A whole lot of women are making this short cut in their work, and they are to be commended for their good sense.

That old friend the pigweed, known also under the names redroot and careless weed, is a very cosmopolitan pest. It tries the religion of the New England farmer, harries the patience of the midstate gardener and is one of the worst banes of the Pacific slope rancher. Its source of working mischief lies in its prolificacy and persistence. It will mature all the way from 10,000 to 25,000 seeds in a single season, while if chopped off in the morning there is a tradition that it will send up a shoot and mature a seed before sundown. Its roots go deep and are about as tough as that of an alfalfa plant.

For those desirous of taking up beekeeping there could hardly be available a more concise or practical publication on the subject than farmers' bulletin No. 397, entitled "Bees," recently published by the department of agriculture at Washington, whence it may be had free by sending for it. This bulletin condenses into forty-two pages the practical information and directions necessary in the proper management of an apiary, including location, equipment, general manipulations, swarm management, production of honey and wax, wintering, diseases, etc., as well as much other pertinent general information. At the close of the bulletin is given a list of all publications of the department bearing on the different phases of beekeeping.

In all varieties of apples where color is a requisite, factors of quality and size being the same, the highest prices will be received for that fruit which is the most highly colored. To secure this result sunshine and a free circulation of air are necessary, and this cannot be if the tree has a dense and thickly headed top. The way out is the inauguration of a system of pruning which will open the tops of the trees—the removal of the main leader a good distance down and the thinning of the lateral limbs. This will not only color the fruit, but it will greatly simplify the labor of spraying and harvesting it, while in years to come, if the pruning is properly done, it will mean that the fruit will be produced within a reasonable distance from the ground instead of at a height where extension ladders will be needed to pick it. Red apples are the money fetchers, and the above is the way to get them.

For State Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

ALBERT BERG,
Spooner, Minnesota.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd., 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

Announcement.

I hereby announce my candidacy as a candidate for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st senatorial district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all my efforts to secure the re-districting of the state, a one mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'NEILL.

For Judge of Probate.

I desire to announce to the voters of Red Lake county that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of Judge of Probate and solicit the support of all who feel disposed to tender the same to me. Extending my thanks in advance to those who will then help me to secure the nomination and election.

BEN CHRISTIANSON.

WHEAT AND THE TARIFF.

Six years ago the wheat crop amounted to five hundred and fifty million bushels and we exported hardly eight per cent of it says the Saturday Evening Post. Domestic consumption is larger now. Last year we raised seven hundred and thirty-seven million bushels and exported barely a hundred million. Cheerfully counting upon the effects of drought in the Northwest, wheat bulls are saying that this year's crop will scarcely meet home requirements, and on net balance the country, for the first time, will be an importer of wheat instead of an exporter. This suggests a startling possibility, namely, that grain farmers may, once in their lives, derive a benefit from the protective tariff. Canada, undoubtedly, will have a large surplus for export, but none of it can come to this country for consumption without paying a duty of twenty-five cents a bushel.

If we produced somewhat less wheat than we consumed the price might be enhanced by nearly the whole amount of the duty. That is the condition in France, which produces somewhat less than it consumes and where the ruling price is nearly equivalent to the London price plus the French import duty.

NORMAN COUNTY SHOULD BE FAIR.

A. L. Thompson, of Mahnomen last week filed as a candidate for the legislature from the Mahnomen-Norman county district. Mr. Thompson is an able and energetic man and stands for all of the principles that the people of his district are demanding. He has the solid backing of Mahnomen county—in fact he has been forced into the fight by the demand of his home county—and yet it is said that there is a possibility of his defeat because Norman county is going to to bring out a candidate for this office. Norman county has nearly twice as many votes as Mahnomen and of course can elect its candidate if the people of that county stand back of him solidly, but we believe that a spirit of fairness will prevail in Norman county and that Mr. Thompson will be given strong backing there.

Since the organization of the Sixty-first senatorial district, which comprises the counties of Norman, Mahnomen, Red Lake, Clearwater and Beltrami, the county of Norman has had the senatorship for eight years and one of the representatives for twelve years. The district is entitled to only one senator and two representatives, and the only time the senatorship has been taken away from Norman county was when Beltrami had this office for four years. But even at that time it was not with Norman county's consent, for that county had a candidate in the field—in fact Norman county has had a candidate for the office of senator at every election since the organization of the Sixty-first district and has a candidate again this year. Many hope to see the candidate for the senatorship from Norman county—Hon. A. L. Hanson—elected again this year, for he is a man of sterling worth and stands for the right kind of principles, but if Norman county persists in endeavoring to hog all of the offices it is certainly going to work to the detriment of Mr. Hanson. The friends of Mr. Hanson in Norman county, therefore, should see that Mr. Thompson has a clear field, and if this cannot be given to him, then any candidate who comes out should be defeated by an overwhelming vote. It pays to be fair and it is nothing but justice that Mahnomen county should have the representative this year.

No Sale to Indians.

Moorhead, Minn., Aug. 1.—Mayor W. H. Davy and S. G. Comstock returned Saturday from Washington, where they went to have a conference with the heads of the Indian bureau of the department of the interior in the interests of the city of Moorhead.

They learned that the government is determined to put a stop to the sale of liquor to Indians in Minnesota; that it has the power to do it and will exercise it to that end, and that good people generally will commend the government's attitude. They found strong prejudice against Moorhead on account of the undue proportion of saloons to the population.

Officials of the Indian department firmly insist that the law relating to the sale of liquor to Indians must be observed and any individual engaged in the unlawful traffic will be made to suffer the consequences.

While the Cream receipts for May showed an increase of 25 per cent over the corresponding month last year the month of June shows up with a slight decrease compared with the corresponding month of 1909. It shows the effect of dried up pastures.

Brewer's Agent Returned.

Minneapolis Journal: F. W. Zollman of St. Paul, attorney for the Minnesota Brewers' association returned from Washington, D. C. today, where he argued against the most recent order of the Indian bureau closing the saloons in a large part of northern Minnesota. To substantiate his argument, Mr. Zollman says he submitted an affidavit of C. W. Johnson, a private detective of Minneapolis, said to have been employed by the firm of Brandt & Jaum, saying the methods used to obtain evidence against the saloonkeepers were unjust.

With Mr. Zollman were Representatives S. G. Comstock and W. H. Bazy, mayor of Moorhead. These men told Frank Pierce, acting secretary of the interior, that the order was unjust and that it would bankrupt Moorhead and other cities included.

No definite plans have been made by the brewers, according to the attorney, but he says they will use every legitimate means to protect their rights. They will first wait and see what action is taken on their appeal to the department of the interior.

The affidavit of Johnson, the detective says, according to Mr. Zollman, that the detectives took Indians from North Dakota into the saloons and persuaded the saloonkeepers to sell liquor to them. In some cases, according to the affidavit the Indians were of light complexion and did not look like Indians.

None of the lands, he said, are Indian lands properly, but have been divided into counties under the state constitution and subject to the state police power.

The slugs may be given an effectual knockout on the small cherry and peach trees by throwing a handful or two of fine dust or earth over the leaves. The same plan is good for the slug that infects the rosebushes.

If the full facts were known it is more than likely that much of the benefit resulting from the application of stable manures to the soil is due to the fact that the alkalis they contain tend to correct and sweeten a somewhat sour condition of soil, as well as to the known fertilizing elements which they contain.

Acute or Chronic—Which?

As a result of the burning of the mill and the sale of the milling company property, the offices of the Red Lake Falls Milling company are to be moved to Crookston and the change means that the officers and members of the office force and their families are to leave Red Lake Falls. That Mr. and Mrs. Sivertson are no longer to be numbered among Red Lake Falls people causes general regret. In the years that they have lived here they have always been identified with the city's good works and they have in an unassuming way been a power for good in the community and have made fast friends who will join in the wish that that their lot in the future may be cast in pleasant places.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Church Dedicated.

The dedication exercises of the New German Lutheran church last Sunday was largely attended not only by local people but also by people from Crookston, Warren, Radium and Germantown. Three services were held and at each service the seating capacity of the church was taxed to the limit, many finding room only in the aisles. The sermons held by the Rev. Richter, Ootjen and Seltz were not only touching and full of encouragement to the hearers to use this new building properly, namely as a place of worship, to seek to obtain the grace of God, but were also delivered with vigor and eloquence.

The new church is a building 30 x 46 ft. with a tower 61 ft. high, built in the Gothic style. The two large Gothic windows, altar, pulpit and pews, all oak give the interior a neat appearance.

The building has a full basement 9 ft. high containing a school room, ladies aid hall and heating plant. The building when completed will cost $3200 and the local congregation is to be congratulated upon now having the nicest church in this city. Much credit is due to Rev. Seltz under whose guidance and untiring efforts it was possible to have such a building erected and make the dedication exercises a pleasure long to be remembered by everyone present.

Hurry up and list your farm that is for sale with Wm. Moeller, St. Hilaire Minn., R. R. No. 1, box 9.

Views of an Outsider.

Hon. R. J. Bell, the Roseau editor, lawyer, politician and good fellow was in the city the first of the week attending to some business matters.

"Crop conditions in Roseau county," says Mr. Bell, "are the best of any section in the Middle West, and the prospects of getting people on the vacant land of Roseau, Marshall and Red Lake counties are very bright. Thief River Falls in my mind promises to be the distributing center for a small empire, and every new settler that comes to this section is going to benefit your city. The future of Thief River Falls is beyond the dream of the oldest inhabitant. It is destined to be the center of at least two new railroad lines tapping the country north of Red Lake."

Synod Sunday School.

All the children and teachers of the Sunday School of the Synod Church are requested to meet at the church basement next Sunday at 9:30.

Barn Burned.

Nels Christoferson's barn in the town of Silverton was burned to the ground last Friday together with one horse, three calves, twenty-five tons of hay and numerous other article. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been caused by a five year old boy playing with matches. As Mr. Christoferson had no insurance the loss is a large one to him.

Leader of Mission Friends, Now in This Country, Discusses Conditions at Home—Head of Christiania Institution Arrested on Charge of Cruelty to Patients—Kaj Nielsen, Danish Sculptor, Seriously Ill in Paris.

SWEDEN.

Dr. P. P. Waldenstrom, leader of the so called Mission Friends in Sweden and who is at present touring the United States visiting communities where his followers have settled among the Swedes in this country, said among other things in a recent address at Willmar, Minn.:

"Sweden is the oldest kingdom in Europe. Politically the country has been for ten years and is today stirred as it seldom has been. There are three great parties, the Conservative, the Liberal and the Social-Democratic. The last named has made tremendous gains the past few years. Ten years ago there was no Social-Democrat in the riksdag. Today there are thirty-five. But of late a reaction has been noticeable and thousands of laboring men have left the party. This was brought about by disastrous results which came from the general strike, when the laboring people of Sweden suffered defeat through bad leadership on the part of the Social-Democrats.

"In a religious way Sweden has changed wonderfully during the past fifty years. Religious intolerance has given way to toleration and there is a greater freedom of worship than ever before. The Free Church movement was perhaps responsible for this. At present there is a strong rationalistic element within the state church, led by a good many professors at the theological seminaries and adhered to by many students and churchmen generally, but it is to be hoped that the movement is only a temporary one.

"Agriculture is receiving more attention today in Sweden than ever before and as a result the grain yield is now three times as great as it was fifty years ago and the acreage has increased fourfold. In dairying the country has also made great strides and Sweden has today more cows in proportion to the population than any country in the world.

"Of course Sweden, like all countries, has a good many problems to solve. Perhaps the most serious just now are the heavy emigration and the reluctance with which young people enter matrimony. There are today fewer marriages in proportion to the population than in any other country in the world and the birth-rate is the lowest in Europe next to France."

A dispatch dated Winnipeg, July 26, says Martin Rosendahl of Stockholm, Sweden, is in Winnipeg seeking for information bearing on the fate of S. A. Andree and his two companions, Stringberg and Fraenkel, who started in 1897 by balloon from the northern part of Spitzbergen in an attempt to reach the North pole, but who afterwards were never heard from. Rosendahl is well acquainted with E. A. Andree, the brother of the lost aeronaut. It appears that E. A. Andree is very much interested in a story published last winter to the effect that remnants of a balloon had been found by Eskimos in the Far North.

The "potato sickness" is a new disease which Swedish authorities are attempting to check in the southern part of the country. The disease is prevalent in Germany in an alarming degree. The germs of the disease are supposed to be found in the potato. As soon as a certain amount of scab appears on the potatoes the authorities have ordered that they are to be destroyed at once, in order to prevent people from eating them and thus getting the so called "potato sickness."

A beautiful mirage appeared in the north heavens at Stockholm about 11 o'clock the other evening. It showed a beautiful forest and a large lake with beautiful shores. The phenomenon lasted only about six or seven minutes.

Sweden's minister to Buenos Ayres, Harald Bildt, has been chosen as Sweden's representative at the International Scientists' congress, which convenes during the latter part of this month in Los Angeles, Cal.

There were at the end of May 2,735 prisoners in Sweden, of whom eighty-four are serving their term for life.

NORWAY.

A woman named Emma Hjort, who, in the name of religion, has been conducting a "home of mercy" for people with enfeebled minds, has been arrested by the Christiania police for abusing some of the patients that she had in her care. She especially interested herself in children with enfeebled minds and it is now charged that last winter she almost starved and froze some of them to death. She employed seven nurses and every one of them left her. A number of the children died, it is learned, from lack of food and cold. The disclosures caused a sensation in charity circles in the city, where the woman enjoyed a good reputation and was regarded in some circles even as an angel of mercy. Her case has been placed in the hands of expert detectives, who have been going to the bottom of the whole affair, and it is believed that the Hjort woman may be sentenced to imprisonment for life.

The king's new villa has been completed and it was formally presented to his majesty June 28, when Lieutenant M. Faerden, in a neat presentation speech, notified his majesty that everything had been completed and that it was ready for occupancy. The speaker expressed the wish that both the king and queen and their little son would thrive well in their new home. The new villa will be known as "Kongsaeter," is ideally located and affords an enchanting view of the Christiania fiord. The king thanked the Norwegian people for their generous gift and stated that it had especially moved him to note how generously the country's sailors had contributed to his new home.

Because he failed to pass an examination in mathematics a son of Professor Lille of Christiania committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. It was reported that he was otherwise a good student and had on several occasions taken high marks in the same subject. Yet when the final examination came in mathematics he failed. The parents have decided to bring up the case before the storthing, contending that the boy had been discriminated against by his teacher and that this was the reason why he was driven to commit the rash act.

Norway has been enjoying a splendid increase in her customs receipts as compared with former years. At the end of June, which marked the close of the budget year, the customs receipts amounted to 49,000,000 crowns, showing a surplus over the budget amounting to something like 7,000,000 crowns. This is the largest amount that has ever been received and it is believed that it is due to the added imports of foreign liquors.

Emperor William is at present cruising along the Norwegian coast in the Hohenzollern. He will make his customary visit to the coast cities of Norway. He will also go to Trondhjem, where he will visit the cathedral and see how the restoration work is progressing on the great cathedral to which he has donated thousands of crowns. The emperor and his party paid a quiet visit to Hardanger and Bergen the other day.

Professor Harrack, the well known German theologian from Leipzig, will deliver in Christiania a series of lectures on "The Religion of Our Times." Ministers and educators generally are looking forward to the series with much anticipation.

Knute Hamsun, the author, does not care to have any literary stipend from the government. He believes that authors who have gotten ahead sufficiently to be paid for their books do not need to seek aid from the government.

Crown Prince Olav celebrated his seventh birthday the other day. There were a series of pleasant things arranged for him through the entire day and he enjoyed the programme immensely.

DENMARK.

Kaj Nielsen, the sculptor, son of Professor Martinus, is seriously ill in Paris. Prior to leaving for France his affianced, Karen Anderson, who was a young and rising actress at the Royal Opera, was suddenly taken sick and died. The shock proved too much for the young man and when he arrived in Paris he was compelled to take to his bed. Young Nielsen is one of Denmark's greatest sculptors.

A Danish brewer named Jacobsen has purchased a real Egyptian burial vault of the kind in which members of the Egyptian nobility used to be buried in. The Danish brewer proposes to rest in this unique vault himself and has had it shipped to Copenhagen, where he will have it on exhibition in the "Glypoteket" for a while.

Copenhagen is getting to be one of the most popular tourist centers in Europe. The traveler at once feels at home in the hospitable city. Nowhere in the world does the tourist encounter such splendid hospitality as he does in the Danish capital and the hotels and cafes offer the very best of accommodations and service.

The Fourth of July was celebrated in true American style at the American legation's hotel in Copenhagen. The hotel had been appropriately decorated with the Stars and Stripes for the occasion and hundreds of American tourists came to pay their respects to the American minister and consul.

Professor L. F. Wimmer, the famous ethnologist, has resigned his chair at the University of Copenhagen. His resignation will take effect Sept. 1. He will devote the remainder of his life to traveling and will continue his ethnological researches, which he contemplates publishing in book form.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Despite his repeated declarations that he would not accept if nominated the Democrats of Minnesota unanimously named former Governor John Lind for head of the state ticket. The platform favors the initiative and referendum and recall; federal income tax law; election of senators by direct vote of the people; conservation of natural resources; workingmen's compensation act and various other measures. It condemns the Republican party for its "deception in enacting the Payne-Aldrich tariff law." A county option resolution was defeated.

The platform convention of the Republican party of Nebraska adopted a platform strongly endorsing the administration of President Taft, expressing unalterable opposition to "the system known as Cannonism," and hearty sympathy with the "progressive" movement in and out of congress. The platform includes a declaration for county option as the method of regulating the liquor traffic and for an amendment to the state constitution providing for direct legislation.

The Republican candidate for governor of Ohio is Warren G. Harding of Marion, once lieutenant governor. Despite the efforts of Senator Burton's Cuyahoga county delegation to stampede the convention for Nicholas Longworth, and George B. Cox's every effort in behalf of Judge O. B. Brown, a combination of the progressives with the national administration men broke up the fight on the third ballot.

Nebraska Democrats wrested the leadership of their state organization from William J. Bryan on the issue of county option. By decisive votes they registered their unbelief in his present policies after listening to an impassioned appeal from Mr. Bryan, who declared the liquor interests were in an organized attempt to secure political control of the state.

The Ohio Republican platform, which is expected to be a model for use by future Republican state conventions, as the expression of the party in the president's own state, opens with a warm endorsement of the chief executive. Senator Dick, who seeks re-election, was not singled out for specific endorsement.

The Iowa Democratic state convention at Ottumwa closed amid one of the most brilliant forensic battles the party leaders have witnessed in recent years. The high license local option plank, having the municipality as the unit of determination, caused the battle, but finally was adopted.

Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester under Theodore Roosevelt, has been placed upon the list of possible candidates for the Republican nomination for governor of New York and Colonel Roosevelt has been asked to support his candidacy.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

The flames communicated to the children's clothing and the burns resulted in their deaths.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Judge Charles F. Amidon, in federal court at Minneapolis, denied the motion of the American Linseed Oil company for a temporary injunction to restrain Andrew French, state dairy and food commissioner, from seizing boiled linseed oil less than 97 per cent pure. The order sustains the constitutionality of the statute prohibiting traffic in grades of this commodity not coming up to the required standard.

Minnesota's income from her iron mines this year will average more than $1,000 a day, a heavy increase over the income last year. The state has thirteen working mines from which this income is derived and in addition an annual rental is paid on many others that are not being worked, but which will be opened by the leasing companies at a later date.

The list of delinquent taxpayers on the 1 per cent tax on corporation profits throughout the state has been reduced to eight. The largest amount yet outstanding is $500, but Internal Revenue Collector Fred von Baumbach has not yet resorted to the expedient of sending deputies for forcible seizure of property in lieu of the tax.

Sidney A. Anderson, a young lawyer of Lanesboro, will make the race for the Republican nomination for congressman of the First district against Congressman Tawney. This is the result of the meeting of the executive committee of the First District Progressive league at Rochester last week.

The Duluth Street Railway company, a subsidiary corporation of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, filed with the state auditor a mortgage and trust deed in favor of the Central Trust company of New York for $2,500,000. The money is to be used for improvements at Duluth and Superior.

The biggest flour mill in the world, Pillsbury A at Minneapolis, has closed down temporarily in order that the water power, now scant because of the low river, may be used by the Twin City Rapid Transit company to keep the street cars of Minneapolis and St. Paul going on schedule time.

W. E. McEwen, state labor commissioner, has been appointed by the National Civic Federation as a member of its committee on compensation for industrial accidents and their prevention and on the sub-committee on factory inspection. Mr. McEwen has accepted the place.

Governor Eberhart spent several days last week in the wilds of Northern Minnesota in the company of the officials of the Northern Pacific railway. The largest island in the American group in the Lake of the Woods was named for the governor.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Forest fires sweeping over the northern part of Minnesota, charring and consuming the timber of that section during the last several months, will not, in the opinion of John E. Rhodes, president of the State Forestry association, result in nearly so great a loss as people are supposing. This is due to the fact, pointed out by Mr. Rhodes, that the fires are in the cut over districts, where the young trees are yet small and the underbrush heavy.

Mrs. Charles Juster of Minneapolis rescued nine workmen from the burning plant of the Northwestern Roofing, Cornice and Stamping works in the Mill City. While the flames were sweeping so close to her that her hair was singed, she, unaided, raised a plank to the second story window of the plant, where the men were waiting for help.

Charles Paastinen, aged twelve, while sitting on the top of a lion's cage in a circus menagerie at Ely, leaned over to get a better look at the king of beasts and the animal made several angry thrusts at him, badly tearing the flesh on the boy's face and knocking out two teeth.

Charles White was struck and instantly killed by lightning while making hay on the Swanson farm near Little Fork. He was standing under a tree when the bolt descended.

James Gillimore, sixty years old, a street car conductor, was found dead in his room at Minneapolis. A bottle which had contained carbolic acid told the story.

The Great Northern railroad bridge across Johnson creek at St. Augusta, five miles south of St. Cloud, was partially destroyed by fire last week.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

One of the oldest and best known priests of the St. Paul diocese was lost to the Catholic church in the death at Minneapolis of Father Claude Genis, aged seventy-two. Father Genis arrived in St. Paul in 1866 and during his career filled many posts in the diocese, being at different periods pastor in Dayton, Mendota, Austin, Faribault, Graceville, White Bear and St. Lawrence parish, Minneapolis. In all these posts his ministry was marked by unusual zeal and sanctity of life.

Mrs. Alice J. Wheeler, aged ninety-nine years, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. M. Wilson of Hastings, after a protracted illness. She was a pioneer resident of Hastings and was prominent in W. C. T. U. circles.

BAD FIRE IN MINNEAPOLIS

Property Valued at a Hundred Thousand Dollars Burned.

With a heat that could be felt for five blocks and which forced the firemen several hundred feet away flames devoured the plant of the Minnesota Furniture Frame company and the Crescent elevator of the Van Dusen-Harrington line at Minneapolis. The loss will reach $100,000. The entire residence district lying southeast of the scene of the flames was in imminent danger of conflagration. Red hot sheet iron from the roof of the elevator was carried five and six blocks away.

The home of Peter Hanson was almost totally destroyed by one of these burning embers falling on the roof. The home of Jacob Croon suffered the loss of its roof. The woodyard of D. E. Hegberg was also destroyed. This lay across the Northern Pacific railroad tracks from the scene of the blaze. The company's office escaped.

The tracks of the Northern Pacific line running past the factories were warped into a snakelike pig iron. They will have to be replaced before they can be used.

EDITOR SEES BANK LOOTED

Robbers Get Drop on Scribe Who Discovers Them at Work.

While Claude H. Mackenzie, lawyer and editor of the Onamia Lake Breeze, stood a half hour with his hands held as far aloft as physical endurance would allow, three yeggmen cracked the safe in the First State bank and departed with $1,000 in bills and $200 in silver. The way they made their escape from town is a mystery. Mr. Mackenzie lost no time in giving the alarm as soon as he got out of range of the robbers' six-shooters.

A railway section tool box was broken open by the robbers in order to provide them with tools for their work. They gained entrance to the bank through the rear door. Though the safe was wrecked it was evident that the job was done by professional yeggmen.

Mackenzie passed the bank while the robbers were at work and saw them, but before he could give an alarm they had the "drop" on him.

Duluth Man Charged Alienation of Wife's Affections.

David A. Miller of Duluth has been awarded a verdict of $15,000 by a jury in the St. Louis county district court for the alienation of his wife's affections. The defendants are Isaac Helstein, Henry Helstein, Morris Harley, Robert Asbinsky and Joseph Fox.

Miller charged that he was the victim of a conspiracy formed by the defendants to catch him in a room with an immoral woman at a West End hotel. He asserted she was paid by the defendants and that she lured him there on a pretense of selling him jewelry.

CENTER OF RAILROAD WAR

Three Great Systems Rushing Lines to Duluth.

In the coming six months Duluth and Northern Minnesota will see a period of railroad activity such as it has rarely or perhaps never witnessed before.

The secret of the activity is that the port of Duluth is the prize for which three great roads will struggle—three roads which have hitherto neglected this opportunity. These roads have been making Canada their battleground, but the fight now is being carried across the line. The roads are the Canadian Pacific, through its subsidiary, the Soo, the Canadian Northern and the Great Northern.

PUZZLES THE PHYSICIANS

Epidemic at Coleraine Kills Many Children.

An epidemic of disease has broken out among the children of Coleraine. Over a score are ill and four deaths have occurred in the past few days.

Physicians are puzzled over the disease and so far have been unable to diagnose it. They say it bears no resemblance to infantile paralysis, but is no less fatal.

Three Children Die in Day.

Three of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Willis de Groat, who reside on a farm near Redwood Falls, died within twenty-four hours. The youngest, a baby of five months, died of pneumonia, following measles. The same day another child expired in a spasm. The third died the next morning. The oldest was only five years old and they were the three youngest children. The physician states that the deaths were due to complications attending measles.

Ends Life With Dynamite.

C. M. Johnson, aged fifty five years, a farmer residing near Sandstone, ended his life by sticking a piece of dynamite in his mouth and causing it to explode. His head was literally blown to pieces. He leaves a widow and four children.

Nearly a Hundred Years Old.

Mrs. Eliza Thompson is dead at Minneapolis at the age of ninety-nine years. She was born Dec. 6, 1812. She arrived in the Mill City with her husband and family in 1853 and had lived in that city ever since.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

LIND NAMED FOR GOVERNOR

Democrats Nominate Minneapolis Man Despite His Declaration That He Would Not Accept.

THE TICKET.

For Governor—John Lind, Minneapolis.

Lieutenant Governor—M. C. Tifft, Long Prairie.

Secretary of State—Fred W. Johnson, New Ulm.

State Treasurer—Charles F. Ladner, St. Cloud.

State Auditor—T. J. Meighen, Preston.

Attorney General—J. M. Freeman, Olivia.

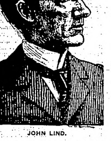
Justices of the Supreme Court—T. D. O'Brien, St. Paul, and Arthur H. Snow, Winona.

Clerk of the Supreme Court—Fred E. Wheaton, Minneapolis.

Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner—James C. Tracy, Rochester.

The Democratic state convention at Minneapolis nominated former Governor John Lind of that city for governor amid a wild scene, which was characterized by intense enthusiasm and remarkable parliamentary confusion. There was practically no opposition to the nomination of Mr. Lind as the party standard bearer, but a number of his friends tried their utmost to head off the nomination under the belief that the former governor would decline to accept it.

Headed by the St. Louis county delegation the country delegates maintained the most determined stand for the nomination of their choice and the combined efforts of the Ramsey and Hennepin county delegations to effect the selection of some other standard bearer were futile. Mr. Lind was chosen first by a yea and nay vote. Then a proposition to make his selection unanimous caused some expert parliamentary maneuvering which consumed over an hour. The nomination finally was made unanimous.



JOHN LIND.

The nomination of candidates for all the other state offices was then taken up. Only one name was presented for each office, with the exception of Judges O'Brien and Snow for the supreme court. All were nominated by acclamation. Judges C. L. and Philip E. Brown, two of the candidates for the supreme bench on the Republican ticket, were endorsed for election by the convention.

Although Mr. Lind had long ago declared for county option he will be obliged to run on an initiative and referendum and recall platform, should he decide to accept the nomination. The advocates of the county option plank in the platform were considerably outnumbered in the committee on resolutions and the minority did not even submit a report advocating their pet measure. There was turmoil, however, after the platform had been read by Senator D. D. Works of Mankato. Professor Frank M. Anderson of the University of Minnesota, one of the delegates, offered an additional plank to the platform favoring county option as advocated by William J. Bryan at the Nebraska state convention recently. Then the excitement started in earnest. There were all manner of objections and points of order raised to the motion, which was finally referred to the resolutions committee. That body got together and after a few seconds' deliberation decided to lay the county option motion on the table.

Fall From Train Fatal.

P. C. Schenck of St. Paul, while on the way to Lindstrom to bring home his wife, who had been spending the summer there with relatives, met an untimely death by falling from the platform of a Northern Pacific train and tumbling over a viaduct near Phalen park. His skull was fractured and when he was picked up death had ensued.

Dr. P. P. Waldenstrom, leader of the so called Mission Friends in Sweden and who is at present touring the United States visiting communities where his followers have settled among the Swedes in this country, said among other things in a recent address at Willmar, Minn.:

"Sweden is the oldest kingdom in Europe. Politically the country has been for ten years and is today stirred as it seldom has been. There are three great parties, the Conservative, the Liberal and the Social-Democratic. The last named has made tremendous gains the past few years. Ten years ago there was no Social-Democrat in the riksdag. Today there are thirty-five. But of late a reaction has been noticeable and thousands of laboring men have left the party. This was brought about by disastrous results which came from the general strike, when the laboring people of Sweden suffered defeat through bad leadership on the part of the Social-Democrats.

"In a religious way Sweden has changed wonderfully during the past fifty years. Religious intolerance has given way to toleration and there is a greater freedom of worship than ever before. The Free Church movement was perhaps responsible for this. At present there is a strong rationalistic element within the state church, led by a good many professors at the theological seminaries and adhered to by many students and churchmen generally, but it is to be hoped that the movement is only a temporary one.

"Agriculture is receiving more attention today in Sweden than ever before and as a result the grain yield is now three times as great as it was fifty years ago and the acreage has increased fourfold. In dairying the country has also made great strides and Sweden has today more cows in proportion to the population than any country in the world.

"Of course Sweden, like all countries, has a good many problems to solve. Perhaps the most serious just now are the heavy emigration and the reluctance with which young people enter matrimony. There are today fewer marriages in proportion to the population than in any other country in the world and the birth rate is the lowest in Europe next to France."

A dispatch dated Winnipeg, July 25, says Martin Rosendahl of Stockholm, Sweden, is in Winnipeg seeking for information bearing on the fate of S. A. Andree and his two companions, Stringberg and Fraenkel, who started in 1897 by balloon from the northern part of Spitzbergen in an attempt to reach the North pole, but who afterwards were never heard from. Rosendahl is well acquainted with E. A. Andree, the brother of the lost aeronaut. It appears that E. A. Andree is very much interested in a story published last winter to the effect that remnants of a balloon had been found by Eskimos in the Far North.

The "potato sickness" is a new disease which Swedish authorities are attempting to check in the southern part of the country. The disease is prevalent in Germany in an alarming degree. The germs of the disease are supposed to be found in the potato. As soon as a certain amount of scab appears on the potatoes the authorities have ordered that they are to be destroyed at once, in order to prevent people from eating them and thus getting the so called "potato sickness."

A woman named Emma Hjort, who, in the name of religion, has been conducting a "home of mercy" for people with enfeebled minds, has been arrested by the Christiania police for abusing some of the patients that she had in her care. She especially interested herself in children with enfeebled minds and it is now charged that last winter she almost starved and froze some of them to death. She employed seven nurses and every one of them left her. A number of the children died, it is learned, from lack of food and cold. The disclosures caused a sensation in charity circles in the city, where the woman enjoyed a good reputation and was regarded in some circles even as an angel of mercy. Her case has been placed in the hands of expert detectives, who have been going to the bottom of the whole affair, and it is believed that the Hjort woman may be sentenced to imprisonment for life.

The king's new villa has been completed and it was formally presented to his majesty June 28, when Lieutenant M. Faerden, in a neat presentation speech, notified his majesty that everything had been completed and that it was ready for occupancy. The speaker expressed the wish that both the king and queen and their little son would thrive well in their new home. The new villa will be known as "Kongsaeter," is ideally located and affords an enchanting view of the Christiania fiord. The king thanked the Norwegian people for their generous gift and stated that it had especially moved him to note how generously the country's sailors had contributed to his new home.

It was reported that he was otherwise a good student and had on several occasions taken high marks in the same subject. Yet when the final examination came in mathematics he failed. The parents have decided to bring up the case before the storthing, contending that the boy had been discriminated against by his teacher and that this was the reason why he was driven to commit the rash act.

Norway has been enjoying a splendid increase in her customs receipts as compared with former years. At the end of June, which marked the close of the budget year, the customs receipts amounted to 49,000,000 crowns, showing a surplus over the budget amounting to something like 7,000,000 crowns. This is the largest amount that has ever been received and it is believed that it is due to the added imports of foreign liquors.

Carl Gjellerup, the Danish author, who has resided for many years in Dresden, Germany, where he has been writing a number of books and stories, is at present in Copenhagen, paying a visit to old friends and relatives.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Despite his repeated declarations that he would not accept if nominated the Democrats of Minnesota unanimously named former Governor John Lind for head of the state ticket. The platform favors the initiative and referendum and recall; federal income tax law; election of senators by direct vote of the people; conservation of natural resources; workingmen's compensation act and various other measures. It condemns the Republican party for its "deception in enacting the Payne-Aldrich tariff law." A county option resolution was defeated.

The platform convention of the Republican party of Nebraska adopted a platform strongly endorsing the administration of President Taft, expressing unalterable opposition to "the system known as Cannonism," and hearty sympathy with the "progressive" movement in and out of congress. The platform includes a declaration for county option as the method of regulating the liquor traffic and for an amendment to the state constitution providing for direct legislation.

The Republican candidate for governor of Ohio is Warren G. Harding of Marion, once lieutenant governor. Despite the efforts of Senator Burton's Cuyahoga county delegation to stampede the convention for Nicholas Longworth, and George B. Cox's every effort in behalf of Judge O. B. Brown, a combination of the progressives with the national administration men broke up the fight on the third ballot.

Nebraska Democrats wrested the leadership of their state organization from William J. Bryan on the issue of county option. By decisive votes they registered their unbelief in his present policies after listening to an impassioned appeal from Mr. Bryan, who declared the liquor interests were in an organized attempt to secure political control of the state.

The Ohio Republican platform, which is expected to be a model for use by future Republican state conventions, as the expression of the party in the president's own state, opens with a warm endorsement of the chief executive. Senator Dick, who seeks re-election, was not singled out for specific endorsement.

The Iowa Democratic state convention at Ottumwa closed amid one of the most brilliant forensic battles the party leaders have witnessed in recent years. The high license local option plank, having the municipality as the unit of determination, caused the battle, but finally was adopted.

Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester under Theodore Roosevelt, has been placed upon the list of possible candidates for the Republican nomination for governor of New York and Colonel Roosevelt has been asked to support his candidacy.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Edmund, Helen and Viola Casper, children of Michael Casper, ranging in age from one and a half to five years, were burned to death at Lena, Wis. The children were playing in a buggy when a neighbor's child is said to have piled some straw underneath the vehicle and set fire to it in fun. The flames communicated to the children's clothing and the burns resulted in their deaths.

While racing with a westbound Denver and Rio Grande passenger train in an automobile near Grand Junction, Colo., Walter Hodgins of Grand Junction, Miss Leona Adams of San Francisco and Miss Gladys Caryle of Chicago were instantly killed.

Misses Blanche Atwood, Sadie Turner and Etta Aldrich, three girl homesteaders near Marcus, S. D., were drowned while fording the Cheyenne river, a cloudburst causing a wall of water to sweep down upon them.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Judge Charles F. Amidon, in federal court at Minneapolis, denied the motion of the American Linseed Oil company for a temporary injunction to restrain Andrew French, state dairy and food commissioner, from seizing boiled linseed oil less than 97 per cent pure. The order sustains the constitutionality of the statute prohibiting traffic in grades of this commodity not coming up to the required standard.

Minnesota's income from her iron mines this year will average more than $1,000 a day, a heavy increase over the income last year. The state has thirteen working mines from which this income is derived and in addition an annual rental is paid on many others that are not being worked, but which will be opened by the leasing companies at a later date.

The list of delinquent taxpayers on the 1 per cent tax on corporation profits throughout the state has been reduced to eight. The largest amount yet outstanding is $500, but Internal Revenue Collector Fred von Baumbach has not yet resorted to the expedient of sending deputies for forcible seizure of property in lieu of the tax.

Sidney A. Anderson, a young lawyer of Lanesboro, will make the race for the Republican nomination for congressman of the First district against Congressman Tawney. This is the result of the meeting of the executive committee of the First District Progressive league at Rochester last week.

The Duluth Street Railway company, a subsidiary corporation of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, filed with the state auditor a mortgage and trust deed in favor of the Central Trust company of New York for $2,500,000. The money is to be used for improvements at Duluth and Superior.

The biggest flour mill in the world, Pillsbury A at Minneapolis, has closed down temporarily in order that the water power, now scant because of the low river, may be used by the Twin City Rapid Transit company to keep the street cars of Minneapolis and St. Paul going on schedule time.

W. E. McEwen, state labor commissioner, has been appointed by the National Civic Federation as a member of its committee on compensation for industrial accidents and their prevention and on the sub-committee on factory inspection. Mr. McEwen has accepted the place.

Governor Eberhart spent several days last week in the wilds of Northern Minnesota in the company of the officials of the Northern Pacific railway. The largest island in the American group in the Lake of the Woods was named for the governor.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Forest fires sweeping over the northern part of Minnesota, charring and consuming the timber of that section during the last several months, will not, in the opinion of John E. Rhodes, president of the State Forestry association, result in nearly so great a loss as people are supposing. This is due to the fact, pointed out by Mr. Rhodes, that the fires are in the cut over districts, where the young trees are yet small and the underbrush heavy.

Mrs. Charles Juster of Minneapolis rescued nine workmen from the burning plant of the Northwestern Roofing, Cornice and Stamping works in the Mill City. While the flames were sweeping so close to her that her hair was singed, she, unaided, raised a plank to the second-story window of the plant, where the men were waiting for help.

Charles Panstinen, aged twelve, while sitting on the top of a lion's cage in a circus menagerie at Ely, leaned over to get a better look at the king of beasts and the animal made several angry thrusts at him, badly tearing the flesh on the boy's face and knocking out two teeth.

Charles White was struck and instantly killed by lightning while making hay on the Swanson farm near Little Fork. He was standing under a tree when the bolt descended.

James Gillmore, sixty years old, a street car conductor, was found dead in his room at Minneapolis. A bottle which had contained carbolic acid told the story.

The Great Northern railroad bridge across Johnson creek at St. Augusta, five miles south of St. Cloud, was partially destroyed by fire last week.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

One of the oldest and best known priests of the St. Paul diocese was lost to the Catholic church in the death at Minneapolis of Father Claude Genis, aged seventy-two. Father Genis arrived in St. Paul in 1862 and during his career filled many posts in the diocese, being at different periods pastor in Dayton, Mendota, Austin, Faribault, Graceville, White Bear and St. Lawrence parish, Minneapolis. In all these posts his ministry was marked by unusual zeal and sanctity of life.

Mrs. Allie J. Wheeler, aged ninety-nine years, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. M. Wilson of Hastings, after a protracted illness. She was a pioneer resident of Hastings and was prominent in W. C. T. U. circles.

BAD FIRE IN MINNEAPOLIS

Property Valued at a Hundred Thousand Dollars Burned.

With a heat that could be felt for five blocks and which forced the firemen several hundred feet away flames devoured the plant of the Minnesota Furniture Frame company and the Crescent elevator of the Van Dusen-Harrington line at Minneapolis. The loss will reach $100,000. The entire residence district, lying southeast of the scene of the flames was in imminent danger of conflagration. Red hot sheet iron from the roof of the elevator was carried five and six blocks away.

The home of Peter Hanson was almost totally destroyed by one of these burning embers falling on the roof. The home of Jacob Croon suffered the loss of its roof. The woodyard of D. E. Hegberg was also destroyed. This lay across the Northern Pacific railroad tracks from the scene of the blaze. The company's office escaped.

The tracks of the Northern Pacific line running past the factories were warped into a snakelike pig iron. They will have to be replaced before they can be used.

EDITOR SEES BANK LOOTED

Robbers Get Drop on Scribe Who Discovers Them at Work.

While Claude H. Mackenzie, lawyer and editor of the Quamba Lake Breeze, stood a half hour with his hands held as far aloft as physical endurance would allow, three yeggmen cracked the safe in the First State bank and departed with $1,900 in bills and $200 in silver. The way they made their escape from town is a mystery. Mr. Mackenzie lost no time in giving the alarm as soon as he got out of range of the robbers' six-shooters.

A railway section tool box was broken open by the robbers in order to provide them with tools for their work. They gained entrance to the bank through the rear door. Though the safe was wrecked it was evident that the job was done by professional yeggmen.

Mackenzie passed the bank while the robbers were at work and saw them, but before he could give an alarm they had the "drop" on him.

Duluth Man Charged Alienation of Wife's Affections.

David A. Miller of Duluth has been awarded a verdict of $15,000 by a jury in the St. Louis county district court for the alienation of his wife's affections. The defendants are Isaac Helstein, Henry Helstein, Morris Harley, Robert Ashinsky and Joseph Fox.

Miller charged that he was the victim of a conspiracy formed by the defendants to catch him in a room with an immoral woman at a West End hotel. He asserted she was paid by the defendants and that she lured him there on a pretense of selling him jewelry.

CENTER OF RAILROAD WAR

Three Great Systems Rushing Lines to Duluth.

In the coming six months Duluth and Northern Minnesota will see a period of railroad activity such as it has rarely or perhaps never witnessed before.

The secret of the activity is that the port of Duluth is the prize for which three great roads will struggle—three roads which have hitherto neglected this opportunity. These roads have been making Canada their battleground, but the fight now is being carried across the line. The roads are the Canadian Pacific, through its subsidiary, the Soo, the Canadian Northern and the Great Northern.

Epidemic at Coleraine Kills Many Children.

An epidemic of disease has broken out among the children of Coleraine. Over a score are ill and four deaths have occurred in the past few days.

Physicians are puzzled over the disease and so far have been unable to diagnose it. They say it bears no resemblance to infantile paralysis, but is no less fatal.

Three Children Die in Day.

Three of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Willis de Groat, who reside on a farm near Redwood Falls, died within twenty-four hours. The youngest, a baby of five months, died of pneumonia, following measles. The same day another child expired in a spasm. The third died the next morning. The oldest was only five years old and they were the three youngest children. The physician states that the deaths were due to complications attending measles.

Ends Life With Dynamite.

C. M. Johnson, aged fifty-five years, a farmer residing near Sandstone, ended his life by sticking a piece of dynamite in his mouth and causing it to explode. His head was literally blown to pieces. He leaves a widow and four children.

Nearly a Hundred Years Old.

Mrs. Eliza Thompson is dead at Minneapolis at the age of ninety-nine years. She was born Dec. 6, 1812. She arrived in the Mill City with her husband and family in 1863 and had lived in that city ever since.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

LIND NAMED FOR GOVERNOR

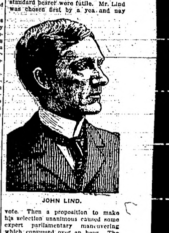
Democrats Nominate Minneapolis Man Despite His Declaration That He Would Not Accept.

THE TICKET.

For Governor—John Lind, Minneapolis.
Lieutenant Governor—M. C. Tifft, Long Prairie.
Secretary of State—Fred W. Johnson, New Ulm.
State Treasurer—Charles F. Ladner, St. Cloud.
State Auditor—T. J. Meighen, Preston.
Attorney General—J. M. Freeman, Olivia.
Justices of the Supreme Court—T. D. O'Brien, St. Paul, and Arthur H. Snow, Winona.
Clerk of the Supreme Court—Fred E. Wheaton, Minneapolis.
Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner—James C. Tracy, Rochester.

The Democratic state convention at Minneapolis nominated former Governor John Lind of that city for governor amid a wild scene, which was characterized by intense enthusiasm and remarkable parliamentary confusion. There was practically no opposition to the nomination of Mr. Lind as the party standard bearer, but a number of his friends tried their utmost to head off the nomination under the belief that the former governor would decline to accept it.

Headed by the St. Louis county delegation the country delegates maintained the most determined stand for the nomination of their choice and the combined efforts of the Ramsey and Hennepin county delegations to effect the selection of some other standard bearer were futile. Mr. Lind was chosen first by a yea and nay vote. Then a proposition to make his selection unanimous caused some expert parliamentary maneuvering which consumed over an hour. The nomination finally was made unanimous.



JOHN LIND.

The nomination of candidates for all the other state offices was then taken up. Only one name was presented for each office, with the exception of Judges O'Brien and Snow for the supreme court. All were nominated by acclamation. Judges C. L. and Philip E. Brown, two of the candidates for the supreme bench on the Republican ticket, were endorsed for election by the convention.

Although Mr. Lind had long ago declared for county option he will be obliged to run on an initiative and referendum and recall platform, should he decide to accept the nomination. The advocates of the county option plank in the platform were considerably outnumbered in the committee on resolutions and the minority did not even submit a report advocating their pet measure. There was turmoil, however, after the platform had been read by Senator D. D. Works of Mankato. Professor Frank M. Anderson of the University of Minnesota, one of the delegates, offered an additional plank to the platform favoring county option as advocated by William J. Bryan at the Nebraska state convention recently. Then the excitement started in earnest. There were all manner of objections and points of order raised to the motion, which was finally referred to the resolutions committee. That body got together and after a few seconds' deliberation decided to lay the county option motion on the table.

Fall From Train Fatal.

P. C. Schenck of St. Paul, while on the way to Lindstrom to bring home his wife, who had been spending the summer there with relatives, met an untimely death by falling from the platform of a Northern Pacific train and tumbling over a viaduct near Phalen park. His skull was fractured and when he was picked up death had ensued.

THE CREAMERY PROMOTER.

A good many queries are being received by agricultural journals in different sections of the country relative to the dependence that can be placed upon the so called creamery promoter. The reply given in every instance that has come under our notice is that these chaps should be given a wide berth. This advice is sound and should be followed. These fellows know about as much of the creamery business, the conditions which exist in any given locality and the problems which would arise, as a cat does about Hebrew. They are in the business of promoting creameries primarily for the purpose of filling their pockets with easy money and not to further the dairy or creamery business and to bring profits to the patrons of a creamery enterprise. If the farmers in any section make up their minds that they want to embark in the creamery business—and the decision is a wise one where there are enough patrons to support it—the sensible thing to do is to call in some one who has a permanent postoffice address, the state dairy commissioner, some representative he may send or some man of repute who is known to have had extended and successful experience in the creamery business. Many an enterprise of this kind has fizzled out because of a bad start and because those interested in it did not have an adequate idea of the conditions which really existed or the degree of success that it was possible to attain. The kind of authorities referred to will know about the problems likely to confront a new project of this kind and will be able to give helpful directions and suggestions. The difference between the fat sum that would have to be forked over to a fly by night promoter and the modest sum required to defray the traveling and hotel expenses of some reputable creamery authority will go quite a way in buying equipment, coal and machine oil.

A DOUGHTY WEED PEST.

What is coming to be a nefarious weed pest in many a central state and eastern garden patch is crab grass, which is also known by the name five finger, descriptive of the five spurs or sprays into which the seed head is usually divided. This grass is late in sprouting and thus escapes much of the effect of the May and June cultivation. When the garden crops are laid by it gets busy and by Sept. 1, unless it is given frequent attention, will furnish as effective a mat over the surface of the ground as would miles of binding twine secured with twenty-penny spikes. Of course this is hyperbolical, but this figure is the only one that in any adequate degree fits the case. While this grass does not live over the winter in its root system, it yet has the pernicious faculty of sending out lusty roots wherever the recumbent joints touch the ground. The only way to rid a patch of land of it is to hack away at it during July and August and prevent any of it from producing seed. If manure contains the seed it should be well rotted and the seed destroyed before it is applied to the soil.

Where it appears in the lawn the only way to eradicate it is to dig it out with a jackknife or plow up and reseed the lawn anew. It may be kept in check in a fairly satisfactory manner by keeping the lawn grasses in a thrifty and growing condition by frequent watering during the dry weather, when the crab grass gets in its work. The removal of the clipped heads by the use of the grass catcher will reduce greatly the amount of seed which will settle among the roots of the grass to germinate next season.

A POSSIBLE CAUSE OF FAILURE.

Many a failure with alfalfa and clover seems directly traceable to the fact that the soil on which the seed was sown was sour and needed sweetening with an application of lime at the rate of two or three tons per acre. Where such treatment has followed previous failure with alfalfa really remarkable results have been secured. The lime should be applied to the land in manure with a spreader or spread with a seeder of some kind which will insure an even distribution. While a sour condition of soil may be inferred from the fact that clover will not grow and from the presence of sorrel, it can be determined much more definitely by running a spade into the earth a few inches and inserting a piece of blue litmus paper, which may be got at any drug store. If the soil is acid this test paper will turn from blue to pink. Of equal importance with the lime treatment is the inoculation of the soil with bacteria in the soil from an established alfalfa field. The tract intended for such use should also be well drained and have a porous subsoil of good depth.

A Delaware hen, bought to furnish stuffing for a potpie, laid her owner 240 eggs between Jan. 27, 1909, and Dec. 6 of the same year. Unlike the milking habit in dairy cows, the egg producing habit in hens seems incapable of development in any considerable degree by the selection of pullets from mothers of high egg laying capacity.

The writer varied the March pruning of his peach trees considerably this year, cutting some lightly and others severely at blossom time. It is interesting to note that those cut most heavily are not only making the most vigorous growth of new wood, which will bear next year's crop, but carry the best sized and most thrifty looking fruit at the present writing.

When one is contemplating the purchase of fruit or agricultural land in a new section it is not only a good plan to take a spade and investigate the character of the subsoil and look into the exact status of the water right if the tract is in an irrigation section, but to take the trouble of inquiring into the business integrity and financial rating of the chap with whom the farm or ranch is listed for sale.

In selecting a site for the orchard it is perhaps natural to make the mistake of choosing a soil which is in reality too rich and fat for the best production of apples. On such soil conditions seem to exist which tend to a production of wood rather than fruit growth, thus defeating the object one has in view. Pears will produce fruit on rich, moist soils, while peach trees should be set on the thinnest soil on the place.

Kansas took a step ahead as a fruit producing state when the law recently passed making the spraying for San Jose scale and other pests compulsory was declared constitutional. The law requires orchard owners to spray and otherwise properly care for their trees. Representatives of the federal department of agriculture and of the Kansas experiment station are planning to thoroughly demonstrate spraying in several counties in the eastern part of the state this season.

The soy bean is being put to a use by Chinese and Japanese farmers which might be adopted with decided advantage by American farmers who live in sections where this legume does well. The oil which is extracted from the bean is taking the place of linseed oil, while the cake which is left after the oil is removed is used with excellent results as a substitute for linseed and cottonseed meal as a stock ration. The advantage of the soy bean is that the growing of it means soil enrichment and not soil impoverishment, as is true of both flax and cotton.

The regular bearing of fruit by trees which have suffered some injury, seriously impairing their vitality, has led orchardists to experiment along the line of a purposeful cutting or wounding of orchard trees with the object in view of getting them to produce something besides healthy and glossy looking leaves. In some cases this is done by removing several narrow strips of bark lengthwise from the trunk of the tree, enough of the bark and underlying cambium being left between the strips removed so that the tree will be able to heal. Another plan followed with considerable success consists in cutting a circular trench about the tree to the depth of three or four feet and four or five feet from the trunk and severing all of the roots which cross it. In both of these methods it is well for the novice to try them on a limited scale with two or three trees.

Next fall there will be inaugurated at Lyndon, Vt., a plan that should commend itself to friends of agricultural education in other parts of the country. The characteristic feature of the plan is a labor system which will enable too ablebodied students to pay their way with the work they do on the farm connected with the Lyndon academy. The expenses for the nine months are figured at $30 for tuition, $108 for board and room and $18 for books. The boys are to be taught the theory of agriculture in the class room and will work these theories out on the farm under intelligent supervision. Remuneration is to be at the rate of 15 cents per hour, or $25 a month during the summer. This plan will enable many an energetic boy to acquire a helpful education without having acquired a bank account of his own or getting help from the old folks.

A friend whose acquaintance the writer has lately made, though seventy-five years old and financially situated so that he could well get along without working, nevertheless puts in most every day on his acre ranch, cultivating, hoeing and raking. He works in rain and shine and seems to enjoy his labor. We asked him the other day why he worked so hard, and he told us he would be lost without something to keep him busy and, besides, he felt better and had a better appetite and slept better. This working within the limits of his strength is doubtless the primary cause of his rugged health and to some extent for the genial good feeling radiating from him. It is a very simple means our good friend takes to keep himself shipshape and his view of things rational and wholesome, but yet one might well be used by many another elderly man with gain to himself and those about him.

VOL. XXVII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1910 NUMBER 33

MORE FACTS ABOUT COUNTY DIVISION.

Why All Should Vote for Pennington County.

The section of the county bordering on the division line between reduced Red Lake county and Pennington county is being cajoled, threatened, coaxed and even bullied into opposing county division and of working for the old regime of high taxes and special privileges for the south end entirely.

The recent appropriations of the road and bridge fund are merely indications of how the county commissioners use this public money to accomplish the purposes of the men in hiding. There is no doubt that if this bordering section wanted more than their share of the road and bridge fund this year that they could easily secure it. That they could get even a "look in" at any other period is proven to be impossible. It is to the credit of the citizens of Pennington county, however, that they have made no special offers to this strip of territory to secure its support next fall. Pennington county is ready to let the case stand on its merits and to give the taxpayers an opportunity of proving by their votes whether they stand for high taxes, inefficiency, men in hiding and that sort of thing any longer. The impression still prevails that the long list of intolerable acts of which the powers that be are guilty will cause all persons in Pennington county to vote for a close of this notorious condition which is bringing the county of Red Lake to the verge of bankruptcy.

Another good sample of trying to buy or compel a section of Pennington county to "be good" was seen in Thief River Falls a year or two ago. The county commissioners were induced—but how they were ever persuaded to do so is surprising—into appropriating some funds to aid in the construction of a steel bridge across the Red Lake River in the city of Thief River Falls. The bridge cost the city some $10,000 and was particularly valuable and convenient to all that section of farm country lying east and south east of Thief River Falls. Because this city at the time refusing to comply with certain requirements of the interests down the river $1000 of the appropriation was simply withdrawn. This was illegal and could have been fought successfully in the courts, but Thief River would not lend itself to such methods of securing even a part of what she is entitled to. The loss of the money was scarcely mentioned at the time and but few Thief River citizens know of the transaction at the present date. The city is big enough and rich enough to care for its own interests without any outside aid. It pays one-fifth of the total tax in Red Lake county today and is entitled to that share of the road and bridge fund, but has never sought or got it, does not now seek it and will not in the future. All it asks is that the road and bridge fund be spent on the highways of the county where the law expects it to be placed. Give Pennington good roads and Thief River will secure an indirect benefit far surpassing what the road and bridge fund might accomplish were it expended right in the city—which it never will permit, of course. The action of the majority of the county board in the above case is, however, a true index of the spirit which controls their every action.

And still another case. It is claimed that certain settlers on the reservation on making final proof on their homesteads find that the county officers have maintained a striking vigilance in their particular cases and have anticipated the final proof to the extent that some of these lands are placed on the tax lists too soon. These lands are owned by persons who have been active in striving to compel the board of county commissioners to grant the Eleven towns representation on their board. Other lands on which final proof is made escape this close scrutiny.

And still one more simple story, revealing a little recent political history and tending to show how those holding the reins of government in Red Lake county do not permit anything to escape them which might aid in crushing out opposition to their dangerous practices. The last legislature passed a bill appropriating some 600,000 for the state road and bridge fund and this amount was to be divided among the several counties of the state. Red Lake county was booked to receive about $6,000. The legislature suggested that these amounts be distributed in the counties by the board of commissioners, by the state senators or by the house of representatives. Knowing conditions in Red Lake county, they provided that Senator Hanson distribute the $6000. The south end of the county, however, through their board of commissioners, and particularly through others who profit by their close relationship to this board, made Rome howl with protests against this method of distributing the $6,000. They would not tolerate any system which did not permit the public funds to filter through their greedy fingers. Not a man of them but well know that Senator Hanson would have made a most equitable division of this money, giving each section of the county its fair share, regardless of their relations to him or each other, but they wanted all of it, the share of the north end as well as of their own part of the county. They are so accustomed to this manner of doing public business that it has become a part of their religion now to make Pennington county hand over their taxes for them to spend as they see fit. Does anyone doubt for an instant where this money would have gone had the county board had the distribution of it. However, the supreme court held the appropriation unconstitutional so no county received any of it and it still lies in the state treasury.

What a relief from such financial highway robbery will be the establishment of a county which will be Pennington county for Pennington county citizens and will be run by Pennington county taxpayers.

A. L. Hanson's Platform.

To the Voters of the Sixty-First Legislative District:

Four years ago you nominated and elected me to represent you in the state senate. In announcing my candidacy at that time I made known to you my position on the questions that were being considered, as follows:

"I favor and will support, if elected, the extension of the primary nominating system to include all state officers and United States senators; the enactment of a reciprocal demurrage law; prohibiting the issuing to and use of railway passes by all state, legislative, judicial and county officials whether elective or appointive; reduction in freight, express and passenger rates; increasing the power of the railroad and warehouse commission; thorough control and regulation of all corporations; taxing of corporation property in the same manner as all other property; redistricting of legislative districts of the state so as to give to the Northern part of the state its proper representation in the state legislature; local option by counties in the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors; the enactment of a more stringent pure food law; liberal support of the state sanitorium for care and cure of consumptives; liberal support of schools, educational institutions, drainage, good roads, and for state development; the safe-guarding of state timber and mineral property; the re-electing of Knute Nelson as United States Senator. I will put forth my best efforts to secure the enactment of any other legislation that would be to the best interests of the people of the district and state."

In becoming a candidate for re-election I wish to respectfully submit that I supported every measure mentioned in that statement and endeavored to the best of my ability to fulfill every promise made therein and on all other measures that came up I voted for or against them on the merits of each measure. I voted for the the Initiative and Referendum; the nomination of United States senators by direct vote of the people; the submission to the people of a constitutional amendment granting equal suffrage; a tonnage tax on iron ore; reform of the rules, and the distance tariff. I opposed every measure proposed which, in my judgment was not in the interest of the people in this district and state. I assisted in defeating the million dollar appropriation asked for the holding of a "Semi centennial Exposition" at the State Fair Grounds; also the one hundred thousand dollars asked for the "Alaskan-Yukon" and fifty thousand dollars asked for the "Jamestown" expositions. I opposed every raise of salary, except that of governor and county commissioners, and every expenditure of the peoples money except for necessary and useful purposes. I also opposed the county bonding bill, taking away from the people the right to say whether or not the county board should issue bonds. In opposing this bill I was full aware that I was incurring the displeasure of the "big interests" in some of the counties in my district, but as I was there as the representative of the people I considered that I had no right to vote to allow their county boards to bond them without their consent. I believe the opposition to my re-election is largely based on my opposition to this county bonding bill and because I favor county option. I know that I am criticized as not having accomplished anything and the reasons assigned are that I am not a good mixer and that I created antagonisms. I believe that I can say without fear of truthful contradiction that I supported as much legislation in the interest of the people and opposed as much that was against their interest as any member of the Senate. I believe, too, that I can count as my personal friend every member of that body who stood for legislation in the interest of the people.

If you shall again decide to nominate and elect me to represent you I will continue to stand for such legislation as will be for the best interests of this district and state. I will do my utmost to secure a fair and just re-apportionment of the legislative districts of the state at the next session of the legislature, to take effect before the election of 1912. I believe that the state lands should be classified and that the agricultural lands should be appraised and at all times open to entry and purchase on liberal terms on a condition of residence and improvement. A constitutional amendment permitting a change in the handling of state lands should be submitted to the people so as to permit this.

It would be only exact justice for the state to aid in drainage and in building roads and bridges and in the support of schools in those counties from which it has received incomes from the sale of Internal Improvement and Swamp lands and in which it still owns large tracts of such lands. It was the purpose of the federal government in donating such lands to the state to have the state so improve them as to make them fit for cultivation and for the building and supporting of homes upon them.

I favor: Agricultural and Industrial instruction in all schools of the state and liberal state support for that purpose; the best possible protection against the recurrence of forest fires; the loaning of the trust funds of the state within the state so as to aid in its development; a one mill road and bridge tax and in order to make it available to the counties most in need of assistance I favor the repeal of the constitutional requirement that a county must tax its people two dollars to be expended on roads and bridges for every dollar that gets out of the "State Road and Bridge Fund."

I will support a reasonable appropriation for advertising the state's advantages to actual settlers. It is however my judgement that it would be a far better investment to spend a much larger amount for the betterment of the people now living in the state. If they can be made prosperous and contented the question of immigration to the state will take care of itself.

I believe in the conservation and development of our state and national resources in everything that tends to the betterment of our people. I believe in progressive measures.

I am a firm believer in that all people should have a voice in their government and that a majority should rule, and for this reason believe in "county option" in the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors.

I believe that it is my duty if elected, to vote your wishes on all questions and believing that your choice for United States Senator to be elected at the next session of the legislature, Moses E. Clapp, I hereby promise if elected to cast my vote for his re-election.

If these policies and those for which I have stood in the past meet your ap*proval, I solict and shall* appreciate your good will and support in this campaign.

Thanking you for a consideration of my candidacy, I am,

Yours very truly,
A. L. Hanson.

FEWER ACRES, BETTER FARMING.

If there is one fact that needs impressing on the mind of the American soil tiller who is handling more than eighty acres it is that he could make just as much money in the long run and do it far easier and with a greater degree of satisfaction if he would work half as much land twice as well as the area he is at present handling. This fact is brought to light in the crop statistics—cold figures—which show the average yield of corn per acre for the country to be twenty-seven bushels, wheat fourteen bushels, oats between twenty and twenty-five bushels and potatoes from eighty to a hundred bushels, with the yields of other staple farm crops on a par with those mentioned. It is shown in the further fact that so few farms have the gardens they ought to have to raise vegetables and fruits for the home table. Reason—men too busy from daylight till dark tending crops, making hay and milking cows and the women folks too busy in the house feeding hungry men and washing and mending their shirts to take up this outside work as an extra burden. It is further shown in the fact that the average flock of hens is left to shift for themselves instead of being looked after systematically and made a source of substantial profit; further shown in so many men keeping herds of unprofitable cows simply because they are so swamped with work—part of it milking these same cows—that they don't find time to figure out whether they are paying for the stuff they eat. It is easier to offer advice than to put advice into practice, but it is from this reduction in the area worked by one man and the handling of it more intensively and intelligently that any regeneration in our agriculture must chiefly come. The time is past when slipshod, hit-and-go-miss methods can be employed on the farm and a fair interest return on money invested be realized. There is already in existence as a result of patient research and experiment a body of information which may properly be termed the science of farming, and while awake tillers of the soil are looking to this in ever increasing numbers for information and assistance, while it seems clear that the others will have to do this if they continue much longer in the business. This science has to do with the fundamental facts of the chemistry of soils and the make-up of natural and artificial fertilizers. It states the causes of soil depletion and tells why rotation of crops is necessary. It takes up the question of balanced rations and shows what feeds may be most economically used to produce given results. It analyzes milk yields and makes possible the weeding out of unprofitable individuals of dairy herds, and it applies the tuberculin test and locates the diseased and unprofitable cow. It does these things and hundreds of others. It goes without saying that the farmer must get hold of as much of this information as possible if he would keep up with the procession. Unless he does so he is bound to become a straggler on the highway of progress.

A NEW WORM PEST.

Added to the conditions of drought which are always present, a portion of northeastern New Mexico, southern Colorado and a strip of the Texas Panhandle are being overrun with what is known as the New Mexico range caterpillar. The full grown larvae, which have a spiny and decidedly ugly appearance, frequently measure two and a half inches in length and are as thick as a man's forefinger. Counts which have been made of the number of caterpillars on small areas show that sections which are worst infested have as many as 20,000,000 of these huge worms to a square mile. The bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture has been making a study of the life history of this worm, its natural enemies and measures which are effective in its extinction and has published the data collected as bulletin No. 85, part 5, bureau of entomology.

SERVING TWO MASTERS.

It beats all how a handful of cigars or a ride in the easy going automobile of some smooth tongued representative of special interests at state or national capitals will befog the mind of a legislator relative to the plain duties devolving upon him as representative and trustee of the interests of his constituents. But the day is at hand when he will have to fish or cut bait and decide whom he will serve. This matter of the people paying lawmakers good fat salaries to represent them only to have them turn up later in the guise of easy marks and stool pigeons of capitalistic interests is a type of traitorism that is viewed with increasing abhorrence in the mind of thinking people, and it's time the fellows who have belonged to this class repented in sackcloth and ashes or ran for their cyclone cellars.

Those starting in the growing of chrysanthemums should keep in mind that these plants are gross consumers of plant food, need heavy fertilizing and frequent watering. If the largest measure of success is to be attained with them. Failure with this fine flower is sometimes due to the fact that the bed in which they are set is placed too near a hedge or shrubs, which are also heavy pullers on both fertility and moisture.

If sheep had no further point in their favor the keeping of a flock of from thirty to sixty on the average farm would be amply justified from the service they render as weed destroyers, it being a matter of statistics that of more than 500 different kinds of weeds they will consume all but about fifty varieties. Along with dairying the practice of sheep raising needs introducing in many grain raising sections of the country, while it needs reintroducing into some sections where it was once in vogue.

The northeast slope has been viewed for many years past as the ideal site for an orchard location. This seems to be due to the fact that on such locations orchards are not only exposed to the cold winds of spring, which tend to retard a development of blossom, bud and leaf, but receive much less directly the rays of the warming sun. In localities where there is never danger from spring frosts these factors are not so vital, but in latitudes where this is a recurrent danger this matter of location is an important one.

With parcels-post systems in operation and beneficially so in practically all leading foreign countries, it would seem to be but a short time until such a system, or a modification of it, will be adopted in this country. Country dwellers are beginning to make insistent demand for the adoption of the plan, and this means that the professional politician who has his ear nearer to the speaking tube of the express companies than the folks out in the corn, wheat and cotton fields will have to get busy shortly if he stays in office.

An invention which gives promise of being of immense benefit to the orange packing industry has lately been installed in the plant of the Redlands Orange Growers' association. In brief, it is a device in which the fruit is subjected to an alcohol bath, the perfectly sound and solid fruit going to the bottom of the tank and the light and imperfect fruit remaining at the surface, whence it is removed by an endless conveyor. This simple device not only accomplishes what the human hand and eye cannot, but it has been found that fruit given the alcohol bath keeps longer and in a better state of preservation through a destruction of all rot spores on the surface. The cost of the operation is 1¾ cents per box for alcohol and 2¾ cents for labor.

That lad was certainly an exception to the run of boys who cried because his father had considerately and properly made the necessary arrangements for him to go to the circus, preferring rather to stay home and plow corn so that he could be with the horses, which he had lately learned to drive, an accomplishment in which he took a deal of pride. If we remember correctly said boy was not compelled to put in a dull day at the circus. It may be interesting to note that this lad, now grown, is making a nice success of his farming operations.

The bee moth is a pest that is likely to lay its eggs in comb honey that is stored and not properly protected, and also does so in hives in which the swarm has made headquarters for too long a time. The super of a hive into which we looked the other evening was literally alive with lusty larvae and the newly hatched moths. When this state of affairs exists the swarm is usually done for, and the moths and larvae should be given a sulphur smudge or a dose of carbon bisulphide by placing a few drops of the chemical on a piece of cotton and inserting it into the entrance to the hive.

With the north pole tagged by Peary and the battle against the air seemingly won, as shown in the remarkable performances of aviators in America and Europe during the past few weeks, there would appear to be little else to achieve along the line of accomplishing the seemingly impossible and wonderful. Yet a large place in public esteem waits for the man who may be able to catch and conserve the sweltering heat of summer for use during the winter season, as we already do winter's cold when we store cakes of ice. Experiments have been conducted along this line, but so far they have been without result.

With meat products at a high notch as a result of a scarcity of food animals and with an ever increasing output of gold tending to still further inflate prices, the time would seem to be appropriate for a whole lot of fellows to diversify their agricultural operations by making a start with a flock of sheep. With intelligent care they are easy to raise, while a major part of their keep is furnished by the weeds—the bane and waste byproduct of most every farm. Besides very satisfactory prices which one may expect for mutton, the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, which shoved wool duties to a still higher level, will hardly be changed within a decade, hence good prices may be counted on for the fleece of the flock. To a man up a tree the sheep business looks mighty good for several years to come.

Owing to the difference in the amount of gluten in flour made from hard and soft wheat, the housewife moving from the east to the west, where the soft wheat flour prevails, should increase the amount of flour used in her recipes close to a third to get the texture of bread or cake which she has been used to.

Estimates of the 1910 cotton crop received by the department of agriculture place the average at 33,196,000 as compared with 32,292,000 last year, which is an increase of 904,000 acres, or 2.8 per cent. The condition of the crop on June 1 was placed at 82 of the normal as against 81.1 per cent a year prior and 80.9 per cent the ten year average.

Those school directors who excuse school when the big circus comes to town—rarely oftener than once a year—give practical recognition of the fact that attention to the subjects in hand on the part of an active boy is a prime requisite to the acquisition of information. Incidentally they make a very warm spot for themselves in the hearts of the youngsters of the community.

That cleanliness is a very important factor in the keeping quality of eggs was proved to the writer quite conclusively the other day (June 15) when he found six eggs in his mow of alfalfa hay which were laid prior to Jan. 15, when the hens on the place were removed by the former owner. In the interval of five months there was a range of temperature from 20 degrees to 95 degrees F. The eggs when broken were not even musty, the only deterioration noticeable being a slight weakening of the membranes enveloping the yolk.

The easiest money made today is not by tilling the soil, but by the class of schemers who promise gullible folks returns from mining or other investment enterprises which are more than a fair interest return on a business proposition honestly financed. Were there such fabulous returns from the operation of the mines as the promoters usually give their victims to understand there wouldn't be a dollar of the stock for sale, let alone peddling it around at from 12 to 10 cents a share ("this for a short time only, as the price will be advanced in a few days").

A good many of the so called stock foods and tonics, while containing a certain portion of wholesome food elements, contain more or less grain hulls and mill sweepings, which at the high prices asked make them more expensive and less effective than the same quantity of standard feeds, such as bran, brewers' grains, flaxseed or cottonseed meal bought in bulk. A relish is given these prepared foods by the addition of a herb or two and a generous amount of salt, which average farm animals get all too little of. The fact of the matter is that the stock feeder can buy his own ingredients, get them pure and free from trash and weed seeds and manufacture a tonic on his own hook at less than a third of the cost of the foods put up in fancy packages, with pictures of fat steers, hogs and horses on them.

There are all kinds of boys in their teens today who misuse or at least waste their spare hours who when they get to be forty will be blaming Providence or the government or somebody else because they have not fared better in a financial way. These same boys overlook the fact that the men who achieve and make good tomorrow are the boys today who, while they have their playtime, and very rightly so, devote the hours not given to healthful recreation to self improvement by reading, thinking and storing their minds with a fund of information which will stand them in good stead in future days. And usually it is these same level headed boys who tend to business in school and make the study hours of their schoolmates and the work of their teachers a pleasure instead of a bane and bugbear.

During the past year or two folks in North Dakota have been biting very hard on the grocery peddler's bait. Briefly, the agent goes through the country districts, shows excellent samples of staple groceries and on the strength of these takes orders. Later those who have ordered goods are sent notices that on a certain day the car containing the groceries will be at the depot. When the purchases arrive the patrons are told that the distributing agent is in a great hurry and that the railway folks have ordered the car off the sidetrack within a specified time. This means that the stuff bought is loaded on to the wagon without careful inspection. On arriving home the housewife looks into the purchases and finds, along with some fairly good stuff, a lot that is cheap and shoddy—a good deal cheaper than the price paid. These chaps never visit the same place a second time, as their victims usually remember their previous experience. However, in the Dakota case there was another good reason. The state pure food commissioner got after these fakers and found that the bulk of the stuff sold was in direct violation of the pure food law, which seeks to prevent the adulteration of food products, when the fines assessed against them soon outran their profits. The same game has been tried in other states with about the same results. It would seem that it was about time for rural inhabitants to get wise to the game.

THE ABANDONED FARM.

With about all of the free government land taken up and the hunger of folks for land increasing rather than diminishing, a good deal of interest is being shown by home seekers in some sections in what are known as the abandoned farms found in the New England states, but in larger number in the state of New York. These farms are usually found in hilly sections and comprise tracts which in the beginning never should have been reclaimed from the forest areas of which they were a part or are tracts which originally possessed an agricultural value which has been reduced and depleted as a result of a skinning and robbing system of handling. In some fewer instances these farms, possessing considerable agricultural value, are to be found in localities which are particularly remote and lonesome or at too great a distance from market. Often the neighborhoods in which these farms are found are peopled by folks of an ultra conservative and nonprogressive class, the remnant following a long period in which there has been an exodus of the younger and more progressive members of the community to sections farther west, where agricultural conditions were more inviting. The farms in question still possessing possibility of regeneration and agricultural usefulness have become unproductive as a result of improper handling, which has brought about a poor physical condition of the soil, lack in humus and soil sourness or acidity. A good deal of thought has been devoted to the possibility of reclaiming these abandoned farms, and as a result of these investigations some practical suggestions have been made. One of these investigators is Dean Bailey of the New York experiment station at Cornell, N. Y. He believes that these farms may be used for one of three purposes—the growing of fruit, the revival of animal industries and extension of dairying and for the growing of forests. Properly handled, including the raising of stock and dairying and the application of fertilizers and lime, there is little question that many of these farms could be brought to a satisfactory profit giving basis. A point in their favor is nearness to large market centers, which will continue to improve as the years go by. Many of these farms will never be reclaimed. Others, however, will be, and are deserving of the careful investigation of the land seeker who may not have a considerable amount to invest.

AN EASY WAY TO SAVE MONEY.

Bankers should be—and the vast majority of them are—conservators of business integrity and financial stability. In serving their patrons they make it a business of inquiring into the financial rating of business houses, investment companies and other corporations which seek loans of the public's money. Occupying the position they do, they are in an especially favorable position for knowing of or ascertaining the reliability of individuals or firms that seek such investment. Millions upon millions of hard earned money belonging to small investors might be saved from dissipation annually were they to exercise the simple precaution of stepping into their local bank and inquiring the financial standing of such and such company that they may think of intrusting with their money. If the banker should not be able to give the required information offhand it is safe to say that he can set inquiries afoot which will result in securing the desired information. The next time you have in mind investing your hard won coin in some investment scheme promising more than legitimate returns refer the matter to your banker. It is quite likely he can be useful to you.

AN ICELESS REFRIGERATOR.

Where one is so located that ice cannot be had for a refrigerator a very good substitute may be arranged by making a cooler of the size desired with board top and bottom and screen frames for the sides, one side serving as a door. On the top of the cooler a small tank should be placed containing water, a galvanized tank being most durable. Pieces of duck cloth or other material of about the same weight should be fixed so as to hang over the screen sides of the cooler, the upper ends extending into the tank of water. As a result of the law of capillary attraction, that operative in a common lamp wick, the water is slowly absorbed from the tank and spreads through the cloths and as fast as evaporated is renewed from above. It is this process of evaporation that keeps the inclosure cool. The water should be renewed as frequently as necessary. The cooler will give the best results if placed in the shade, where there are currents of air moving, which will increase the process of evaporation.

In some sections of England young people have formed rat and sparrow clubs whose purpose is to exterminate these pests. In one village the local club reported a slaughter of 3,838 rats and 830 sparrows.

Luscious as the peach may be and delicious the pear, after all a fine crisp apple will be eaten with greater relish day in and out than any other fruit known. It is this that makes it the king of all fruits.

It is a commendable modesty which frequently causes the little rooster to seek a secluded place behind the barn or hide in the depths of the corn patch while getting that crowing apparatus of his into working order.

There are days when the Pacific slope rancher may perspire as freely as the eastern farmer, but he can count on cool nights for refreshing slumber and is not harassed with the prospect of June freshets, tornadoes and cyclones.

In the acreage which they have devoted to winter wheat Kansas, Indiana, Illinois, Nebraska and Ohio lead, ranking in the order given. In the growing of spring wheat the leading and practically the only producing states are North Dakota, Minnesota, South Dakota and Washington, the rank being in the order given.

Unless one has been posted before hand relative to the fact that the newcomer into a semiarid section usually consumes a season in finding out that rarely will beans pod as they should unless they are given proper irrigation. Without the needed moisture they may keep on blossoming the season through, but they will produce no pods.

The orchard should not be turned into a hog lot, but it is not a bad idea to turn the drove of hogs into the orchard for three or four hours every few days from now on until harvest time to clean up the defective and wormy fruit. They will not only relish the fruit, but will play smash with a good many worms. More than this, it removes from under the trees a mess which is likely to be sort of nasty at picking time.

While scenery is not usually figured as a tangible asset when one purchases farm or ranch, it is nevertheless a source of much satisfaction and inspiration when one is working afield to lift his head and see the varied greenery and translucent blue haze of mountain vale, ridge or slope, the same, yet ever changing with the change in density of air, in angle of sunlight and with shadow cast by passing cloud. Such tree clad slopes are never dull or prosy, but a constant object of admiration on the part of former plain country dwellers.

Experiments which are being conducted along the line of growing camphor trees in the territory bordering the gulf coast seem to prove that conditions there are as favorable for the proper development of the tree as are to be found in China or Japan. One Louisiana horticulturist reports trees on his premises having a diameter of thirty inches and sixty feet tall which seem entirely acclimated and mature their fruit each year. It is his opinion that camphor growing could be followed in the sections mentioned on a profitable commercial scale.

Feeding experiments which have been carried on by various experiment stations show that the cost of a milk producing ration for the average dairy cow for a year is $41. On the average farm the feed bill for the year will run from $5 to $10 less than this. In any case, it is important to ascertain by means of milk measurement and testing whether the income from the several individuals composing the herd exceeds by a good margin this annual feed bill. If it does not the loafers should be converted into tinned meats for Uncle Sam's soldiers.

To any readers whose orchards may have been run over with fire the past spring it may be a great source of comfort to know that fire damage usually shows up worst the first season following its occurrence. If the cambium layer of the trunk is not more than half destroyed there is reason to expect that the tree will heal and continue as a useful individual in the orchard family. If the damage exceeds this it is questionable if in the long run the tree would not better be removed and a new one set in its place. However, the degree of recovery it makes the second season following the fire injury will determine the best course to follow.

The North Dakota experiment station has hit upon a very sensible plan for instructing the rural population of the state concerning the plant diseases which have done great damage to the farm and garden crops of that commonwealth. Inasmuch as but a small per cent of the country boys and girls carry their education beyond that obtainable in the district school, the station officials argued that here was the place to give some practical instruction in agriculture. They accordingly prepared large boxes, each containing plant specimens showing twenty different diseases which affect crops in the state. Accompanying the specimens are statements giving in brief the life history of the diseases and how to fight them. The complete collection costs $2. The plan is certainly a commendable one and might well be adopted in all sections where fruit, vegetable or grain crops are affected by insect or fungous pests.

For clearing a piece of land of weeds, underbrush and small trees there is no agency for the preliminary operations that will surpass a flock of Angora goats. They will not only browse weeds, leaves and shoots, but will strip the bark from young trees a distance of eight or nine feet.

A dead fly is less obnoxious than a live one, and a dead fly outdoors is less of a nuisance than one in the house. For this reason the war on the flies should be carried into the open by placing plates of poison in places where they congregate, safe out of reach of the little folks, unless the formalin solution is used, in which case drinking it will do no harm.

There are thousands of dusty, dingy stables, many of these in basements, that might be sweetened and brightened immensely by sweeping and cleaning out the dust and cobwebs of years, giving the place a treatment with sulphur or other disinfectant and applying a coat of good whitewash to the walls and partitions and seeing that it reaches every crack and crevice.

In the building of a silo it is worth while remembering that the round structure is in every way superior to the square—cheaper to build, easier to stay with girders, while, owing to the fact that there are no corners, the silage keeps much better. If a landlord is so shortsighted that he will not share with his tenant the cost of a silo the latter could afford to build a stave silo, provided he had a lease of the farm for three or four years. At the end of his lease, if the landlord did not wish to take it off his hands, the tenant could take it down and with him to the next place he rents.

It is a fair inference that no small part of the thrift and intelligence of the French people in an agricultural way along the line of maintaining soil fertility is due to the 45,000 rural schools of the country, each having its agricultural department with gardens and fields, where the most approved methods of cultivation and preservation of the soil are taught to the boys and girls. A great as well as most encouraging era will have dawned in the United States when like pains are taken to instruct the boys and girls in the essential facts connected with this most important single industry upon which our prosperity as a people depends.

In the bulletin issued by the department of agriculture giving the condition of the corn crop of the country on July 1, the total acreage planted is placed at 114,083,000 acres, which is an increase of 5,312,000 acres, or 4.9 per cent, as compared with the final estimate of last year's acreage. The condition of the crop is placed at 85.4 per cent, as compared with 89.3 for July 1, 1909, and 85.1, the average for ten years. There are six states which have a corn acreage exceeding 8,000,000 acres, and they are as follows with the area in each devoted to growing this staple cereal: Illinois, 10,000,000 acres; Iowa, 9,470,0000; Texas, 8,905,000; Kansas, 8,912,000; Missouri, 8,202,000, and Nebraska, 8,060,000 acres. Wisconsin grows the least corn of twenty-four states reported, her acreage this season being 1,564 acres.

What promises to be one of the most extensive as well as fertile wheat growing sections of the west will be made of easy access when the railroad lines at present in process of construction are completed into the interior of eastern Oregon, a vast area that has been left untouched heretofore because of lack of transportation facilities. Not only can bumper crops of wheat be produced by the dry farming method, but in sections where water can be had for irrigation fruit and vegetables in great variety do well. Individual settlers can homestead a half section of the government lands in this newly opened section under the reclaimed desert act. Further information regarding the opportunities available in the section referred to may be had by addressing the office of public lands, Washington, or by sending to any Great Northern representative for the booklet lately published by this railroad completely descriptive of the lands along its new Oregon lines.

Dairymen can expect little sympathy from the consuming public along the line of legislation restricting the sale of oleomargarine when they themselves will sell the butter they make when it exceeds thirty cents a pound, and buy oleo for use on their own tables. It is true that this practice is by no means general, but we noted the other day an instance where farmers in northern Pennsylvania and southern New York did this very thing and boasted how much money they were saving by the proceeding. It naturally fell out that other folks in the community who did not keep cows thought they would be justified in practicing the same economy. It was not long until the price of butter in the locality fell from 35 to 26 cents a pound. Then the farmers who had started the ball to rolling realized that they had fired a boomerang which was reacting upon them with disastrous effects. It would be well if daily associations and dairy papers exploited the force of the above facts along with their advocacy of balanced rations, Babcock testers, and the use of thoroughbred sires.

It begins to look as if John King would "come back" to Red Lake county after the 1st of January.

It is not hard to believe that the "kitchen cabinet" is more anxious to hold office than is John Lind.

It is said that Iver A. Krohn, of Shevlin, is to be a candidate for representative in this district and that Charlie Carter, of Beltrami county, may also get into the race. Nothing bashful about our neighbors of the east.

The attorneys of Polk county have indorsed Judge Watts for another term. In the minds of the people there is considerable doubt as to the ability of Mr. Watts as a judge, and if Peter Matson becomes a candidate, the fight will be a close one.

It is surprising how soon the young calves will take to eating whole corn and oats. A small ration fed daily is an excellent idea and will keep them growing from the start.

The old lady who explained the thinness of her milk to her customers by saying it was due to scarcity of feed probably did not know that it is a well known fact that milk quality, butter fat content, is not affected at all by feed.

Nine dollars seems like a good deal to pay for mosquito netting to protect a single cherry tree from the birds, and yet when the value of a single crop from the tree frequently totals $50 and the netting lasts for several seasons the end is seen to justify the means.

There are few of the tender white roses that surpass the Frau Karl Druski in purity of color, fragrance or form. In size, too, it is all that could be desired. Like other members of the rose family it requires for best results a clayey rich soil, abundant water and severe cutting, which will allow the best buds only to come to maturity.

A fact that the professional politician seem slow in tumbling to is that present day agriculturists are not only taking an interest in manure spreaders, road drags and the like as aids to a better type of farming, but are waking up to the fact that the system of primary elections is a very effective means of getting them out of the rut in which they have been going politically.

More and more are sensible men who pay out money doing so by means of a check drawn on their account at the bank. With the date and amount of the payment indicated on the check stub, together with the service or commodity for which the check was given, there is no possibility that an account paid in this way will have to be paid a second time, the signature of the one in whose favor the check is drawn being a very effective receipt. Of course the use of a check book presupposes a bank account, which is another good thing for a fellow to have at his disposal.

We usually think of conservation of resources in connection with forest, water powers, etc., yet there is a more modest way in which the principle can be applied by the individual in his everyday work. Many a housewife in doing her sweeping and some other forms of work expends much more energy than is really necessary, while in hoeing many a man uses more force than he needs to do the work in hand, and especially is this true if his hoe is dull. Where one is at a job but a few minutes the question of an expenditure of extra force is not so vital, but where his labor extends over hours the matter becomes one of real importance.

An interesting fact has been noted by many an orchardist the past few months, and that is the purple color which was early taken on by so many varieties of apples which are a pure green or yellow at harvest. The writer has noted the same tendency on his own ranch in the case of the Newtown Pippin, Yellow Transparent and White Winter Pearmain. The coloring referred to seems to have been caused by cool nights, followed by warm days, and those who have made a careful study of the coloring referred to assert that the purple color not only enables the small apples to withstand more degrees of cold than fruit not colored, but that it more readily absorbs the heat of the sun, resulting in better growth and larger size.

The introduction of some of the European pheasants into certain sections of this country adjacent to agricultural land does not seem to be proving an unmixed boon. We noted recently the case of an Indiana farmer who reported that the pheasants got so tame that they came into his feed yards and not only scrapped with but licked his roosters and turkey gobblers, the flock of pheasants eating the grain scattered for the tame fowls. In some sections of New York these birds have grown so numerous that they raid the truck gardens, digging up newly set cabbage plants, eat newly sprouted corn and peck holes in cucumbers and muskmelons. It is true the pheasants consume some weed seeds and a few potato bugs, but it seems to be the verdict of those who have seen most of the birds that they do more harm than good.

It is just as impossible to maintain soil fertility when one keeps removing it in raw crops and returning nothing in the way of fertilizers, as it is to keep a fellow's bank account if he keeps checking from it continually, and makes no deposits; and it is high time a squad of soil tillers awoke to the truth of this fact. The land that is continually cropped to corn, cotton, small grain, fruit or vegetables, and is not replenished with manures, artificial fertilizers or by the growing of legumes is doomed to ultimate exhaustion, and depletion to the point where the crop returns will not pay the taxes. There are thousands of farms which are headed straight in this direction located in states whose virgin soil was the richest and most prodigal the sun ever shone upon, and they will arrive at the condition referred to unless the owners repent of their evil ways and adopt more enlightened and rational agricultural methods. New York already has her "abandoned farms," but it won't be many years, if present methods are continued, until Ohio, Indiana and Illinois will have theirs too.

visit to Christiania. Dr. Ivart Sievertson says in a recent interview in the Minneapolis Journal: "He was lionized as no monarch ever has been in the Norwegian capital and the decorations were more general and elaborate than for members of the royal family of Europe. His Nobel peace prize address, which I had the pleasure of hearing, was received with the deepest attention. It made a profound impression. I am sure that his visit has given the Norwegians a much higher appreciation of America and Americans. Christiania was a most peculiar place during the first week of May. During the first three days the entire city was heavily draped in black for the funeral of Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the greatest man of the nation. During the next three days the black drapings were replaced by the gay colors of the Norwegian and American flags in honor of Colonel Roosevelt and on the seventh day the somber black was again displayed for the death of King Edward, father of the queen of Norway." Dr. Sivertson visited Lauritz S. Swenson, minister to Switzerland, in his home in Berne. While in Vienna, where he studied medicine at the university, he found about 100 American physicians and surgeons, among them Dr. Soren P Rees of Minneapolis.

So many different opinions have been expressed regarding the late Bjornstjerne Bjornson's religious views that it would be futile to begin to enumerate any of them here. Many of the religious papers both in America and abroad believe that he became a radicalist in matters appertaining to religion during his last years and that indeed seems rather evident. At any rate, the consensus of opinion in the various reviews appears to be that the famous author was given to a great deal of speculation, but that he attempted to deliberately mislead his admirers does not seem to appeal very strongly to the critics. So marked, in fact, was Bjornson's break with the official church in Norway that Rev. Herman Lunde did not hesitate to touch upon this delicate matter in his funeral sermon over Bjornson, saying in part: "At this bier I cannot refrain from admitting that there is much in our church which tends to scare people away. And not only in the church, but in Christianity as it appears among us. For narrow mindedness, heartless denunciation and heresy baiting and scant appreciation of a real spiritual development on the basis of honest research—behold, of this I am sorry to say there is not a little in our churches and free meetings and it often looks as if every one thinks more of what belongs to him individually than he thinks of the great characteristic of the disciples of Christ, mutual love."

That the American journalists who accompanied Roosevelt during his visit in Christiania were treated shamefully, in the opinion of the "Verdens Gang" of Christiania. According to that paper they received a great deal better treatment in Stockholm, where the City Press club did everything to make their stay in Stockholm pleasant and did as much as possible to secure them the news that they were after. In Christiania the case was different. There, says the "Verdens Gang," the American journalists were placed in such a position during the Roosevelt lecture that they were not able to listen to what was going on, while the Norwegian journalists occupied places close to the distinguished speaker, where they could listen to every word that he spoke. The result was, of course, that the American journalists did not send in any detailed account of Roosevelt's visit and his speech to the American papers. "And," says the "Verdens Gang" in conclusion, "our country is not so large or so well known but what we need the good will of those who are to give their opinions about us abroad."

The building trades strike has been increasing in strength every day and now there are about 2,500 men out of employment in the city of Christiania. Everything is being done to bring about a settlement between the factions, but thus far efforts in this direction have been fruitless.

DENMARK.

Professor Bernhard Boeggild, founder of co-operative dairying, is at present on a tour in the Western states in America, accompanied by his wife. He is professor of dairying in the Royal Agricultural college of Denmark and is touring the agricultural schools and creameries of the United States. After a tour in the state of Minnesota Mr. Boeggild joined with his countrymen in celebrating Denmark's national holiday, June 5, a celebration which was observed by a number of Danish societies from St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The present king of Denmark, who is a brother of the dowager queen of England, Alexandra, has arranged to entertain his sister during the latter part of the summer season. Dowager Queen Alexandra will spend a good deal of her time in Denmark hereafter and the chances are that she will prefer to spend the greater part of her summers in the homeland after this.

In Gaesley the other day the body of a man was found in a barrel half filled with water. The body was head first in the barrel. No one seems to know just how the drowning happened, but people in the immediate vicinity believe that it was a case of suicide.

The Radicals, who caused the disruption of the folketing, have recently suffered a crushing defeat at the Danish polls. The Venstre party was victorious and administered a lesson which will not soon be forgotten.

THE BISHOP WAS HERE

Rt. Rev. Timothy Corbett Paid His First Visit to Thief River Falls.

Confirmation Services Held at St Bernard's Church in this City Sunday.

The Rt. Rev. Timothy Corbett, D. D., of Crookston, came to Thief River Falls last Saturday and remained until Monday afternoon, it being his first visit to this city. He was met at the depot by Fr. Adolph and a committee of St Bernard's congregation, and was escorted to the parsonage where he met a number of the men of the congregation. In the afternoon he was driven about town and naturally expressed himself as greatly pleased with Thief River Falls.

Sunday morning Bishop Corbett was escorted from the parsonage to the church by the clergy and members of the parish, and at 10 o'clock solemn high mass was celebrated by Fr. Roman, O. S. B., Indian missionary at Beaulieu. Fr. Conrad, subprior of St. John's Abbey, Collegeville, Minn., was deacon and Fr. Hugo, of Minneapolis, was subdeacon of the mass. Fr. Adolph acted as master of the ceremonies.

After high mass, Bishop Corbett examined the confirmation class and later confirmed seventy-seven persons.

In the afternoon, the City Band, whose special benefactor Fr. Adolph has been since its organization, volunteered a concert on the grounds at the parsonage, and this was enjoyed by the entire parish that had assembled to meet Bishop Corbett. The ladies of the parish also served ice cream cake.

At 7:30 in the evening the Rt. Rev Bishop blessed seven statutes and gave benediction with the blessed sacrament.

Bishop Corbett, who is well known as an orator, delivered two forceful sermons while here, one at mass in the morning and one in the evening. The choir rendered beautiful music and the ladies had decorated the church artistically.

George Dixon Dead.

George Dixon died Tuesday morning after an illness of over a year. Death was due to apoplexy.

The deceased was born in slavery 75 years ago in the state of North Carolina, and after the war came to the North. He was one of the pioneers of North Dakota, having settled at Grafton when that city was first started and he made considerable money in real estate speculation, but afterwards lost it all. Several years ago he came to Thief River Falls and has made his home here since. His genial disposition made him many friends, and he did not have an enemy in the world.

BOYS AND GIRLS' CLUBS.

One of the most encouraging and interesting methods which have recently been employed to aid in the good work of spreading agricultural education has been through the organization of boys and girls' agricultural clubs in many states of the Union. These usually trace their beginning to competitive contests of one kind or another in which special awards have been offered. The work has spread and become more comprehensive until there are today clubs for corn growing, cotton growing, potato and fruit growing, poultry raising, live stock study, bird study, domestic science and art study and high school improvement. The work of these clubs seems to have first been given state wide aid and recognition in New York in 1898 through the work of the College of Agriculture of Cornell university in the publication of its nature study bulletins. Since that time the work has taken a great variety of forms and has been developed in a number of other states. In a number of instances the same work has been inaugurated through the farsightedness and enterprise of some city or county superintendent. In the state of Nebraska, where the work has been very thoroughly organized, it has been carried on under the leadership of the state superintendent of public instruction in co-operation with the State Agricultural college. Practically every county in the state is now included in the plans. The boys grow their show corn and vegetables under directions sent out from headquarters, while the girls practice baking in accordance with recipes sent from the domestic science department of the state university.

Early in the fall a local contest is held in each school, the three prize winning exhibits and the three best essays being taken to the township show, then to a county exhibit and finally to the state corn growing and corn cooking contest at Lincoln. During this session a grand corn banquet is held, attended by from 2,000 to 3,000 of the brightest boys and girls from all over the state. In New York a similar plan is followed, the best exhibits from the local and country clubs being taken to the state exhibit held at the state college of agriculture during Farmers' week. In Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Texas, Georgia and a few other states similar work has been adopted, if on a somewhat smaller scale. In number of members the boys' and girls' clubs of New York lead with 75,000; Nebraska has 25,000; Mississippi, 6,000; Indiana, Ohio and North Dakota, each 5,000 members. The work of these clubs has vast possibilities for expansion and usefulness, and should be given generous support by local, state and federal agricultural and educational agencies. The work of the clubs so far has not only meant more cotton, corn, potatoes, and small grain per acre, better bread and pastry, but it has aroused an interest in civic and social improvement and better home conditions, most of all enriching and making useful and helpful the lives of all those who have had a hand in it. Farmers' bulletin No 385, recently issued, takes up the origin, scope and present work of the clubs above referred to and should be in the hands of every public school teacher and school official in the land.

EXTERMINATING FLEAS.

A lady reader of this department living near Ladoga, Ind., noticing the article which recently appeared on how to get rid of fleas, writes giving the method which was successfully used on a farm northeast of Athens, Ill., to which her family moved in the fall of 1896. She states that the fall on their arrival and the next summer they were almost eaten alive by fleas, and she doesn't see how the stock survived either. There were fleas in the cow shed, fleas in the barn and barnyard, fleas in woodshed, with plenty in the house. The fall of 1897 and the early winter was warm, so that they had fleas most all winter. The following spring before the fleas had thawed out and begun to hop her husband and the hired man dug out and hauled afield all of the manure about the premises—every bit, clean to the ground. They also raked all of the litter out of the wood and carriage sheds and burned them. They expected the fleas as usual, but they never turned up, nor have any appeared on the place since. Attacked as they were, the frosty morning and spring rains seem to have finished them. Of course, as our correspondent suggests, this plan will do no good for the fleas of this year, but the flea pestered ought to keep it in mind to carry out next spring.

It is surprising how soon the young calves will take to eating whole corn and oats. A small ration fed daily is an excellent idea and will keep them growing from the start.

The old lady who explained the thinness of her milk to her customers by saying it was due to scarcity of feed probably did not know that it is a well known fact that milk quality, butter fat content, is not affected at all by feed.

Nine dollars seems like a good deal to pay for mosquito netting to protect a single cherry tree from the birds, and yet when the value of a single crop from the tree frequently totals $50 and the netting lasts for several seasons the end is seen to justify the means.

There are few of the tender white roses that surpass the Frau Karl Druski in purity of color, fragrance or form. In size, too, it is all that could be desired. Like other members of the rose family it requires for best results a clayey rich soil, abundant water and severe cutting, which will allow the best buds only to come to maturity.

A fact that the professional politician seem slow in tumbling to is that present day agriculturists are not only taking an interest in manure spreaders, road drags and the like as aids to a better type of farming, but are waking up to the fact that the system of primary elections is a very effective means of getting them out of the rut in which they have been going politically.

More and more are sensible men who pay out money doing so by means of a check drawn on their account at the bank. With the date and amount of the payment indicated on the check stub, together with the service or commodity for which the check was given, there is no possibility that an account paid in this way will have to be paid a second time, the signature of the one in whose favor the check is drawn being a very effective receipt. Of course the use of a check book presupposes a bank account, which is another good thing for a fellow to have at his disposal.

We usually think of conservation of resources in connection with forest, water powers, etc., yet there is a more modest way in which the principle can be applied by the individual in his everyday work. Many a housewife in doing her sweeping and some other forms of work expends much more energy than is really necessary, while in hoeing many a man uses more force than he needs to do the work in hand, and especially is this true if his hoe is dull. Where one is at a job but a few minutes the question of an expenditure of extra force is not so vital, but where his labor extends over hours the matter becomes one of real importance.

An interesting fact has been noted by many an orchardist the past few months, and that is the purple color which was early taken on by so many varieties of apples which are a pure green or yellow at harvest. The writer has noted the same tendency on his own ranch in the case of the Newtown Pippin, Yellow Transparent and White Winter Pearmain. The coloring referred to seems to have been caused by cool nights, followed by warm days, and those who have made a careful study of the coloring referred to assert that the purple color not only enables the small apples to withstand more degrees of cold than fruit not colored, but that it more readily absorbs the heat of the sun, resulting in better growth and larger size.

The introduction of some of the European pheasants into certain sections of this country adjacent to agricultural land does not seem to be proving an unmixed boon. We noted recently the case of an Indiana farmer who reported that the pheasants got so tame that they came into his feed yards and not only scrapped with but licked his roosters and turkey gobblers, the flock of pheasants eating the grain scattered for the tame fowls. In some sections of New York these birds have grown so numerous that they raid the truck gardens, digging up newly set cabbage plants, eat newly sprouted corn and peck holes in cucumbers and muskmelons. It is true the pheasants consume some weed seeds and a few potato bugs, but it seems to be the verdict of those who have seen most of the birds that they do more harm than good.

It is just as impossible to maintain soil fertility when one keeps removing it in raw crops and returning nothing in the way of fertilizers, as it is to keep a fellow's bank account if he keeps checking from it continually, and makes no deposits; and it is high time a squad of soil tillers awoke to the truth of this fact. The land that is continually cropped to corn, cotton, small grain, fruit or vegetables, and is not replenished with manures, artificial fertilizers or by the growing of legumes is doomed to ultimate exhaustion, and depletion to the point where the crop returns will not pay the taxes. There are thousands of farms which are headed straight in this direction located in states whose virgin soil was the richest and most prodigal the sun ever shone upon, and they will arrive at the condition referred to unless the owners repent of their evil ways and adopt more enlightened and rational agricultural methods. New York already has her "abandoned farms," but it won't be many years, if present methods are continued, until Ohio, Indiana and Illinois will have theirs too.

The eastern or midstate farmer may have what he considers tire troubles, but these are mere trifles as compared with what the Pacific coast ranchman has on his hands what with the extraordinary rainfall of winter and the period of practical drought during the summer months.

The term "dairying" is not properly applied to the keeping of cows which fail to or just barely pay their year's board bill with the proceeds realized from the sale of their milk and cream. In a very true sense they should be viewed as manure manufactories, and the keeping of them the "fertilizer" business.

With graham flour in the average market costing only about five-sevenths of that asked for patent white flours, it is not only preferable from the standpoint of economy, but because it possesses a larger per cent of protein, phosphorous and other mineral elements, necessary in building bone and muscle and nerve.

Several of the ailments to which young calves and pigs are subject might be lessened measurably if the pails and troughs from which they drink were given an occasional scrubbing out and scalding with hot water. All the ailments referred to are of bacterial origin, and the treatment referred to would tend to hold these pests in check.

Ropy milk, more often noticed in winter than summer, is the result of dust or filth which gets into the milk after it is drawn from the cow. It has been shown that the trouble can be entirely overcome by cleaning the cows thoroughly before each milking and by removing any dusty litter beneath the cows, by straining the milk through clean cloths into clean cans and cooling at once. In short, to prevent ropy milk clean and sanitary stable conditions are necessary.

An orchardist who recently reported his experience in a horticultural paper has had very satisfactory results with hens as insect destroyers in his orchard. At the time when the curculio was busiest he made a practice of scattering small grain in litter under his plum and apple trees, and while the hens were busy scratching he would jar the trees so as to cause the insects to fall to the grounds where the hens would get them. He reports his fruit almost entirely free from curculio damage as a result of following this simple plan.

The following simple recipe for the preserving of corn and string beans has been given before in these notes, but since corn and beans are on tap again this season as usual it is worth repeating: Boil corn on ear for about fifteen minutes until milk is set, cut and scrape from cob and mix thoroughly with salt at the rate of four parts corn to one of salt. Put in clean scalded stone jar and cover with cloth and plate as in case of salted cucumbers. The same recipe works with string beans, which should be cooked until tender and mixed with salt as above. One lady reader who tried this recipe for corn last season lost her supply because she put the salt and corn in layers instead of mixing before packing down.

Egg statistics for the year 1909 show that the farm value of the egg production of the country was $300,000,000, while their value measured in prices paid by the consumer was $540,000,000. This shows that the cost of transportation, storage and selling was $240,000,000, or 80 per cent of the total amount received by the original egg producers. The American poultrymen might well follow the plan of the Danish farmers, who have formed associations for the transportation, storage and handling of their eggs, so that they are put on the English markets in the freshest possible condition and at a figure which enables them to meet all competition, yet gives to the Danish poultryman a very satisfactory profit.

With prices for fruit land in many sections of the west reaching a level which makes the purchase of it well nigh impossible for the person of limited means the writer believes that there are districts in Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Missouri, Arkansas, Virginia and other states which might well be investigated by those desirous of going into the orchard business. It is true that in some of the states mentioned only small fruits and hardy varieties of fall apples, like the Wealthy, could be grown, but the growing of these fruits and marketing them in attractive fashion could be made very profitable. In several of the states mentioned stump lands can be bought at from $20 to $50 per acre which are composed of fat soils, rich in humus and ideally suited to fruit growing. If clearing the land of stumps is undertaken in a businesslike and effective manner the cost of clearing per acre need not be excessive. Another point in favor of growing fruit in a number of the sections referred to is the fact that markets are near at hand, which prevents transportation companies from absorbing so large a portion of the gross returns in the shape of freight and express charges. Inquiries addressed to the horticultural departments of the agricultural colleges in the several states mentioned would elicit desired information as to the probable price of land in given localities, its suitability for fruit growing and the kinds of fruits that would do well on different soils.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
PROCLAMATION.

CONTINUE TRIUMPHAL TOUR

Swedish-American Singers Enthusiastically Received Everywhere—German Emperor Very Popular With the Natives Along the Coast of Norway—Copenhagen the Scene of Great Activity in Aviation.

SWEDEN.

The Swedish-American singers have been giving concerts in Gefle, Falun and Kristienhann since last we reported on their tour through Sweden. At these places they were enthusiastically received and at each place great preparations had been made for their entertainment. Their tour through Norrland has been a success from start to finish. About this time, however, the tour is completed and the singers will soon be on their way back to America. Gustaf Holmquist, who accompanies the chorus as its chief soloist, will remain for some time in Stockholm, where he will study under one of the many vocal teachers in the capital. Later on he will go to Berlin and then to Paris. He will remain in Europe about two years or more before returning to his home in Chicago. Stockholm papers have been profuse in their praise of Mr. Holmquist's singing, stating that he possesses a remarkable voice and one that can be developed to wonderful limits. It was not so many years ago that Mr. Holmquist was a poor laboring man in Minneapolis, where for a long time he drove an express wagon for his living. One day he discovered that he had a voice and, going to one of the local Minneapolis teachers, he began to take lessons in voice culture. He received a choir position and later we find him in Chicago and of late years he has been in constant demand as an oratorio soloist. Mr. Holmquist spent his boyhood days in Minnesota.

August Strindberg's merciless attack on Dr. Sven Hedin, claiming that the eminent scientist, traveler and explorer is a second "Dr. Cook," is the sensation of the hour in Stockholm. Very few people take Strindberg's part and many are clamoring for punishment for Strindberg. Hedin has been regarded as one of the greatest men in Sweden and has been honored by every geographical society in the civilized world for his discoveries of new mountain ranges and lakes in the heart of Asia. His latest book, which deals with his travels and discoveries in the unknown continent, have been translated into five languages and Strindberg's attack comes like a bombshell from a clear sky.

During the past three years three women have served on the Stockholm police force and their work has been uniformly excellent. The chief of police is so well satisfied with their work that he will now urge the building of a woman's police station and that women only be left in charge of the station. The three women police of the city have proven themselves equal to the occasion every time and whenever there has been trouble they have been on the job and done their full duty. They are fearless and conscientious in the discharge of their duties and the chances are that in the near future there will be several more women added to the Stockholm police force.

The king, queen, crown prince and crown princess attended the dedication of the Stregnas cathedral, which has just undergone a thorough renovation. It was really a dedication of the restoration work, for the Stregnas cathedral is as old as the hills and one of the most imposing church structures in Sweden.

P. P. Waldenstrom, the eminent religious leader and lecturer, who has been touring in the United States the past few weeks, giving lectures and preaching in the Swedish-American Covenant churches, is seriously ill in Rockford, Ill., and has been compelled to cancel all his speaking engagements.

A Gustavus Adolphus museum may be erected on Erfeld am Rein in the near future. The preparatory plans have been perfected and the erection of a suitable building will soon take place. It is believed that thousands of crowns can be raised in Sweden by means of popular subscription for this museum.

Ten million crowns worth of chocolates, popularly known as "namnam" in Sweden, were sold last year in this country. The candy industry is progressing at a remarkable rate and candies are now in great demand in every city in Sweden.

"The Gothenburg system" of dealing in liquors in Stockholm is proving to be a great success and large profits are made under the system. People in general seem to be well satisfied with the system.

NORWAY.

The German emperor, as was stated in last week's issue, is at present on his annual summer cruise along the coast of Norway. He usually spends a month, going as far as the Arctic circle, and visits some of the great fjords, such as Hardanger and Sognefjord. He has made many personal acquaintances among the natives and never fails to see them again every year. In Bergen several years ago he took a lonely walk outside the city on a hot, sultry day and, getting thirsty, he entered a modest little house, where lived an old umbrella maker and his daughter. He asked for a glass of water and was served with the ordinary Norwegian hospitality, the people not recognizing him as anything but a German tourist. They could both talk a little German and the emperor entered into a prolonged conversation with them, during the course of which the good umbrella maker brought out a bottle of old Rhine wine and invited the kaiser to drink. He finally left them without disclosing his identity and it was not until the next year that they discovered who their guest had been, for he did not fail to turn up again and visit his old friends. Since then he never comes to Bergen without spending an hour or two in friendly conversation with his friends, the umbrella maker and his daughter.

There is a movement on foot to organize a so called Countrymen's party in the storthing. The conservative agricultural members of the storthing took up the question at a recent meeting and determined to ask the liberal minded Venstre party to aid them, which it is expected it will do. An interesting session is promised in the storthing when it reconvenes.

There was a mass meeting of women in Stavanger the other day at which the question of women's suffrage was taken up, causing an animated discussion. A number of women took the position that no woman should be allowed to vote until she had become proficient in the art of cooking and the care of children and the household.

The great international regatta at Kiel brought a fine victory for old Norway and naturally the Norwegians are very proud of their showing. The first and second prizes were carried off by Nagda VIII., owned by Alfred Larsen of Christiania, and the Brand V., constructed and built last year by Johan Anker of Christiania.

The Northern Employment association held its third annual meeting in Christiania July 5. There were about 100 delegates in attendance, of whom sixteen were from Sweden, three from Finland, nine from Denmark and the remainder from Norway.

A dignified oak, more than 1,000 years old, stands on the shore close to a little bay near Borro, in Jarlsberg. The height of this oak is only seventeen meters, but at the base it is more than twelve meters in diameter.

By a majority of seventeen votes the storthing has decided that clergymen hereafter are exempt from military duty. The clergymen appreciate this accommodation on the part of the storthing in their behalf.

From Christiania comes the report that the government's cash on hand at present amounts to 26,000,000 crowns. Last year's surplus amounted to over 5,000,000 crowns.

Lieutenant William M. Cowin, the American military attache at Stockholm, visited the field maneuvers of the Second brigade in Hakadalen last month.

DENMARK.

Copenhagen has suddenly become the scene of great activity in aviation. Not less than five machines are in daily use and a large place has—as was previously reported in these columns—been fenced in for practice and starting of the aeroplanes. The great object is to fly across the water from Copenhagen to Malmo, Sweden, a distance somewhat shorter than the English channel. Alfred Nervoe was the first man in the three Scandinavian kingdoms to really accomplish aerial flight and night after night he has tried to fly across, but up to the present time he has always been compelled to return to Denmark without reaching the Swedish coast. Meanwhile competitors have grown up around him and it is by no means certain that he will carry off the honor of crossing Oresund ahead of the others. Meanwhile the Copenhagen public has been wrought up to the highest pitch of excitement and every evening—state the dispatches—thousands of people wend their way out to Amager, the place where the flying practices are undertaken.

The question of national defense continues to interest the public in Denmark. One party wishes to put Copenhagen into a strong military position, with fortresses defending it on the sea and land sides, thus being able to keep up the neutrality of the country in case of war between the powers. The other side desires to level all defenses and save expenses. In other words, this party wants to do away with all defenses, garrisons and everything else, as they believe that defenses would prove unavailable at all events. Still others are in favor of a middle course.

I. C. Christensen, who has just been tried by "rigsret," the highest tribunal in the country, for supposed criminal knowledge of the Alberti scandals, but was found not guilty, is the man who will undoubtedly lay the plans and mark out the course of the government during the next few months, although he himself has no place in the cabinet.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

A general review of the forest fire situation in Western Montana shows that 1,500 men are employed in fighting flames scattered over nine forests. It is also estimated, according to figures received by Assistant District Forester Silcox, that 71,550 acres have been burned. This estimate, however, does not include the damage done to the Couer d'Alene forest, where fires have been exceptionally destructive. The total acreage will probably be 80,000 acres.

A westbound passenger train on the Spokane, Portland and Seattle railroad crashed into three handcars loaded with Hungarian workmen on a bridge near Vancouver, Wash. Five of the Hungarians were killed, falling to the ground 200 feet below the bridge. A number of others were injured.

The revenue cutter Perry, one of the smallest but the oldest of the fleet of that service, ran ashore on July 26 at Tonki point, on the east side of St. Paul island, one of the Pribiloff group in the Bering sea, and is a total loss. The crew escaped.

So serious has the forest fire situation in Northwestern and Western Montana become that Governor Norris has telegraphed the presidents of the three transcontinental railroads beseeching their co-operation in fighting the flames.

Seven lives were lost in a fire which destroyed a three-story lodging house in the foreign section of Jamaica, L. I. The blaze started in a hallway, the only exit, and spread so rapidly that few of the inmates had an opportunity to escape.

Two lives were lost when the barge Grace Whitney was run down by the steamer Ogdensburg near Bar Point light in Lake Erie. The barge sank almost instantly.

Forest McDougal, aged five, was instantly killed and Nora Boomhower, aged eight, probably was fatally hurt by a live wire at Waterloo, Ia.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Progressives were in complete control of the Iowa Republican state convention. The platform reaffirms loyalty to the Republican national platform of 1908; favors creation of nonpartisan tariff commission; endorses efforts of President Taft to fulfill the party pledges; endorses work of Senators Cummins and Dolliver on the tariff, railroad and savings bank bills; commends action of house of representatives in revising its rules; congratulates the country upon the success obtained in the regulation of common carriers.

Progressives won almost a complete victory at the Kansas primaries. Six out of eight progressive congressmen have been nominated in spite of everything the congressional organization in Washington and the regulars in Kansas could do to save their men. Their majorities run from 1,000 to 3,500. Governor Stubbs, progressive, defeated his stalwart opponent by 20,000 majority.

Regular Republican leaders, it is alleged, have decided to support Democratic candidates in a majority of those congressional districts in which progressives receive the party nominations in primaries or in conventions.

Missouri's ten Democratic congressmen and at least five of six Republican members of the lower house were nominated for re-election at the primary election.

THE COST OF GOVERNMENT

Tax Commission Collecting Data From Every Part of State.

Work has been started under direction of the state tax commission to obtain a complete analysis of the cost of government in Minnesota. Blanks are being sent out to more than a thousand county, city and village officers calling for detailed information. Under the law the tax commission has the right to demand replies. The results will appear in the next biennial report of the commission. If the work be reasonably successful Minnesota will be the first state to accomplish it. The work is in charge of Professor R. H. Hess of the department of economics and political science of the state university, as statistician. He will direct the compilation and analysis of the information as it comes in.

TAFT ACCEPTS INVITATION

Will Attend Conservation Congress at St. Paul.

President Taft has accepted St. Paul's invitation to address the second National Conservation congress on the opening day, Sept. 5.

The president's address will be the principal feature of the opening day of the congress, following close on the heels of the addresses of welcome from Governor Eberhart, Mayor Keller, President Baker and other officials of the congress and of the conservation association. The remainder of the day, which has been given the name of "President's and Governors' day," will be given over to the chief executives of the states for free and open discussion of the phases of conservation which are nearest their hearts.

PAST RECORD VERY GOOD

So President Taft Commutes Sentence of Captain Hand.

President Taft has commuted the sentence of a courtmartial that Captain Daniel W. Hand, formerly of St. Paul, be dismissed from the army without honor for drunkenness, violating a pledge of temperance and absence without leave.

Because of his previous excellent record and gallant conduct with the Fifteenth Minnesota volunteers in the war with Spain the president commuted the sentence to reduce Captain Hand to the bottom of the list of field artillery captains, where his name must remain five years, and he be confined for one year to the limits of the military reservation where his battery may serve.

LABORER KILLED IN DISPUTE

Wife of Murdered Man Probably Fatally Stabbed.

Duro Karakas, an employe of the Minnesota Steel company at New Duluth, was murdered and his wife badly cut. Pavo Todorovic, a boarder at the home of the murdered man, is sought by the police.

There were no witnesses to the affair except the injured woman and accurate details are hard to get. It is said that the trouble started over a religious argument, ending in a fight between the two men, and after Karakas had been stabbed to death his wife rushed outside the house, where the trouble was in progress, and Todorovic turned on the woman and stabbed her seriously. She is expected to recover.

Minneapolis Man Drowned.

With his wife watching his struggle for life Charles Crosby, head bookkeeper of the Minneapolis General Electric company, was drowned in Lake Langdon, at Mound, this state. Mr. Crosby, who was said to be an expert swimmer, rowed about 250 feet from shore to reach deep water and then jumped overboard for a swim. His boat drifted away from him while he was in the water and on attempting to swim to it he suddenly went down. It is thought he was seized with cramps.

Jump From Stack Is Fatal.

Jumping from the top of a stack of grain in the harvest field on his farm near Viola, R. C. Davidson met a horrible death when the handle of a pitchfork penetrated his abdomen. His son removed the fork handle and carried his father into the home. A physician was called and the patient was removed without delay to the hospital. He died there several hours later in awful agony.

Drowned in Rainy River.

Matt Nesji of Bemidji was drowned in the Rainy river near Baudette. Nesji and his two comrades were in a launch and had a rowboat tied behind, with provisions. Nesji went to investigate if any water was entering the rowboat, and his companions did not miss him until he called for help. As it was dark he could not be located, and the body has not been found.

Three Children Drowned.

A son and daughter of Peter Anderson, residing near Windom, were drowned in Cottonwood lake. The girl was thirteen and the boy nine years of age. They had been out in a boat and in some way the boat capsized. The fifteen-year-old son of A. J. Martin was drowned in Bingham lake while fishing.

St. Paul Has 214,744 People.

St. Paul has a population of 214,744, according to the thirteenth census figures just made public by Census Director Durand at Washington. These figures show a gain in St. Paul's population since 1900, when the last federal census was taken, of 51,679.

ATTORNEY MUST GO TO JAIL

Supreme Court Upholds Lower Tribunal in Case Against Ernest S. Cary of Minneapolis.

Ernest S. Cary, Minneapolis attorney, must serve thirty days in jail and has been disbarred from practice in the courts of Minnesota for a period of two years. This is the decision of the state supreme court.

There were four charges against Cary in addition to a contempt of court charge, which was appealed to the supreme court from Minneapolis. The charges on which Cary was disbarred were: Misappropriation of money belonging to a client; receipt of money for services not rendered; deception in a real estate mortgage deal; unprofessional, disrespectful and contemptuous conduct toward a trial judge.

Cary has been prominent in the Hennepin county courts for several years, being counsel in several famous criminal cases, the last of a particularly sensational nature being his defense of Belle Brennan, the Minneapolis woman convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment on the charge of having murdered three of her stepchildren.

On being notified of the court's decision Mr. Cary declared that he would immediately start serving his thirty-day sentence. After he had made this statement Mr. Cary filed as a candidate for the district bench of Hennepin county. He declared he would begin his campaign as soon as he had finished his workhouse sentence.

NAMES "SEED CORN WEEK"

Governor Believes More of That Grain Should Be Produced.

Believing Minnesota ought to take higher rank as a corn state, and that proper selection of seed would bring such returns as would lead to greater corn acreage, Governor Eberhart has issued a proclamation setting apart the week of Sept. 12 as "seed corn week" The document sets forth reasons given by the experts at the state experiment station for planting more and better corn and the special purpose is to have seed corn properly selected by going through the field before the corn is gathered. The proclamation says, in part:

"Heartily agreeing with the experiment farm experts in the estimate of the importance of seed corn, I hereby appoint the week of Sept. 12 to 17, inclusive, as seed corn week, and would join in urging that every farmer in Minnesota shall, on some day of that week, make it his special duty to go through his cornfield and select for seed the best ears from the sturdiest stalks, carefully storing them according to the suggestions made in Extension Bulletin No. 9, which may be had by writing to Extension division, University Farm, St. Paul."

JOHN LIND MAY ACCEPT

Son Says Father Has Not Declined Nomination.

That John Lind may accept the Democratic nomination as governor is indicated in two letters received in St. Paul from Mr. Lind's son, Norman Lind, of Everett, Wash.

Frank A. Day, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, received one of these letters.

In this the interview purporting to be from John Lind and saying he would not serve as governor if elected is branded as false.

According to Norman Lind, John Lind gave out no interview after the nomination was made.

All the messages received at Everett and Seattle following the action of the state convention were kept sealed and handed to Mr. Lind as he was leaving for Alaska.

John Lind's statement of acceptance, or at least for permission to use his name, is expected as soon as he returns from the North.

PUSH DULUTH STEEL PLANT

In Less Than a Year Production Is Expected to Begin.

Within three weeks steel will reach the site of the new steel plant of the United States Steel corporation on the St. Louis river at New Duluth and with the steel will come the men who are to make the whirlwind start on the construction of what eventually will be one of the greatest plants of the kind in the country.

Duluthians are beginning to awaken to the fact that the steel plant not only is begun, but also that the most difficult and tedious part of the work is nearing completion. All the work that has been done up to the present time has been essentially of a preparatory nature. When the steel comes a new phase of construction will have been reached and the progress made after that time will be rapid. In less than a year the Minnesota Steel company should be making steel at New Duluth.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The Minnesota Bankers' association will go before the next legislature and ask the appointment of a paid state commission to investigate educational conditions in Minnesota. The authoritative statement that this will be done foreshadows a session in which the question of education and a discussion of the disposition of the $14,000,000 so expended annually in Minnesota will be a feature.

Charles Price, known as "Sinbad the Sailor," has been granted a parole by the state board of control. Price, who has long been a trusty at the Stillwater prison, was recently granted a commutation of sentence by the pardon board, cutting his term to seven years. Since entering the prison Price has become famous as a horticulturist.

Practically the entire output of binder twine at the state prison for this season has been shipped to farmers of the state. That being made now, with all the spindles at the old and new prison going at full capacity, is being used to fill remaining orders. The sales for the season will run considerably more than $1,000,000.

The lack of rain, while aiding in some of the ditch work where walking dredges and dump scrapers are being used, has stopped work by two of the floating dredges in Roseau county and nothing more will be done by them this year unless a heavy continued rain falls within the next week or two.

The intense drouth of July resulted in the greatest pumping record the Minneapolis city water department ever made and the daily average was the highest ever recorded. The total amount pumped in the month was 968,389,890 gallons, making a daily average of 31,200,000 gallons.

According to the report of the St. Paul Union Stock Yards company for the month of July there were big increases in the receipts of all kinds of live stock at South St. Paul during that period, as compared with the same month in 1909.

Starting with a cash balance of $2,773,250.40 the state of Minnesota during the fiscal year just closed received from all sources $14,810,944.43 and paid out $13,322,963.17; leaving a cash balance on hand at the end of the year of $4,261,321.

Efforts will be made to take the judiciary of the state out of politics at the next meeting of the legislature. This course was decided upon at the meeting of the Minnesota State Bar association at St. Paul.

The biennial state convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will be held in Faribault Sept. 20, 21 and 22. The ladies' auxiliary will meet there at the same time. Over 400 delegates will be in attendance.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Maria Hoagland Wakefield is dead at Wayzata, Hennepin county. Mrs. Wakefield was born at Millsborough, N. J., and was married in Greensburg, O., in 1840 to Bradford Wakefield, who died in 1868. The family moved to Minnesota in 1856 and Mrs. Wakefield lived continuously on a farm in Orono township from 1857 until her death.

James M. Douglas is dead at Anoka at the age of eighty-two years. He was born in Quebec in 1828 and came to Minnesota in 1855. He was a member of Company F, Fourth Minnesota regiment, in the Civil war. Mr. Douglas had been mayor and councilman of Anoka and was an ardent prohibitionist.

Captain Eugene Childs, veteran of the Civil war and who as a boy flew the kite across the Niagara gorge which permitted engineers to stretch the cable for the suspension bridge from the United States to Canada, is dead at Minneapolis.

Mrs. Mary A. Haughey, ninety years old, a resident of Minnesota for nearly sixty years, is dead at Minneapolis. Mrs. Haughey was born in Ireland in 1820 and came to the United States in 1850.

Mrs. Mary McGuire, a territorial pioneer, is dead at St. Paul. She was seventy-two years of age and reached St. Paul with her husband in 1857.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Perry A. Long of Minneapolis, former alderman of the First ward and former member of the legislature, is dead as the result of injuries sustained by a fall in his home a week ago. His skull was fractured in the fall and it was impossible to save his life. He was forty-nine years of age and was born in Minneapolis.

J. F. Grant, aged forty, was almost instantly killed at the Chicago Great Western roundhouse at St. Paul. He was run down by an engine when visiting a friend at the roundhouse. Both his legs and his right arm were amputated.

The body of Charles Patsley, a transient, who said Pittsburg was his home, was found on the track at Clinton, terribly mangled. He had either laid down or had tried to catch the beams on a southbound train.

Telesford Dupont, fifteen years old, was almost instantly killed at Crookston by being thrown from his bicycle under a team of horses, one of which kicked him in the head, crushing his skull.

SWEDEN.

Carl Lonnerblad, who accompanies the Swedish-American Elite chorus to Sweden, writes most interestingly regarding their trip across the Atlantic in the Oscar II, and their reception in Malmo. The writer first speaks of the farewell reception tendered the chorus before leaving New York in "Little Hungary," where the chorus was entertained by the "Lyran" Singing society. During the trip across the singers encountered the finest kind of weather and there was very little sea sickness among the members of the chorus. The chorus gave two concerts on the way across, which were a success both financially and musically. They also sang at the Sunday services in the chapel of the Oscar II. After arriving in Christiania the chorus took the electric cars to the Holmenkollen hotel, situated high up in the hills back of the city, and from there enjoyed the magnificent panorama of the beautiful Christiania valley below. Director Ortengren secured a large dining hall and set the singers to practice for nearly two hours. Their voices blended nicely and they were thus given an opportunity to prepare for the concert in Malmo the following evening. In Malmo the singers received a most enthusiastic reception. The concert in the evening proved a grand success and every seat in the large hall was taken. The concert was given in the commodious St. Peter's church and because of this fact no applause was allowed. The "sexa" which followed in the King's park was something exceptional. The whole situation teemed with the spirit of good cheer and the "Skaningar" certainly have sustained their reputation as the most hospitable entertainers on earth. A telegram was sent to the king stating that the chorus would soon be in Stockholm and requesting his majesty that he would receive the chorus at the palace. His majesty immediately acknowledged the telegram and bid the singers welcome to visit the palace and to take all the time they desired to look it over. After leaving Malmo the chorus started for Lund, where they gave a concert to a large and enthusiastic audience in the great cathedral there. Great preparations have been made in Stockholm for the reception of the chorus and it looks as though the entire concert tour would be a triumphant march through the land of Jenny Lind and Christina Nilsson.

Still another Swedish singing attraction contemplates visiting the United States in the near future. The attraction consists of the "Trallande Polkar"—Axel Hultman, Olle Strandberg and Felix Korling. They will visit such cities in the United States where the Swedish element is in evidence, as New York, Chicago, Omaha, St. Paul and Minneapolis and may extend their tour to Seattle.

The series of international sailing matches for the one-tonner cup at Kiel have just been finished and resulted in the cup going to Sweden. The Swedish boat Agnes proved herself most superior in the light breezes, which mostly prevailed, and she won her three races after eight matches had been sailed. Next year the cup will be sailed for in Gothenburg, Sweden.

Twenty-three prominent German journalists recently visited Stockholm and were the guests of the Stockholm Press club. They were also received by King Gustaf and wherever they appeared in Sweden they were given an ovation. They were charmed with the hospitality of the Swedes and were profuse in their praise of their reception in Stockholm and other cities.

A recent dispatch from Stockholm states that the Swedish-American male chorus gave an open air concert in [illegible] a week ago last Monday, which was attended by at least 15,000 persons. The singers were presented to the king and queen and the leader, Professor Ortengren, and Victor Nilsson of Minneapolis were awarded the order of Vasa.

It has been definitely settled that the Olympian games will be held in Stockholm June 7 to 16, 1912. No stone will be left unturned to make this the greatest sporting event of the century. The great stadium is already under course of erection.

The Swedish painter, Erik Norselius, who is at present in Paris, has been appointed associe in La Societe Nationale des Beaux Arts (Champs de Mars Calongen).

NORWAY.

Consul E. H. Hobe of St. Paul, who sailed a few days ago for Norway, is mentioned as a probable successor to Ove Gude, the late Norwegian minister to the United States. It is known that scores of his friends in America and in Norway are urging his appointment to this post. The only objection to Mr. Hobe's appointment might possibly lie in the fact that he has been for the last twenty-five years a resident and a citizen of the United States. But his friends argue that he was educated in Norway and that his intimate relations with Norwegian emigration, which he has gained in his capacity as Norway's consul in St. Paul, will aid him greatly in securing the place. His friends in the United States argue that the appointment of Consul Hobe would be the best that can be made. He is familiar with American conditions and American politics and Norway would then have a minister at Washington who could look after their interests there in earnest and do it so much better than a man who is unfamiliar with American conditions and the conditions existing among Norwegian-Americans in this country.

The American minister to Norway, Herbert H. D. Peirce, had the misfortune to break his arm while out on an auto trip with some friends. He and his party, which included his wife and a Miss Perkins, were crossing the Dovre mountain. The machine skidded and went into a ditch, without upsetting, however, but the jar caused a violent shaking up of the passengers, resulting in the broken arm and some lesser injuries about the face and hands. The minister was taken to Lillehammaer, where the arm was set, and it is now reported that he is doing nicely. Crossing the Dovre mountain in an automobile is a rather daring undertaking.

The great sailing week at Kiel is from July 23 to 30. Eighty-two boats are entered, of which forty-eight are newly built. The American schooner Westward, built by Herreshoff and sailed by Charles Barr, will compete with the schooners Nordstern, Germania and Hamburg. The twelve-meter class consists of Magda VIII., Norway; Brand IV., Holland; Ivanhoe, Russia; Schwanhild, Austria; Scean III., Germany. This class is therefore international in the widest meaning of the word.

According to advices from Trondhjem the Merkaer Mining company has been forced to make an assignment. The company was organized in 1905 and at that time had a capital stock of 1,650,000 crowns. Most of the stock was held by Norwegian and German capitalists. In November of last year the company ceased all operations and laid off about 300 men. An attempt to reorganize the old company has failed.

DENMARK.

Denmark now has her flying hero in the person of Alfred Nervo, who two weeks ago made a flight over the city hall in Copenhagen to the great surprise and admiration of his fellow citizens. Since then he has been preparing to cross Oresund to Sweden, but this will also be tried by Baron Cedarstrom, the Swedish flyer, who is on his way home from Paris with a Bleriot aeroplane. Alfred Nervo has been denied the use of the race course outside of Copenhagen, the only suitable place for a good start and a good finish. A later dispatch from Copenhagen states that Baron Cederstrom's attempt to cross the sound from Copenhagen the other day proved a failure. The baron had a narrow escape from death.

The small boy may be able to muster a little more enthusiasm in the matter of waging war on the weeds in the garden patch if his daddy keeps a good edge on the old hoe.

Inherited vigor and hardiness as well as care determine both the longevity and usefulness of a horse. While the average horse is considered past its prime at twelve years old, one now and then runs across a team that are remarkably well preserved and doing their daily stint of work at twenty-five.

It is a mighty poor adaption of means to end to cut out with a hand hoe in hot weather weeds that can just as well be upturned with a single horse plow. It is quite likely that in the case of the small home garden there is a steady old horse on the place that needs just this stint of work to keep it in good rig.

We think there has been reference in this department in a previous season to the farm owner who made it a practice of paying his tenant a bonus for every acre of stubble which was plowed before Sept. 1. This was done to head off the work of myriads of weeds which usually get in their work of seed production between harvest and the first killing frost. We remember the farm in question, and the tilled fields were among the cleanest in the locality.

All kinds of vexation and a whole lot of reboiling of fruit in the canning season can be prevented if the housewife will see that she has a supply of new rubbers for her cans. After being used a couple of times rubbers become hard and inelastic and greatly increase the chance of leaking. The best rubbers cost about two-thirds of a cent apiece, while one can of fruit lost is worth from 20 to 25 cents, which makes the reason for the above precaution quite plain.

That lad was certainly an exception to the run of boys who cried because his father had considerately and properly made the necessary arrangements for him to go to the circus, preferring rather to stay home and plow corn so that he could be with the horses, which he had lately learned to drive, an accomplishment in which he took a deal of pride. If we remember correctly said boy was not compelled to put in a dull day at the circus. It may be interesting to note that this lad, now grown, is making a nice success of his farming operations.

The bee moth is a pest that is likely to lay its eggs in comb honey that is stored and not properly protected, and also does so in hives in which the swarm has made headquarters for too long a time. The super of a hive into which we looked the other evening was literally alive with lusty larvae and the newly hatched moths. When this state of affairs exists the swarm is usually done for, and the moths and larvae should be given a sulphur smudge or a dose of carbon bisulphide by placing a few drops of the chemical on a piece of cotton and inserting it into the entrance to the hive.

With the north pole tagged by Peary and the battle against the air seemingly won, as shown in the remarkable performances of aviators in America and Europe during the past few weeks, there would appear to be little else to achieve along the line of accomplishing the seemingly impossible and wonderful. Yet a large place in public esteem waits for the man who may be able to catch and conserve the sweltering heat of summer for use during the winter season, as we already do winter's cold when we store cakes of ice. Experiments have been conducted along this line, but so far they have been without result.

With meat products at a high notch as a result of a scarcity of food animals and with an ever increasing output of coal tending to still further inflate prices, the time would seem to be appropriate for a whole lot of fellows to diversify their agricultural operations by making a start with a flock of sheep. With intelligent care they are easy to raise, while a major part of their keep is furnished by the weeds—the bane and waste byproduct of most every farm. Besides very satisfactory prices which one may expect for mutton, the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, which shoved wool duties to a still higher level, will hardly be changed within a decade, hence good prices may be counted on for the fleece of the flock. To a man up a tree the sheep business looks mighty good for several years to come.

Local Traveling Men Take the Crookston Bunch Into Camp Saturday.

The Umpire the Only Player That Did Good Work for Crookston and He Couldn't Win

Ten (nine players and one umpire) boneheaded, would be base ball playing traveling men of Crookston came to

The Umpire

Thief River Falls last Saturday and were unmercifully defeated by nine gentlemanly knights of the grip who make this city their home. The score was 12 to 15, but it should have been 1 to 15. Just in order to give Roberts, the big, fat first base for Crookston a little exercise, the home boys allowed him to run around the bases, but the other eleven scores were all passed over the home plate by the umpire.

the bat for Thief River Falls and not a ball got by him. Bino—some starboard heaver—was in the box, and he made the Crookston bunch lay down their war clubs whenever he wanted to. He could have played a no-hit game if he had wanted to, but the umpire would not let him.

"Shrimp" Thornton was behind the bat for Crookston, and when we can't say anything good about "Shrimp" we keep still, but we do want to compliment the backstop for its good work. "Corsets" Frozina started in to pitch for Crookston but along somewhere in the middle of the game he got so weak that the balls did not reach home plate and "Prunes" Wilde was put into service.

"Shrimp" Thornton Before the Game.

He couldn't do any better and so the down river boys lost hope and the umpire continued to play harder—but he couldn't do enough.

It would take too much space to tell of all the good plays the Thief River Falls boys made and how polite they were to the visitors and even to the umpire. Ed Ashley never let anything get by third base when he was looking and Andy Anderson was on first all of the time. Joe Feeley ran a hundred and fifty yards and caught a fly and Ole Nesseth backed up twenty feet and—nearly caught one. Ben Durant played a fine game when he was looking at the young ladies in the grand stand and George Wernham covered himself with glory and knocked out a three base foul. Carl Korstad won the applause of the ladies for several good plays and Nicolai and Shepard were strong at the bat.

Taking it all and all, Thief River Falls has the best ball playing traveling men in the state and if it were not for the fact that they are such successful traveling men, they would undoubtedly be playing with the big league teams.

Why Binders Cost So Much

R. M. Dolve of the engineering department of the North Dakota agricultural college gives one of the reasons for the high prices of harvesting machinery. He says:

"The cost of manufacturing harvesting machines has been reduced to a minimum so that if their cost, which is often complained of by the farmer, is to be materially reduced, some other means than that of lowering the cost of production has to be resorted to. It is conservatively estimated that it costs more to sell a binder and to collect the money than it costs to manufacture it. The farmer is to a large extent responsible for this state of affairs, for by his attitude he forces the companies who wish to do business with him to maintain an extensive and complicated sales and collecting department when he might as well deal with the company more directly. The companies are also forced to maintain a large force of experts to not only set up new machines but to repair old ones. During the months of harvest these men may be found in every town and village where an agency is maintained. Each expert costs the company employing them on an average of six dollars a day and it often costs the company several dollars to have these men drive out only to replace a worn out knotter pinion or tighten a few loose bolts. The companies pay for the services of these men but it is ultimately collected from the farmer by being added to the price of his machinery. Binders are now so simple and effective that there is little excuse for calling on experts and the farmer who habitually does so, reflects on his own intelligence. Under the present system the farmer who repairs his own machines is justly entitled to a rebate and if all farmers, by studying the mechanism of their binders, would become their own binder experts, a substantial reduction in the present price of harvesting machinery could be justly expected.

What One Inch of Rain Means

A western professor has figured out that an inch of rain means 860 barrels of water to an acre of land, 550,400 barrels to a section, and 19,814,000 barrels of water to a township. When one realizes that we have had a shortage of about 7 inches of rain thus far in 1910 at this point and applies the above figures, he finds that each acre is short of moisture to the extent of 6,020 barrels, each section has had 3,852,800 barrels of water less than the average for thirty years; each township is 138,698,000 barrels short, while the shortage of precipitation since January 1 for the county amounts to 4,160,094,000 barrels. Is it any wonder that the crops have been affected, that weeds are drying up and the river is lower than it has ever been before in July?—Moorhead News.

Chickens Ripe Sept. 7th.

The open season for prairie chickens in Minnesota begins Sept. 7, and closes Nov. 7. This is as the game law provides, and people who contend that the season begins Sept. 1 are mistaken.

More Bushels From Less Ground.

The possibility of producing more bushels of grain from a given area, and thereby reducing the cost of production per bushel, is shown by President Waters, of the Kansas Agricultural School, when he says that, where Kansas "college-bred" wheat has been used for seed, the acreage yield has been increased five bushels per acre in that state. Similiarly gratifying results have been obtained in Minnesota from wheat bred at the Experiment Station and the seed distributed to farmers throughout the state. "Minnesota No. 169" has increased the yield over the parent variety, as shown by an eight-year test at the station, 4.2 bushels per acre; while the increase per acre, compared with the common wheat raised over the state, is 3.3 bushels in an average of trials by eight-nine farmers. With better cultivation, better seed selection, better fertilization, and a rational rotation of crops, every farmer in the state may increase his output, and correspondingly reduce the cost of production. The state has thoroughly demonstrated this possibility and an intelligent following of the methods employed at University Farm will enable farmers to show equally pleasing results.

Seed Corn Week.

The Extension Division at University Farm, St. Paul, in discussing the seed corn question in connection with Seed Corn Week, commencing Sept 12th, says that twenty ordinary ears of corn will supply seed enough for an acre, and that it will require but a few hours during Seed Corn Week to intelligently select enough seed for a large crop. With some system by which the ears may be kept separate, to admit of the circulation of air around each, like placing them on racks or in wire baskets, seed ears may be picked before thorough maturity. This is a very good plan to pursue as a protection against injury to the germ through possible freezing likely to follow if the selection of seed is left to a late date in the fall. Perfect ventilation is as essential to plant life as it is to human or animal life.

Waited For World's End.

Corn continues to make the best headway of any of the crops. The story is current here that one farmer living on the flats west of the city felt that the world was coming to an end when the comet was approaching and that it was utterly useless to put in a crop this year. He accordingly did nothing during the spring, when everyone else was planting wheat, oats and barley. When the comet finally passed and he found that he was still on earth he decided to began living again, and as it was too late to plant small grain he planted his entire farm to corn. He now wishes that there were comets coming every year, as he has the best crop in the neighborhood—Fergus Falls Journal.

Killed a Big Bear.

A bear weighing over 400 pounds and one of the largest ever seen in this section, was killed last week by Peter Thune on his farm in the town of Smiley. It is thought that the animal had been driven into this section by the forest fires northeast of here, and he was very poor. Had he been fat he would have weighed about 600 pounds. He measured eight feet in length and was almost as large as a bull. When Mr. Thune shot him the first bullet did not kill him and he showed considerable fight.

Conditions are Bad.

A. C. Baker, of Decorah, Iowa, who has business interests here, spent last Thursday in the city. He had just returned from a trip to the Pacific coast and came back through Canada. He reports that the crops throughout the entire Canadian northwest with the exception of a few favored spots, are a total failure, and that the settlers throughout Alberta have applied to the government for aid which will without doubt be granted. There is no hay for the stock and people who have money are getting out of the country.

WON FAMOUS ALASKA CASE

Red Lake County Relatives Win Case Involving Ownership of Alaska Property

A Case With Many Interesting Features of Interest to Residents Here

Attorney Charles Loring of Crookston, has just received notification of a very important decision in a case involving rich mining property in Alaska, where he made a trip a year ago, and later argued the case before the Washington supreme court at Olympia.

Upholding the legality of issuing guardianship of a nonresident incompetent person to a person also a nonresident, the supreme court of Washington has affirmed the superior court of King county in the matter of the guardianship of Nels Oscar Sall, an Alaskian miner, who went insane and finally disappeared from view over a year and a half ago, leaving mining claims in Alaska worth several thousand dollars, which were under bond, and to protect which his brother, Charles G. Sall, of Garness, Red Lake county, east of Plummer, Minn., secured guardianship papers.

Nels Oscar Sall's story is a remarkable one. He had been a prospector in Alaska for several years, when he discovered valuable claims in the Copper River country. These he bonded to James J. Godfrey. A deed to the property was put in escrow at the Puget Sound National Bank.

In April, 1908, while making his way down the Chitna with a horse and sledge Sall broke through the ice and he was carried down the icy current under the ice for seventy feet. His companions succeeded in rescuing him but the man was so badly chilled that the exposure affected his mind. He was taken to Valdez and put in a hospital, and a few weeks later escaped and disappeared. Through the efforts of Senator Knute Nelson, of Minnesota, who became interested in his case, the United States marshal's office finally located the man working in a construction camp at Cordova, Alaska. He had apparently forgotten his identity and was working under an assumed name. With his failing mental powers he had developed almost superhuman strength.

Thereafter he was induced to go to Seattle, where he remained until November, 1908, when he disappeared from the Hotel Diller, and has never been found.

The application for guardianship by his brother was resisted by James J. Godfrey, to whom the claims were bonded.

On the question of issuing guardianship papers to a nonresident for a nonresident incompetent, the court divided. Judge Chadwick wrote the opinion, and Justices Gose and Morris concurred. Fullerton concurred in the result, but not in all the conclusions, while Justice Rudkin dissented, holding that under the conditions outlined the presumption of death was stronger than the presumption of incompetency and that therefore the guardianship proceedings offered no prosecution to a third party dealing with the guardian.

Out on the New Line.

C. C. Jackson accompanied Supt. Michaels on a trip over the new Duluth line of the Soo last week. They went thirty-three miles east of Plummer and Mr. Jackson says that they passed through a fine farming country and that the crops were looking fine. He believes that Clearbrook will make the best town on the line between here and Bemidji.

Killed Four Bears.

Nels Larson, who resides in the town of Grand Plain, Marshall county, killed a large she bear and three cubs one day last week. He found the bears out in the pasture and drove them to his home with a pitchfork where a rifle was brought into use and the animals all killed.

Steel Gang Leaves Plummer.

Plummer, Minn., Aug. 16.—The Soo steel gang that has been at work laying steel east of here during the past six weeks have completed all their work as far as the grading has been done. The steel is now laid out from this place a distance of thirty miles, but as the graders still have considerable work to do on this end, the laying of steel will have to be suspended.

The crew went from here to Ladysmith Wis., where they will be kept busy the balance of the season.

The laying of steel on the Plummer Moose Lake line will be completed from the other end and as there is less than fifty miles left to lay, the work can easily be completed this fall. If the grading had been completed as per contract the laying of steel would have been completed by Sept 15, at the latest.

To Vote Bonds Monday.

A special election will be held next Tuesday to vote upon the proposition of issuing bonds to the amount of $25,000 to pay for completing the auditorium. At an election held a few months ago these bonds were voted by a large majority, but owing to the fact that they were issued for a period of twenty-five years, the bond companies refused to purchase them, as it is not legal to vote bonds for a longer term than twenty years. That is the reason the special election has to be held. At the time the bonds were voted the first time, the matter was quite thoroughly discussed and it is not at all likely that there will be any change in sentiment.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson, accompanied by his secretary Martin Widsten, arrived in the city Tuesday evening and left yesterday morning for points in Eastern Marshall county. COUNTY DIVISION TALK.

The county records disclose the fact that on July 1, 1910, among some $17,192 40 of outstanding county warrants which were unpaid, that there was one of $1000. Whether this is the $1000 warrant which the board of county commissioners appropriated to aid in the construction of the $16,000 steel bridge across the Red Lake river in the city of Thief River Falls some three years ago and then withdrew, because the city offended the men in hiding down the river, is not known.

Why it is not presented for payment is also not known. Where the taxes went which were collected to meet this warrant is not known. Who is benefiting by this system of appropriating funds and then withholding the amount from these to whom the aid is given is is not known.

Thief River Falls can get along without any assistance from the county of Red Lake, though it pays one-fifth of the total tax of the same county. It does not complain of the treatment which it has received from the county seat interests, for the farmers of the north half have suffered more than has Thief River. It does complain, however, of the system which has become a real part of the financial life of the county and which cannot be changed, whereby the county of Pennington is systematically drained of its taxes for the benefit of the south half. It welcomes the time when the bled farmers will have a chance to vote for a new deal and for a square deal, for Pennington county and the expenditure of taxes are raised.

A building tax of four mills on the dollar on all the taxable property of the county is levied this year to supply funds to erect the new court house at Red Lake Falls village. This will produce the sum of $14,978 for 1910. If the building costs $50,000 though the original price was set at $40,000 and was increased as soon as the men in hiding down river discovered that Pennington county was going to be a reality-a similiar tax for the next three years will pay the total tax or cost of the building. With an increasing amount of property it will be paid in less than three years.

Not another county in the state ever dared to finance such an expensive proposition in this manner. It is the most extravagant method ever conceived. Nearly all counties either establish a sinking fund or else issue bonds running over a long term of years. Marshall county secured her county buildings in the former manner and the settlers never felt the tax. In either case the tax rate would have to be very low. It is true that the commissioners of Red Lake county issued the building bonds for the amount of the new court house, but at the same time they levy a tax sufficient to pay for the expensive buildings in less than four years. Either the bond issue was not needed, or the heavy tax of four mills on the dollar was not needed.

At this rate the cost will be met in the four years and still the bonds will be unpaid and drawing heavy interest. The question naturally arises, who is benefiting by this method of finance? What bank or person or persons have the bonds or the rake-off on their sale? Why burden the farmers and other business interests with taxes covering a long term of years if the court house will be paid for in less than four years? Did this rake off build other houses besides the new court house?

How any man can consistently vote against the establishment of the county of Pennington who has been imposed upon in this manner is beyond comprehension. Every citizen in the north half is less than human if he can uphold this system of financial robbery as the proper thing in the conduct of county business.

Any citizen can learn exactly what he is contributing this year to the only building constructed in the village of Red Lake Falls in the last six years, the new court house. Just multiply the assessment of his property by four and the result is the tax in mills. This is his share of the money with which the expiring little town seeks to keep its head above water and maintain a decent front for a brief period longer.

If his assessment is $500, his tax is $2 this year; if the value of his property as assessed is $2000, his contribution to aid the citizens of Red Lake Falls in getting employment this summer is $8, and so on. This is in striking contrast to Thief River Falls, which offers the county of Pennington a county house absolutely free-a building which will answer for county purposes for the next ten years or more. This formal tender will be made within a reasonable time and will be without any strings or pull-backs attached to it. It will be a bona fide and absolute gift to the people of Pennington county. Thief River Falls is no more anxious to assume a heavy tax, or any other tax, than is the poorest settler in the county. Thief River stands for low taxes and official county government.

The farmers of Wyandotte town have been paying all manner of taxes for roads, bridges, poor, schools, state and county into the county treasury for years. And by the same token, have all the towns and villages in the county, but this particular town is taken as a sample of how a town without any "pull" can be bled and and how the farmers have no apparent method of protecting themselves.

So far as the county records show, this town has not received one cent of its road and bridge tax from Red Lake county in the last six years. During this same period the southern towns and a few of the towns in the north have received sums of money sufficient to care for their roads and bridges in excellent manner. Particularly have the southern towns and Red Lake Falls received large sums. They are not entitled to this money; they just grabbed the boodle, because they were "next" to the men who pull the strings in county matters.

The town of Wyandotte, as have all the towns of Pennington county has been bled to build bridges and roads in the south half. What pleasant feelings towards the lower end must well up in the breasts of the farmers of this section, when they realize that they have been systematically held up for the benefit of persons who smile at their helplessness. They and all other persons who have been robbed in the past will have an opportunity next November to right a series of wrongs which have no parallel in the history of counties in Minnesota. Not even the counties to the east of Red Lake, which have made names for themselves in history for maladministration and inefficiency and crookedness, quite equaled Red Lake in the fineness of the system whereby the taxpayers were taxed for special sections and interests and the perpetrators of the same covered up their tracks.

FAMOUS AS "FAITH" HEALER

Fredrik August Bolzius Dies in Sweden at the Age of Seventy-four Years—Steady Yearly Increase in Number of Tourists Visiting Norway—Danish Aviator Has Bad Fall While Attempting Long Flight.

SWEDEN.

Fredrik August Bolzius, the sensational evangelist and "healer," died at his native home in Grafva, Varmland, a short time ago, aged seventy-four years. Bolzius was a son of a wealthy farmer and it was first intended that he should follow in the footsteps of his father, but he preferred at first to become a peddler. He followed peddling for a few years and then he began to engage in "healing," in which he seemed to be wonderfully successful. His theory was to "heal through faith" and he actually succeeded in getting quite a following among a certain class of people. He expanded and went to Stockholm, where hundreds of people would flock to him, and he also succeeded in making a lot of money. He used hypnotic methods and so successfully did he manipulate his victims that they came to him by the hundreds. He became notoriously known all over Sweden and the newspapers devoted columns of matter to some of his "miracles" and "exploits" with human nature.

The lumber industry is the greatest in Sweden at present. It alone embraces 1,222 sawmills, in which 36,940 men are engaged, and last year lumber to the amount of 140,000,000 crowns was manufactured. Second in importance to the lumber industry comes the milling industry. Last year flour to the amount of 114,000,000 crowns was turned out from the various flour mills of the country. Third in order comes the iron and steel industry. The number of smelters are 640, employing 22,800 men, representing an output of 88,000,000 crowns. The purely mechanical factories in the country are 453 in number, representing an output of 6,000,000 crowns. The weaveries and spinneries manufacture 79,000,000 crowns' worth of goods each year, most of which is exported to foreign lands, principally to England and Germany and South America. The sugar refineries represent an output amounting to 79,000,000 crowns.

Three prominent Swedish ladies have recently received decorations from France. Mrs. Professor Ernst Beckman, who is a daughter of Mrs. Baker of Massachusetts, who wrote "Pictures of Swedish Life;" Mrs. Erik Rooing of Gothenburg and Miss Carl Claeson Bonde of Eriksberg—all of whom have received the honors of the Officers d'Academie as a memory of the visit of the French parliamentarian to Stockholm last summer.

From Sofia, Bulgaria, comes the report that that country will be represented in Stockholm, Sweden, at no distant date. She will send an ambassador in the near future, whose residence will be in Stockholm, but who will have diplomatic jurisdiction in Copenhagen and Christiania. Bulgaria is expanding and has long recognized the importance of establishing diplomatic relations with the Scandinavian peninsula.

King Gustaf and Queen Victoria recently paid a visit to the dowager queen, mother of the present king, who is spending the summer at Eriksberg. They remained a few hours only and then continued their journey to Claestorp. Royal folks are always traveling in the summer time and the people of Stockholm see very little of their king and queen these days.

The Swedish-American singers have completed their concert tour in Sweden, which, judging from all newspaper comments, has been an immensely successful one. Just what the financial success of the tour has been is not known, but it is believed that the singers will at least come out square on their trip.

The three countries, Sweden, Norway and Denmark, have a population of 10,577,000. Of this number Sweden has 5,476,000, Norway 2,375,000 and Denmark 2,726,000. Thus, in point of population, Norway is the smallest of the three countries.

Mrs. Henry W. Taft, sister-in-law to the president of the United States, enjoyed a visit to Stockholm last month. During her visit in the Swedish capital she occupied a suite of rooms at the Grand hotel.

NORWAY.

The tourist industry is assuming large proportions in Norway and each year shows a steady increase in the tourist traffic. Norway has many tourist bureaus and every one of them is doing a big business. According to a chief of one of the large tourist bureaus in Bergen the summer tourists who annually come to Norway are in round numbers about 50,000. When asked recently by a newspaper correspondent what Norway makes out of her tourists he estimated that they leave about 14,000,000 crowns in the country every year. The hotels and inns, not to mention the restaurants and the cafes, are the ones who are making the biggest money out of the tourist traffic. The keeper of the modest little mountain inn finds the summer tourist to be the best and most valuable friend that he can get. The mountain inns and hotels of Norway attract thousands of English, German and American tourists, who desire to find a quiet nook to fish and rest. Mountain trout are abundant and those who love to fish can certainly have their craving for this sport completely satisfied. Even in winter Norway is beginning to attract tourists. Many consumptives, too, come to Norway to breathe the fresh, pure air of the fiords and mountains and the ski tournaments and ski sports have also attracted many hundreds of foreign visitors during later years. So, taking it all through, the tourist traffic is one of the most valuable assets that Norway has and everything is being done to increase it from year to year.

Norwegian students by the hundreds have been seeking employment in the country districts this summer. They are in nearly all cases willing to work for their board and they are doing this more for the purpose of building up their health than anything else. A good many students find this a most profitable way of spending the summer and they are able to return to the college or university when the fall term starts in much better condition than if they were to have spent their time in the cities. The open air fad is increasing and it happens to be one of those fads which apparently is resulting in bringing about a good deal of good for those concerned.

Once in a while one will see an article in a Norwegian paper which augurs well for the future so far as again attempting to cement better relations between the two countries, Sweden and Norway. There recently appeared such an article in the "Kysten," which suggests that a Norwegian commercial union be started and urging co-operation between Sweden and Norway in keeping up a regular steamship traffic. The paper argues that the two together can operate a much greater number of lines than by working separately. The Christiania Morgenbladet has endorsed the proposition and will no doubt put in some strong arguments for it.

Emperor William has offered the Norwegian people, through King Haakon, to erect a statue over Fridtjof the Brave as a remuneration for the generous way in which he (the emperor) has been received every time that he has visited Norway. As a place for the monument the emperor has suggested a high prominence at Frammas, in the Sgnefiord, in the vicinity of Fridtjof the Brave's grave. King Haakon has thanked the emperor on behalf of the Norwegian people. To Professor Unger has been entrusted the task of drawing up the plans for a suitable monument.

This year is a banner year for fishing, says a correspondent of one of the leading Christiania papers. Not for many seasons has such an enormous quantity of "torsk" been taken. In Finmarken 148,000,000 pounds have been taken and this is certainly the largest catch on record. The herring fisheries in the North sea have also proven extremely profitable and fishermen in general have been making good money.

Dr. Jorgen Brunchorst, scientist and politician, has been appointed Norway's minister to Stockholm, Sweden. The Christiania papers approve his appointment, all declaring that he will make a splendid representative for Norway in the Swedish capital.

The Norwegian historians have had a meeting in Bergen recently. "It was a lucky thing," says Editor Lange of the Scandia (Chicago), "that Historian Sars did not attend the meeting for he weighs, you know, a trifle more than all the rest."

DENMARK.

The airship station which is under course of construction at Amager is attracting a great deal of attention and every day there are hundreds of people who go there to see what is going on. The other morning a fellow named Thorup started up on his monoplane. He rose to a height of about 250 feet and when he had circled around the grounds a few times he started to cross Oresund, intending to reach the Swedish shore on the other side. Suddenly the machine stopped and fell to the ground. The machine was badly smashed, but the aviator escaped uninjured. Mr. Thorup declares that he will try to cross the channel again in spite of his mishap and that it was due to a mechanical defect in the elevation rudder.

The Copenhagen Daily Politiken contained two articles last fall regarding a case of poisoning, which centered in a drug store in Kolding, known as "The Lejonet." Pharmacist Nilsen brought charges of libel against Editor Cavling, who was compelled to pay a fine of [illegible] crowns to the state and [illegible] crowns to Pharmacist Nilsen.

Knud Rasmussen departed for Southern Greenland in the latter part of July, where it is his intention to erect a trading station, at which he plans to purchase the products of the country and ship them to Europe.

MARION S. NORELIUS.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Fierce forest fires now raging in the Couer d'Alene region in Idaho, especially near Wallace, Murray and Mullan, are taxing the fighting resources of hundreds of men beyond endurance and the task of subduing the flames is apparently hopeless. Citizens of the threatened towns are in a wild state of panic. The dense smoke which envelops them causes intense suffering. Men and women are praying for rain and that there may be a change of wind.

A serious mishap to Walter Brookins, in which the aviator was painfully but not dangerously hurt, marred the first day of the aviation meet at Asbury Park, N. J. Brookins was dashed, stunned, to the earth, when the machine suddenly turned turtle. Seven other persons, among whom the machine tumbled, were injured.

Advices from the forestry headquarters at Missoula, Mont., state that high winds sweeping the Western forests have caused the fires to flame forth with renewed vigor and the situation is admitted by forestry officials to have grown worse; in fact, the situation is more dangerous than at any time heretofore.

Disobedience of orders, according to the railroad officials, on the part of a conductor was responsible for a head on collision between a passenger and a work train on the Northwestern Pacific near Ignacio, Cal., that took a toll of twelve lives and resulted in the injury of about twenty.

A wall of flame a mile wide is sweeping up the mountain southeast of Yellowstone lake, laying waste an immense tract of the best timber to be found in the park, and with slight prospects of being brought under control without the aid of a heavy rainfall.

Five persons were crushed to death when an express train on the Pennsylvania road dashed into an automobile near Cape May, N. J. Fritz Mergenthaler, one of the victims, was a son of Ottman Mergenthaler, inventor of the linotype typesetting machine.

Four persons were killed outright and four were seriously injured when a southbound passenger train on the Lake Erie and Western railroad struck an auto at a crossing near Rochester, Ind.

NEWS OF NOTED PERSONS

Steadily gaining in strength and free so far from any trace of blood poisoning, Mayor Gaynor is nearing recovery from the bullet wound inflicted by James J. Gallagher. He rests well at night, takes nourishment at intervals with satisfaction and is pronounced "looking fine" by his physicians.

Martin A. Knapp, chairman of the interstate commerce commission, may be named as presiding judge of the commerce court that was created by the bill enacted at the recent session of congress enlarging the powers of the commission.

Theodore Roosevelt held a conference with James R. Garfield and Gifford Pinchot, regarded as two of the most ardent progressives. Both protested that they would not and could not talk about their visit to Colonel Roosevelt.

In letters to friends in Cleveland former Mayor Tom Johnson says he has gained thirty pounds and is regaining his former health. Mr. Johnson is living in a cottage at Siasconset, on Nantucket island.

J. Armstrong Drexel, the American aviator, attained a world's altitude record at Lanark, Scotland, by rising 6,750 feet.

James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, is seriously ill.

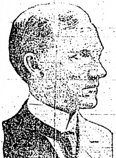
JOHN LIND.

Stands Pat on Refusal to Run for Governor.



LIND SAYS HE STANDS PAT

Will Refuse Nomination for Governor of Minnesota.

"I cling to my original decision to refuse to be the Democratic candidate for governor, though I am writing without a full knowledge of the situation."

This is the most important statement contained in a letter received by Frank A. Day from John Lind. The letter was written under date of Aug. 12, the day Mr. Lind returned from his Alaskan trip.

Some of the local leaders among the Democrats are practically agreed that John Lind will not be the nominee. Even those who have clung most tenaciously to the idea that in the end Lind would accept are now saying they have given up hope.

MOTHER AND CHILD PERISH

Automobile Backs Into River After Crossing on Ferry.

In an automobile accident at Oslo, caused by the steep grade to the approach to the ferry across the Red river, Mrs. Rasmus Hage of Warren and her eight-months-old child were drowned and Mr. Hage and a twelve-year-old girl narrowly missed death.

Hage, with his wife and child and the child of a neighbor, left Warren early in the morning for Halsted in an automobile, and, while endeavoring to leave the ferryboat at Oslo up a steep incline, the machine refused to work and slipped back. After catching the slip of the engine three times, Hage, who was driving, gave up the battle, and the car, with its occupants, tore down the little hill into the river, burying all of the occupants beneath the wreckage.

Hage and the twelve-year-old girl were rescued from beneath the car, but Mrs. Hage and her eight-months-old baby were drowned, the bodies not being recovered for some time.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER DIE

Drive Team Into Lake and Are Drowned.

Mrs. Peter A. Anderson and daughter Laura, aged eleven, were drowned in Grindstone lake near Sandstone.

Mrs. Anderson and daughter started for Groningen, a few miles from the lake, near which they resided, with a horse and buggy to meet some friends at the station.

There was no witness to the drowning, but it is supposed that they drove the horses to the lakeside for water and drove too far from the shore, or the horses became unmanageable and overturned the rig, throwing the occupants into the water. The two were not missed until several hours after the accident, when a search was made for them and the horses and buggy were found on the lake shore. The body of the mother was found in shallow water, near the shore, while the body of the daughter was found some distance out.

Drowned in Lake Minnetonka.

Virgil Bryan of Minneapolis, aged twenty-eight, while sailing with some friends at Tonka Bay, Lake Minnetonka, was knocked overboard by the swinging of the boom. He made an ineffectual attempt to regain the boat, but failed and sank. His body was recovered soon after the accident, but two hours' work failed to resuscitate him.

Drowned in the Vermillion River.

George Rose, aged thirty, a Hungarian laborer, was drowned in the Vermillion river near [illegible]. The body has been recovered. Rose had removed his clothing and evidently had tried to wade across the stream when he was seized with cramps and was drowned.

Two Unknown Men Killed.

A westbound local freight train on the Great Northern railway was wrecked near Erskine. About twenty-five cars, containing various commodities, were completely destroyed and the track badly torn up. Two unknown men were killed.

THIN MILK

How can the baby grow strong if the nursing mother is pale and delicate?

Scott's Emulsion

makes the mother strong and well; increases and enriches the baby's food.

Iver A. Krohn, of Shevlin, who is a candidate for the legislature says that he "stands for anything and everything." What the people want, however, is a candidate who stands for SOMETHING.

Phillip S. Converse, "the man who never sleeps," is a candidate for representative from the Becker, Clay and Wilkin counties district. Mr. Converse stands for what is right and if elected the district will have a representative that is a live wire.

There are four candidates for the Republican nomination for sheriff in Mahnomen county. Three state in their announcement that they are in the fight because their friends urged them to get into the race, while the fourth says that he has not been forced into the fight by his friends, but is out because he wants the office—and we miss our guess if he is not the fellow that wins. At least he is honest about the matter.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette in the last issue says:

> "you [farmers] complain now that you have no representation on the board of county commissioners, when, as a matter of fact, every man on the board is a farmer"

That is true, but three of those farmers—scientific "farmers," if you please—are elected by about one-fourth of the voters of the county. Is that just representation?

The announcement and platform of A. L. Hanson, candidate for state senator, published in another column, should be read by every voter in this senatorial district. Mr. Hanson is a man of the highest integrity and honor and does not make statements in his platform that he will not live up to in every way. As our representative in the senate during the past four years he supported many measures of interest to the people, and, while he was not a member of the senate "combine," he had a larger personal influence in the senate than any other man.

A. L. Hanson's Platform.

To the Voters of the Sixty-First Legislative District:

Four years ago you nominated and elected me to represent you in the state senate. In announcing my candidacy at that time I made known to you my position on the questions that were being considered, as follows:

"I favor and will support, if elected, the extension of the primary nominating system to include all state officers and United States senators; the enactment of a reciprocal demurrage law; prohibiting the issuing to and use of railway passes by all state, legislative, judicial and county officials whether elective or appointive; reduction in freight, express and passenger rates; increasing the power of the railroad and warehouse commission; thorough control and regulation of all corporations; taxing of corporation property in the same manner as all other property; redistricting of legislative districts of the state so as to give to the Northern part of the state its proper representation in the state legislature; local option by counties in the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors; the enactment of a more stringent pure food law; liberal support of the state sanitorium for care and cure of consumptives; liberal support of schools, educational institutions, drainage, good roads and for state development; the safe guarding of state timber and mineral property; the re-electing of Knute Nelson, as United States Senator. I will put forth my best efforts to secure the enactment of any other legislation that would be to the best interests of the people of the district and state."

In becoming a candidate for re-election I wish to respectfully submit that I supported every measure mentioned in that statement and endeavored to the best of my ability to fulfill every promise made therein and on all other measures that came up I voted for or against them on the merits of each measure. I voted for the the Initiative and Referendum; the nomination of United States senators by direct vote of the people; the submission to the people of a constitutional amendment granting equal suffrage; a tonnage tax on iron ore; reform of the rules, and the distance tariff. I opposed every measure proposed which, in my judgment was not in the interest of the people in this district and state. I assisted in defeating the million dollar appropriation asked for the holding of a "Semi-centennial Exposition" at the State Fair Grounds; also the one hundred thousand dollars asked for the "Alaskan-Yukon" and fifty thousand dollars asked for the "Jamestown" expositions. I opposed every raise of salary, except that of governor and county commissioners, and every expenditure of the peoples money except for necessary and useful purposes. I also opposed the county bonding bill, taking away from the people the right to say whether or not the county board should issue bonds. In opposing this bill I was full aware that I was incurring the displeasure of the "big interests" in some of the counties in my district, but as I was there as the representative of the people I considered that I had no right to vote to allow their county boards to bond them without their consent. I believe the opposition to my re-election is largely based on my opposition to this county bonding bill and because I favor county option. I know that I am criticized as not having accomplished anything and the reasons assigned are that I am not a good mixer and that I created antagonisms. I believe that I can say without fear of truthful contradiction that I supported as much legislation in the interest of the people and opposed as much that was against their interest as any member of the Senate. I believe, too, that I can count as my personal friend every member of that body who stood for legislation in the interest of the people.

If you shall again decide to nominate and elect me to represent you I will continue to stand for such legislation as will be for the best interests of this district and state. I will do my utmost to secure a fair and just re-apportionment of the legislative districts of the state at the next session of the legislature, to take effect before the election of 1912. I believe that the state lands should be classified and that the agricultural lands should be appraised and at all times open to entry and purchase on liberal terms on a condition of residence and improvement. A constitutional amendment permitting a change in the handling of state lands should be submitted to the people so as to permit this.

It would be only exact justice for the state to aid in drainage and in building roads and bridges and in the support of schools in those counties from which it has received incomes from the sale of Internal Improvement and Swamp lands and in which it still owns large tracts of such lands. It was the purpose of the federal government in donating such lands to the state to have the state so improve them as to make them fit for cultivation and for the building and supporting of homes upon them.

I favor: Agricultural and industrial instruction in all schools of the state and liberal state support for that purpose; the best possible protection against the recurrence of forest fires; the loaning of the trust funds of the state within the state so as to aid in its development; a one mill road and bridge tax and in order to make it available to the counties most in need of assistance I favor the repeal of the constitutional requirement that a county must tax its people two dollars to be expended on roads and bridges for every dollar that gets out of the "State Road and Bridge Fund."

I will support a reasonable appropriation for advertising the state's advantages to actual settlers. It is however my judgement that it would be a far better investment to spend a much larger amount for the betterment of the people now living in the state. If they can be made prosperous and contented the question of immigration to the state will take care of itself.

I believe in the conservation and development of our state and natural resources in everything that tends to the betterment of our people. I believe in progressive measures.

I am a firm believer in that all people should have a voice in their government and that a majority should rule, and for this reason believe in "county option" in the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors.

I believe that it is my duty if elected, to vote your wishes on all questions and believing that your choice for United States Senator to be elected at the next session of the legislature, Moses E. Clapp, I hereby promise if elected to cast my vote for his re-election.

If these policies and those for which I have stood in the past meet your approval, I solicit and shall appreciate your good will and support in this campaign.

Thanking you for a consideration of my candidacy, I am,

Yours very truly,
A. L. Hanson.

The farmer actually pays a premium for bad roads. He pays it in time expended in getting to market: in value of drafting animals and the food they eat and in the extra hands for their care and handling; in increased number of vehicles and wear and tear on them, and in the decreased product of land that has less attention and care. If the country had a system of smooth and hard highways it would blossom like a rose and prosperity would follow in the wake.—Ex.

A MOTHER AND CHILD

Drowned in the Red River at Oslo Sunday—Husband and Sister Escaped.

Very Sad Accident That Happened on a Steep Plank Approach to a Ferry.

Sunday afternoon in a heart-rending tragedy at Oslo, Mrs. Rasmus Hage and her infant child were drowned in the Red River, just after crossing the river on a ferry in an auto which was being driven by Mr. Hage, husband of the unfortunate woman, who was also accompanied by Miss Minnie Christianson, her sister.

Mr. Hage barely escaped with his own life in assisting his sister-in-law from the water, and was unconscious for some time after he staggered onto the ferry.

Rasmus Hage with his wife and child, and Miss Christianson, left Warren Sunday at noon for Halstad and headed for Oslo, intending to make the run down on the Dakota side of the river.

The machine was run on the ferry at Oslo and the river crossed. On the Dakota side of the river there is a plank approach leading from the ferry which is rather steep, and the auto could not climb it. Twice attempts were made but the auto rolled back onto the ferry each time.

The third trial the auto went half way up the incline and then started running backwards, the clutch refused to work and the car ran back clear over the ferry and into the river.

Mrs. Hage and babe were in the rear seat and were plunged beneath the water at once. Mr. Hage kept his head and made desperate efforts to rescue them. He reached his wife twice but was forced to let go by the struggling of Miss Christianson, who threw her arms around his neck in her struggle for safety and he finally had to abandon efforts to save his wife and child or all would have been drowned. When he was safe on shore he fell unconscious from the strangulation and it was some time before he was resuscitated.

The bodies of Mrs. Hage and the child were recovered in a short time but life had fled in both instances.

The tragedy has caused profound sorrow throughout this section where the family is well known. Mr. Hage was associated with Julius Olson in the practice of law at Warren and was well known in Thief River Falls.

Homesteader Plowed "Between Ten and Eleven Acres."

A homesteader near Lennon, S. D., attempted to prove up on his claim on the strength of resident and improvement testifying that he had plowed "between ten and eleven acres" on the tract. His proof was protested when it was discovered that he had measured off a tract of ten acres and another of eleven acres and had plowed a few furrows between the two tracts he had measured. Another claimant is now trying to make a better record on the claim. This plan was like that employed by settlers a quarter of a century ago, when some of them were putting houses so small that they had to go outside if they wanted to turn around and the land officials ruled that they would not recognize a house anything less than "ten by twelve" in size.

This looked like a heavy expense until some bright mind discovered that the land office men had failed to designate ten by twelve "what"

With a house the usual size, he built a miniature structure ten by twelve inches in size which he carried with him on his few trips to the claim and when he came to making final proof he swore with an easy conscience that he had a house "ten by twelve" on the land—Osceola Sun.

Paul Wise Dead

Paul Wise, who for the past several years has been the head filer in the Thief River Falls Lumber company's saw mill here, died last Thursday at La Crosse, Wis., where he had gone to receive medical treatment. He was buried Saturday at his old home at Thoma, Wis. The deceased was a strong healthy man, but last spring was taken sick with liver trouble, and failed in health very rapidly. He had many friends in Thief River Falls who greatly regret his demise.

Was Not the Owner.

A man who gives the name of Ed Mathews went to Chris Thompson's home, four miles southeast of town last Saturday evening and claimed possession. Mr. Thompson had no recollection or intention of selling his home, and of course there was a dispute, but Mathews was persistent. After a shotgun had been brought into action, and few shots fired off over Mathews' head, the conclusion was reached that he was crazy and he was overpowered and his hands and feet tied. Chief of Police Lang went out after him Sunday morning and brought him to this city. Monday he was taken to the county jail at Red Lake Falls.

Mathews escaped from an insane asylum in Illinois last April and the county authorities will correspond with the asylum there.

RESULT OF FAMILY TROUBLE

Otter Tail County Farmer Kills His Brother-in-Law and Then Ends His Own Life.

A shocking tragedy occured near Watasco, a station eighteen miles west of Fergus Falls. Wenzel Sofata, a Bohemian farmer, who is well known in that neighborhood, was taken ill some time ago and went to a hospital in Breckenridge. It was thought that he would not recover and the story is that his wife sold off everything they had in anticipation of his death. He recovered and returned to his home, but his wife refused to live with him longer. Sofata blamed John Jarak, his wife's brother, for his domestic troubles, believing he advised Mrs. Sofata to take the course she was taking.

Sofata secured a double barreled shotgun and lay in wait for Jarak, whose home was on an adjoining farm. Just as Jarak was starting for the harvest field he fired both barrels. Jarak fell from the binder dead and Sofata reloaded and put another charge into his dead body.

He then loaded the weapon again and turned it upon himself, but the charge only cut his chin and nose. He then turned it directly into his neck and head and the charge caused almost instant death.

SISTERS DIE WHILE BATHING

Elder One Drowns in Effort to Save Younger.

Grace and Luella Walton, sisters, nineteen and fifteen years of age, daughters of Louis M. Walton of Crookston, were drowned in the Red Lake river.

The two girls, with Mrs. Eugene Barrette, were in bathing back of the E. M. Walsh residence in Highland Park. Luella, who could not swim, slipped into a hole beyond her depth while wading. Grace swam to rescue her, but Luella gripped her so tightly that she could not keep afloat and both went down. Neither reappeared and Arnold Kassar, after repeated diving, brought Grace to the surface an hour later.

Grace Walton was a schoolteacher and also taught music. Luella had not yet graduated from the high school. The parents are frantic with grief and the mother is in a serious condition.

SAID TO HAVE CONFESSED

Le Sueur County Farmer Rearrested on Murder Charge.

Martin O'Malley, a Le Sueur county farmer, has been rearrested on the charge of murder in the first degree for the alleged poisoning of Mary and Francis Bergland, two and three years of age, his two stepchildren.

After the release of O'Malley, who had been previously arrested on this charge, County Attorney G. E. Burnet took the matter up with the attorney general and they came to the conclusion that a detective should be hired in the case.

The detective worked on the case a few days and succeeded, after two nights of hard sweating, it is alleged, in getting a written confession from O'Malley.

The case will come before the grand jury in September.

ACTUAL WORK HAS BEGUN

Canadian Northern Will Push Line to Duluth.

Actual work on the construction of the Duluth, Winnipeg and Pacific road, the extension of the Canadian Northern from Virginia to Duluth, began Monday, when workmen started operations on the Duluth end of the line. Camps have been established at Smithville, a suburb of Duluth just a mile or two this side of the steel plant site, and from 1,000 to 1,500 men will be housed in these camps.

The first section of the road just outside Duluth will be by far the most expensive to construct. There is a huge rock cut 1,600 feet in length and a tunnel about 500 feet long to build. The men camped at Smithville will be put to work on this part of the contract.

DRINKING RESORTS RAIDED

Whisky and Other Beverages Destroyed at Deer River.

Indian Agent Way has returned to Cass Lake from a trip to Deer River, where he destroyed a quantity of liquor. Besides several barrels of whisky, malt and several cases of "sealed quarts" were broken and the contents spilled. Deer River is one of the places where every saloon was ordered closed by the Indian department last fall. As a result "bootlegging" has been going on ever since.

Girl Killed by Automobile.

Miss Rose Segal of Minneapolis, twenty-three years of age, was dragged ten feet and received injuries from which she died a few hours later. Charles Wilber, who was driving the auto, was arrested and held by the police.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Forest fires, so called, in Northern Minnesota since the first of the year have burned over 110,374 acres of land, with an estimated damage of $184,045, according to the report of General C. C. Andrews, state forestry commissioner. He says that 186 separate reports of fires were received and 1,950 people were engaged in suppressing them, but reports of damage have been exaggerated, as most of the land burned was cutover land carrying nothing but brush.

The railway surveyors who have been working toward Fergus Falls from the southeast have reached that city. They are making no effort to conceal their identity and talk freely of their work. They have run their line from the present terminus of the Milwaukee branch at Hutchinson, McLeod county, and state that their instructions are to run the line to Fargo and beyond that they do not know where it is going.

There is nearly as much gasoline as kerosene sold in Minnesota, according to the report of State Oil Inspector E. J. Lynch for the fiscal year ended July 31. This is the first year the state has inspected gasoline and the report shows 259,640 barrels of gasoline and 274,208 barrels of kerosene were inspected. The total fees collected by the department were $53,642.80.

Every saloonkeeper in Moorhead has been the recipient of the order sent out by Special Indian Agent "Pussyfoot" Johnson, which provides that their places of business all be closed by Sept. 15. All stocks of liquor must be removed by that date or they will be confiscated by the government.

The Duluth, Winnipeg and Pacific road, an extension of the Rainy Lake and Canadian Northern road, have a large force of men clearing, grading and constructing the line from Virginia to Duluth. On the first twenty-eight miles south of Virginia 500 men are at work.

Joseph Chade, a railroad employe at Winona, while standing on the river front picked up a clam shell and out of curiosity opened it. A perfect pearl rolled out into his hand. It weighed ten and one-half grains and is valued at about $400.

Franklin F. Ellsworth of St. James has filed as a Republican candidate for congress in the Second district.

Minneapolis has an assessed valuation of $197,942,350, according to the report of City Assessor G. L. Fort.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Four persons, three of whom were Minneapolitans, narrowly escaped death near Sauk Center when the automobile driven by Walter F. Byrnes turned turtle and hurled the party into the road. Two of the injured were taken to Minneapolis and are now in St. Mary's hospital, while the other two are at West Union, near Sauk Center, under the care of a physician.

A package containing $1,000 was stolen from the Chicago Great Western depot at Dennison, Rice county. The agent, John Wright, had just received the package by express for the bank, laid it on the desk and went to the postoffice with the mail. When he returned the money was missing.

Patrick Cameron, a conductor on the Duluth, Missabe and Northern, running the ore trains between Proctor and the Duluth ore docks, was instantly killed by being crushed between an engine and a caboose while making a coupling in the yards at Proctor.

Walter Graham, St. Anthony Park, lies at Northwestern hospital, Minneapolis, with a broken neck, suffered while diving from a boat landing at West Point, Lake Minnetonka. He is paralyzed from his neck to his feet, but is conscious of his surroundings.

In a runaway accident at Crookston Mr. and Mrs. Henry Warminger and the former's mother were thrown from the wagon, the wheels running over and perhaps fatally injuring Mr. Warminger. The two women were seriously bruised.

Mrs. H. L. Smith of Minneapolis, who had been visiting at the home of her brother, Albert Jones, at Red Wing, is dead from drinking a quantity of carbolic acid by mistake.

A flash of lightning at St. Paul so frightened a horse that James Morehead was thrown from a wagon and died as a result of the fall three hours later.

James Trezona, aged forty, a pipeman at the Fayal mine at Eveleth, slipped and fell down a timber chute 200 feet and was instantly killed.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Rosetta Whitney, aged ninety, one of Red Wing's pioneer residents, is dead of old age. Deceased was born in Connecticut and removed to Red Wing in 1857, residing there ever since.

Peter Wagner, aged sixty nine years, over forty years a resident of Red Wing, dropped dead of heart disease. Wagner was a veteran of the Civil war.

Eugene F. Dewers, sixty-five years old, senior partner of the Leader department store of Minneapolis, is dead.

Frank Leroy Bennett, a Civil war veteran, is dead at Mankato, aged sixty-eight years.

KILLING WILD MORNING GLORY.

A study of the best methods of the eradication of the bindweed, or wild morning glory, has been made by the department of agriculture, and the data collected have been published as farmer's bulletin No. 368, which may be had by making request of the department. Three methods are recommended as practical for the eradication of the weed, which, like the quack grass and Canada thistle, is so serious because of its propagation through underground root stalk systems. The first method is clean cultivation every week or ten days with some knife cultivator during the entire growing season of the plant, which extends from the spring to the fall frosts. The second method is by seeding an infested field to alfalfa. The benefit of this method lies in the frequent cutting, which weakens the vitality of the morning glory, while the dense and rapid growth of the alfalfa exerts a smothering effect. A cultivated crop should follow the alfalfa and any remaining plants killed. A third method which has been found successful is the fencing off of the infested spots and turning in a drove of hogs, whose ration of feed should be reduced while they are at work on the weeds. They not only browse the tops close to the ground, but if they do not have rings in their noses will dig deep for the roots, which taste much like the sweet potato and of which they are very fond.

While the hogs may be turned into morning glory fields as pasture, quicker and more satisfactory results are obtained if the field is plowed and the hogs then turned in. The plowing loosens the roots and makes them the more accessible. Conditions may render a second or third plowing during the season advisable. For small patches of the weed artificial smothering material, such as building paper, manure, beet pomace or straw, may be used effectively, but with these materials care must be taken to see that the covering is as nearly air tight as possible.

BOOSTING CONNECTICUT.

In New York and Connecticut a definite movement is already afoot looking to a systematic advertising of the merits of farm lands in the two states, following several years of exploitation of the lands in the far south and west. The new move would seem to have much to commend it, for not only can much of the land in these two and other New England states be handled more advantageously than at present, but much which has deteriorated may be restored by proper agricultural methods. Besides this, the territory referred to is traversed with a network of trolley lines, which means ease of transportation and accessibility to markets which are always good. In Connecticut the campaign of exploitation has been undertaken by the State Pomological society, and in the literature sent out are cited the facts that there are only three states in the Union with a denser population than Connecticut, that there are twenty-one miles of railroads to every 100 square miles of territory and that the average farm is but two miles and a half from a railroad station, that the Nutmeg State produces more corn per acre than any other state in the Union, stands fifth in number of dairy cows per area and that the Baldwin apple and Old Biddy form a combination that are bound to win in the Connecticut hills. This is certainly a wise policy, and in view of the tremendous migration to the far south, west and north it would seem high time that other states which have substantial advantages in a home and agricultural way were making the fact known in an emphatic and definite manner.

DOES THE CLIMATE CHANGE?

That the climate in the great semi-arid section lying west of meridian 100 degrees has not changed materially is proved quite conclusively in the conditions which have this year confronted the settlers who have been thronging into this section by tens of thousands during the past seven or eight wet years, and the condition referred to holds from Texas to Alberta, Canada.

An unprecedented drought prevailed during the early growth of the small grain and was particularly severe at the time the berry filled. The result is that thousands of acres will not yield grain enough to pay for oil for the machinery and salt for the horses. Whether these drought conditions are to prevail for several years to come no one under the sun is wise enough to forecast. Settlers in these areas of uncertain rainfall should always plan their operations on the basis of the driest years so as not to be disappointed in the calculations. Should more rain fall than the minimum they will be gainers by so much and have cause for rejoicing.

Where there is no water under pressure to refresh the parched lawn during the dry midsummer weather it is best to forego cutting it with a mower. When the rains come on and the grass gets a good start the clipping may be resumed.

Residents of New Zealand have the privilege of placing their own valuation on their property for the purposes of taxation, but use of this power is seldom abused, for the government has the right to buy the property at an advance of 20 per cent over the valuation given by the owner.

The teacher in the town or country school is very human, after all, and will appreciate more than boys and girls usually realize kindness and courtesy on their part. The according of this kind of treatment is a great help to the teacher and reacts wholesomely on the pupils who practice it.

It is a mercy to the played out and decrepit old family horse to end its miseries with a rifle ball rather than to sell it for $4.00 to some heartless brute who will exact the last pittance of toil from it and then kill it to boot. We don't believe that a man will get to heaven who does a thing of this kind, no matter how long he has been an elder or deacon in the church.

The plow is probably the oldest agricultural implement. The first plow used away back in the distant years was merely a crooked stick with a tough sharpened point, which just scratched the ground. It is a long step from this to the four horse gang plow which will turn over three or four acres per day and the steam or gasoline traction outfit which will turn over thirty acres.

A pretty good way of ascertaining whether the price asked for a given piece of land is exorbitant or not is to find out whether the value of the annual product of the soil represents a fair interest return on the stated valuation after expenses, taxes, etc., have been deducted. Viewed on this basis, hosts of supposed land bargains now offered for sale can only be viewed as largely speculative propositions.

Folks who live in town and have never had mail delivered to them by the rural carrier have little idea with how much expectancy the daily visits of the carrier are awaited. It may be the daily paper which keeps the members of the rural home in touch with the outside world or the regular letter from the folks far or near. The writer has received his mail by carrier the past few months and realizes more fully what the service must mean to all the folks on the 40,000 odd routes over the country.

The lemon growers of California feel pretty good over the decision of the interstate commerce commission in the lemon rate case. Shortly after the Payne tariff bill was passed increasing the duty on imported lemons the transcontinental lines coolly advanced their freight rate on lemons to the point where it nicely absorbed the advance which would have come to the growers as a result of the increased tariff. The growers appealed, and as a result the rate will be put back where it was—$1 per 100 pounds.

The area over which alfalfa, the most valuable of all the legumes, is being grown is slowly but surely increasing, and the limits are being pushed gradually northward. This seems to be due to a better understanding of the conditions necessary and favorable to the growth of the plant, including treatment of the soil with lime, inoculation with the right kind of bacteria and the putting of the soil in the proper tilth before the seed is sown. It is thought that the area of successful growing of the plant will be still further increased when some of the hardy varieties brought from Siberia have been propagated so that seed may be had for general use.

One hundred and sixty-five trees in one of the handsomest and best kept orchards in the locality in which the writer lives came to an untimely end last spring because of an ailment which is generally termed "sour sap." This is a soured or fermented condition of the sap of apple trees resulting from a rapid flow of sap induced by bright warm days in the spring followed by cold frosty nights. This condition seems to set the sap, more or less seriously interfering with its circulation, at times killing the tree outright or greatly impairing its vitality. The fact that this sort of damage is usually most noticeable on the southwest side of the trunk would seem to point to the fact that it is aggravated by an exposure to the direct rays of the sun. This may be overcome to some extent by whitewashing the trunks prior to the changeable and trying temperatures of winter and spring, or even more effectively by shading the side of the trees exposed to the sun with thin board, veneer covers or other wrappers. Especially should trees which have already suffered in this way be protected from the intense rays of the sun during the summer season. The sour sap is without question an ailment closely allied to if not the same as sun scald, damage by the latter being on a somewhat less scale than a sour sap condition, which ruins the entire tree.

HORTICULTURE IN CENTRAL STATES.

The other day we received a letter from a young man, a former Iowa boy, who, in the course of making several inquiries as to climatic conditions, prices of land, etc., in Washington and Oregon, asked the very direct question whether we thought the outlook for horticulture in Iowa and other central and eastern states N. G. (no good). He further asked whether if the same pains were taken in the care of the orchards and in the spraying and marketing of the fruit as are the rule in western orchard districts a considerable measure of success could not be had. The answer we made to his queries may be of interest to some others who may be thinking of taking up horticulture as an occupation. There is little question that there are sections in western states which from the standpoint of climate are especially well suited to fruit raising. This has reference not only to a long growing season, but mild winters, dryness of atmosphere, abundant sunshine and in most sections water at hand, which can be turned on to plant, vine or tree at just the time when moisture is needed. But of almost equal importance with the favorable conditions mentioned are that organization of and co-operation among fruit growers which result in systematic efforts in the fighting of insect pests, the uniform packing of fruit of finest quality and lastly, but just as important, the marketing of the produce raised in such manner as will secure a remunerative return for pains and labor expended.

Climatic conditions in central and eastern states cannot be changed, but wonders can be accomplished through the adoption of rational and up to date methods in orchard care, painstaking methods in harvesting, packing and marketing the fruit. With the westerner fruit growing is the business of first importance, and the central and eastern state resident must assume the same attitude if he would achieve a comparable success. In the matter of nearness to consuming markets he has the distinct advantage of lower transporation rates, and this should serve to offset in a measure the westerner's advantage in point of climate. Western orchard methods are being adopted here and there farther east with signal success. Others may secure a like success, provided they exercise the same perseverance and intelligence.

INSTALL A SILO.

There is hardly any improvement that can be added to the farm equipment in dairying or stock raising sections where corn can be grown that will mean a more economical bill of fare the coming winter than the installing of a silo. The structure may be built of wooden staves or concrete, hollow blocks re-enforced with steel, and should be 20 to 30 feet to furnish the silage necessary on the average 160 acre farm. A silo of the size mentioned will hold 200 tons of ensilage. The cost of such silo will run from $200 to $450, depending upon materials used, whether the gravel and sand are handy for the cement and how much of the work has to be hired. A good plan for one who intends building a silo is to take a day or two off and visit several farms where silos of different types are in successful operation. The corn for the silo will have a maximum fodder value if cut just after it has begun to dent. The silo can be filled rain or shine, and if the crop is secured in this way there is avoidance of the risk of an early killing frost, which so frequently injures the ear crop.

ABOUT HIRED GIRLS.

We know a bright young girl who, following her graduation from the high school, accepted a position in a good home to help with the housework until fall, when she was to begin study at a teachers' training school. This girl had very good sense and showed a most commendable independence. Can some one tell why it is that girls and women as a class frown down upon those who receive remuneration for doing housework when there is little question that dirty, unkempt homes, soggy biscuits, sour bread and ill fitting gowns are responsible yearly for more divorces than a lack of grammar, French or psychology? Yet, for all this, there is many a community where hired girls are frowned down upon and made to feel that they belong to an inferior class or set. It is time for a change—for the elevating of housework to the honorable position which it certainly should have and an honoring of those who have a hand in it, whether as wives, mothers, sisters or those who receive a stipulated pay for the service they render.

Fish not only furnish a pleasing variety to the usual bill of fare, but they possess a very large portion of protein—about 22 per cent—which is the chief element in the nourishing of muscle and brain tissues.

Wet acres untiled are usually the most unprofitable on the whole farm. Properly drained they often prove to be the most productive, as it usually holds that the low land is richest because it receives the drainage of adjoining areas.

In a general way weeds are a good deal of a curse, but their presence on land—luxuriant and tall or slender and runty—may be accepted as very good evidence of the fertility of the soil. One should steer shy of soil which will not grow them.

It is a question which one is deserving of the greater censure, the woman who dresses far beyond the limits of her husband's pocketbook or the old codger who is so stingy that he audibly grunts every time he doles his wife out 5 cents for hairpins or shoestrings.

A whole lot of real misery that folks suffer comes of trying to sport a $3,000 appearance on a $1,000 salary. This common error is the parent of many a defalcation, many a divorce and frequent suicides. Sometimes the man is responsible, sometimes the woman and quite often both.

The grass growing along the side of the road adjoining one's land belongs to the owner of the property, and he may prevent his neighbor across the way from cutting it, but he cannot deny the mover or traveler the right of securing what he may require for his passing needs.

For the person engaged at hard manual toil there are few rations that are more appetizing or satisfying than a well cooked dish of pork and beans. The reason for this seems to be that beans are very rich in nitrogenous elements, which are necessary in keeping the human organism in good working order.

Some one who has looked into the matter—we do not vouch for the findings—asserts that bananas are twenty-five times as nutritious as wheat bread and forty times as nutritious as potatoes. With bananas selling at 10 cents a dozen they would seem to be a most economical food even if the above ratio is three or fourfold too large.

While most of the skimmilk should go to the young stock on the farm, enough should be reserved to ripen properly for the making of cottage cheese for the boys and girls, whose uninterrupted growth and development are just as important as that of the calves and little pigs. Dutch cheese, as it is quite commonly called, is inexpensive, appetizing and nutritious.

An interesting case has recently been decided in New York. A retail dealer was fined $100 and costs for selling bottled vinegar which had been labeled "Pure Cider Vinegar" by the wholesaler. The retailer sued the wholesale dealer to recover damages, but the case went against him. On appeal the decision of the lower court was reversed, throwing the responsibility for the false label on the proper person, the wholesaler who bottled the adulterated product.

Denmark annually exports to English markets 137,500,000 pounds of butter. This fetches on an average 40 cents a pound and represents a value of $55,000,000. Yet Denmark is but about one-third the size of the state of Wisconsin. It would make interesting figuring to take a pencil and see what the value of butter would be were all sections of the country to go into the butter business on the Denmark scale and receive the same price per pound.

Along with other agricultural doctrines that need disseminating the coming year is this one—that there is just as much money to be made, and with a whole lot less fuss and fret, on the small farm of from fifty to eighty acres as on the larger one running from 100 to 400 acres. Soil that has been gradually robbed of its fertility can never be put back to its original state of productiveness except by intensive methods, which can only be practiced on limited areas.

The old saying "It never rains but it pours" finds painful illustration this season in portions of Manitoba and North Dakota, which, in addition to being badly drought stricken, have been overwhelmed with a pest of black grasshoppers, which attacked the green things in the garden first and if these did not suffice to sate their hungry maws lit in on the grainfields and destroyed them. The settlers in the afflicted areas are certainly entitled to public sympathy and assistance.

An entirely new scope and meaning might be given to the work of the average country school were the teacher to send to the department of agriculture for the bulletin entitled "Boys and Girls' Agricultural Clubs," some account of which was given in a recent issue of these notes. If the county superintendent does not have sufficient push and enterprise to bring this matter to the attention of the teacher and pupils they might get copies of this bulletin in the manner suggested and after they have looked them over bring pressure to bear upon him to take steps to organize such clubs in the county.

By all odds the easiest way to maintain soil fertility is by keeping stock. And of the different types of animal husbandry dairying takes the least from the soil.

A mare has this advantage over a gelding—that when she has been injured in such a way as to unfit her for work she can raise just as good colts as when she was sound.

A good share of that nasty muss in the barnyard following each heavy rain may be done away with by equipping the barnyard slope of the eaves with piping or trough, which will carry the water to the corner of the barn.

Many a farm could be transformed merely through the adoption of long time leases, together with the following of such agricultural and stock raising methods as the tenant would feel justified in going into as a result of a longer tenure of the land.

There is not one farming community in a hundred where the inhabitants make a practice of so handling the farm fertilizers as to get the most possible good out of them. In the vast majority of cases 50 per cent of the fertilizing value of manures is lost before it reaches the land.

The flock of hens closely confined should not only be given the grain, green food and water they need, but should be provided with a dust bath in a good sized box. Finely pulverized road dust is excellent for the purpose, and it will be the more effective if three or four pounds of powdered sulphur are added.

Before selling the old homestead it may be a good idea to call in a real estate agent to make a list of the points in its favor as a selling proposition. It is quite possible when the catalogue of virtues is completed that you will think the farm plenty good enough to keep, as proved to be the case in an instance of which we heard the other day.

It is a mighty good thing for boys to have vacations and just as fortunate that schools begin early in September, so that they can once more receive the benefit of system, orderliness and study. Whether the summer intermission has been spent entirely in recreation and sport or hard manual labor, the change will be a refreshing and beneficial one.

Not very much in the way of municipal progress can be claimed by any community which allows aristocrat or plebeian curs to swarm its streets and alleys and constitute an all round menace to the health, peace and quiet of its inhabitants. The levying of a five dollar dog tax is usually the first tangible sign that any town is awaking from its long sleep.

A headland of grass at the ends and sides of a tilled field usually much improves its appearance. The stuff that might be raised where the horses turn is usually a poor stand and scraggly. If the headland is in some good grass a good bunch of hay may be secured, the strips are neater in appearance, and usually this neatness will extend to the roadside just over the fence.

An interesting feature of the Spokane apple show, which is to be held the latter part of November, will be a display of apples on which there have been photographed portraits and scenic views. Prizes will be offered for the best specimens. The skin of the apple is especially sensitive to light, and the results obtained are said to be more satisfactory than with photographic prints.

All too often the fellow who wallows around in the barnyard mire in wet weather is the same fellow who has a straw stack or two rotting in his fields. It's odd that such a fellow doesn't see the wisdom of scattering the straw in the barn yard and feed lot, getting rid of the mud and at the same time manufacturing a lot of valuable fertilizer, which the average farm is mightily in need of.

Those who are suggesting seriously that our children and grandchildren may lack for the food wherewith to nourish their bodies have not taken stock of the fact that at present but one acre out of six is under tillage in the United States and that this acre is producing but half a normal crop of wheat, one-third of a normal crop of corn, of cotton less than a half crop and potatoes but one half.

The dry spell which has prevailed in many of the north central states, greatly reducing the efficiency of the pastures, is not bearing so heavily upon the fellows who have silos and who are able to supplement the short pastures with a good ration of silage secured last fall. Thousands of other stock feeders and dairymen ought to have this economical safeguard against periods of drought. It would be simply a matter of foresight and good management.

If, as is said, beet sugar manufacturers are making close to 50 per cent on the money they have invested in their plants the price they hand out to the grower—$4 to $5 per ton—looks a good deal like 30 cents when one figures the risk involved in carrying the crop from seeding time to storage bin. In the corn belt at least, where a fellow can raise fifty bushels of corn per acre and get from 50 to 70 cents per bushel, the beet sugar industry on the five dollar basis is making pretty slow progress.

The law in most states makes streams public in character as are the highways. This means that while one may not cross the land of an adjoining property owner to reach a fishing spot if the latter forbids he may wade or boat to the spot and fish as much as he likes.

A record price was registered the other day for orange land in the vicinity of Lindsay, Cal., when eight and a quarter acres of bearing Valencias sold for $38,000, or at the rate of $4,000 per acre. Apple land in the most favored western fruit districts has passed hands at high prices, but they do not equal this.

Weighing the milk and use of the Babcock tester will tell accurately whether a given cow is worthy a place in the profitable dairy herd, but no plan has as yet been outlined to determine whether a given man is qualified to run a dairy. If the truth could be known quite likely as many fizzles with cows are due to the man as to the bovines.

It takes ability of a high order to so handle soil that it will retain its fertility when cropped year after year. It takes ability of a still higher order to take a piece of rundown land and restore it to its original fertility. Specialists of the latter kind are needed badly in most every section of the country, and if the agricultural high schools and colleges are not turning out young men equipped to do this very thing it is high time they got busy and did so.

Late exhaustive inquiry into the apple situation seems to show that the crop will be considerably less than last year. This condition, coupled with a shortage of the crop in Canada and Europe, should mean a nice profit for the grower and a fair profit for the middleman in handling. It is patent that it will be to the advantage of every orchard owner who has grown nice smooth fruit, free from defects, to pack it in the most careful and attractive manner possible.

The oleo hearing carried on before the agricultural committee of the lower house of congress finally resulted in things being left as they were. The oleo chaps—the steer and cottonseed fellows—could not bring sufficient pressure to bear to cause the removal of the ten cent tax on colored oleo, while the butter men failed to secure such amendment of the revenue laws as would place the manufacture of oleo under government inspection. The whole question bids fair to be thrashed out again at the coming session of congress.

One realizes more fully the amount of moisture necessary to mature the corn plant and the importance played by frequent cultivation during the growing season when the fact is known that from the time of planting to maturity water escapes from the soil by evaporation under the most favorable conditions of earth mulch and through the leaves and stem of the plant at the rate of 270 pounds of water for every pound of dry matter produced by the plant above ground, including stalk, leaves and ears. In the face of these figures one also appreciates the value to a growing field of corn from a good soaking rain.

Process or renovated butter is made from the crude store product in sections where creameries and scientific butter making are unknown. This stuff—it is not worthy of the name of butter—is first melted and strained, which leaves a clear yellow butter oil. It is then aerated by having a current of pure heated air blown through it for several hours. This process removes original taints and smells and leaves it a pure, odorless butter fat. It is then treated with skimmilk, as is oleomargarine, is churned, salted and packed, and really makes a pretty decent sort of food. It usually sells at about 5 cents per pound less than the best grades of butter.

No one suffers more in the end through the marketing of poor eggs than the very folks who keep the hens and take this unsavory product to the country store. State pure food laws have helped a good deal to drive the egg of uncertain age and questionable condition off the market, but there are still many who make a practice of making the grand round of the premises once in two or three weeks, searching under currant bushes and in deserted mangers for eggs, and take this same product to market. The storekeeper doesn't make the row he ought to for fear of losing the customer's trade, while the consumer is long suffering and does not like to make trouble for the storekeeper, and thus the fraud continues. In the aggregate poultry keepers make nothing, but rather lose, in the continuation of this state of things, as the price paid is usually figured on the basis of the loss to dealer and consumer. Much can be done to improve the egg business by stricter enforcement of pure food laws, by more frequent gatherings of eggs in hot weather, keeping in cool places and frequent marketing. Investigations which have been conducted show that the egg producers of the country lose hundreds of thousands of dollars annually through the careless and slipshod way in which this important food product is handled. It's about time for a reform.

Fairly Warned.

A man who was writing a telegram at one of the long tables in the Western Union building was asked in German by one of two men who stood near him where they could find out how much a telegram to a certain place in the far west would cost. The man volunteered to make the inquiry, did so and returned, saying that they might send a message of ten words for a certain price and that address and signature would not count. After assuring himself that the men could write he walked away, but was stopped at the door by one of the strangers with profuse thanks. "I have been in the city only a few days," he said, "and was told on shipboard and since I landed that everybody would try to swindle me. I spoke to two men today, and both did me a favor. I no longer have any fear." "That's right," said the man, "but, just the same, look out for the third man."—New York Tribune.

She Loved His Tomb.

An immensely wealthy widow who gave yearly hundreds of thousands to charity decided to personally inspect some individual cases of deserving poverty herself. One of her agents brought before her a poorly clad woman, saying:

"Here is a poor old woman, a very decent sort of person. Her husband used to go about with a dancing bear. This creature, though usually very tame and gentle, one day threw itself on its master and ate him up."

"Alas, my good sir," the old woman broke in, "since that moment the poor beast and myself have been without a home!"

"What! The beast!" asked the wealthy woman. "Is it the same that devoured your husband?"

"Alas, my good lady, it is all that is left to me of the dear lamented one."—New York Herald.

Sleep.

The first sleep is the soundest—after the first hour the intensity of sleep slowly diminishes; hence the value of forty winks after dinner in quickly recuperating shattered powers. Temperature and vitality are lowest at about 2 a. m., so that two hours' sleep before midnight are worth four thereafter. Nature has no rule as to the length of sleep, except that men need less than women, since women are the more sensitive creatures and a woman's heart beats five times more in a minute than a man's. Sleep should be just so long that when you wake in the morning a stretch and a yawn only are necessary to land you in a daytime of bounding vigor. As to early rising, it is comforting to hear Dr. Bryce say it is a habit that has gone far to wreck the constitutions of many a growing youth.—London Express.

He Met His Match.

The Russian marshal Suvaroff was famous as a jester and was fond of confusing the men under his command by asking them unexpected and absurd questions. But occasionally be met his match. Thus one bitter January night, such as Russia only can produce, he rode up to a sentry and demanded:

"How many stars are there in the sky?"

The soldier, not a whit disturbed, answered coolly:

"Wait a little, and I'll tell you." And he deliberately commenced counting, "One two, three," etc.

When he had reached 100 Suvaroff, who was half frozen, thought it high time to ride off, not, however, without inquiring the name of the ready reckoner. Next day the latter found himself promoted.

Gypsies and Death.

The custom of placing the property of the dead in their graves has always been followed by the true Romany gypsies. It is due to some old tradition of ill luck attending the possession of an article whose former owner is gone, and much valuable property is buried in this belief. There is also a sentiment among gypsies against the possession of anything that has belonged to a dead person, because it serves to remind the living of the departed and inspire in them a dread of death. The custom of burying their property with gypsy dead dates from the earliest history of the Romany tribes.

Odd Superstitions.

In England there is a superstition that if a bride and groom eat periwinkle leaves together they will love one another. Should he after marriage prove recalcitrant here is a way to win him back: Take a piece of the root of a wallflower and a partridge's heart, roll them into a ball and make the man eat it. If you want to know whether your lover loves you, crush some bleeding heart. If the juice is red, he does, if it is white, he does not.

His Mistake.

They were in the thick of their first quarrel.

"I thought your tastes were simple," said the husband. "I didn't expect to find you such a high flier."

"Yes, you did," she answered. "You knew all about my being a high flier, as you call it, but you thought I'd be dirigible."

Golf Stick and Scythe.

"Your son Josh is something of an expert at golf."

"I reckon," replied Farmer Corntossel discontentedly. "But he can't make two licks with the scythe without [illegible]."—Washington Star.

Trouble teaches men how much there is in [illegible].—Henry Ward Beecher.

Submitted to the Touch.

"I suppose all of us have our little vanities," says James Hamilton Lewis of Chicago. "When I was a member of congress I was called out into the corridor by a stranger who asked, 'Is this Colonel James Hamilton Lewis?'

"'Plain Mr. Lewis, at your service,' I replied.

"'Well, Mr. Lewis,' he replied, 'I was so struck with a speech you made in the house last week that I went to the document room to get a copy for myself and for another friend. They charge five cents for a copy, and I haven't a cent of change. Can you let me have the money to buy two copies?'

"Now, I had not made any speech, and they do not charge five cents nor any cents at all in the document room; but I gave him the dime he wanted, and reproached myself afterward for my stinginess. Such an artist at flattery ought to have had a quarter, at least."—Chicago Record-Herald.

How Romans Took Their Food.

The Romans reclined at their banquets on couches, all supporting themselves on one elbow and eating with their fingers from dishes placed in the center of the table. Each was supplied with a napkin, and knives were used, though it does not appear that every one was supplied with one. Nothing, it would seem, could be more fatiguing than to partake of a repast in such an awkward posture or less conductive to neatness, it being almost impossible to keep the hands clean even with water supplied by the slaves or to prevent the food and wine from falling on the clothing and the draperies of the couch. This manner of eating disappeared during the dark ages so far as the couch was concerned, but the peculiarity of taking food with the fingers from a common dish continued afterward for more than 1,000 years.

He Wanted to Know.

There was a small crowd at the soda counter when a tall man rushed in and pushed an empty bottle over the drug counter.

"Acid!" he whispered, excitedly. "Ten cents' worth of acid, and quick!"

The soda water crowd began to sit up and take notice.

"What's he going to do with that acid?" demanded one.

"It's a secret," answered the drug clerk.

"Nothing unusual, I hope."

"Well, rather."

"What! You mean to say he is going to take that acid?"

"Oh, no! Listen! There is a silver wedding at his house tonight, and he is going to test the presents as fast as his friends bring them in."

And then and there they voted him the meanest man in town.—Chicago News.

The Inspiring Bagpipes.

It was at a seaside resort, and along the board walk came marching a band of highland bagpipers in full costume. They were tremendous fellows, but their music, to my untutored ears, was like the squealings of forty stuck pigs. Yet I have never heard strains to compare with theirs for arousing a desire to die for one's country. I think bagpipe music must have been fashioned back in the old days by some demon of perversity out of the whistle of arrows, the clash of claymores, the neighing of war steeds and the shrieks of the dying. When I hear it I think of the wheel of fortune, the car of Juggernaut, the mills of the gods and the inquisitorial rack and screw. It whirls along with a cyclonic rhythm that sets the feet to tramping and the blood to boiling.—Robert M. Gay in Atlantic.

A Scandal Spoiled.

"Of course he and his wife seem devoted to each other now," said the jealous Miss Gaussip, "but do you think she will always be so true and all that?"

"Well," replied Miss Kidder, "I have reason to know that only last night he had occasion to set a trap for her."

"Ah! Do you know, I suspected something"—

"They more than suspected. They knew there were mice in the house."—Philadelphia Press.

The Lamp of a Man's Life.

Dr. Holmes said the lamp of a man's life has three wicks—brain, blood and breath—and to turn down any one of them makes the other two go out. The wounds a man will survive and even disregard so long as his head, heart and lungs are unhurt have long been one of the wonders of war history.

His Discipline

"Pop, you must take this child in hand. I have had about all that I can stand. She has no notion of minding me; it is time you took her across your knee."

"Send her to me," said Pop, with a frown. "It won't take me long to tone her down."

But how could he punish her, tell me, do, when she looked at him with her eyes of blue? Looked at him in the same glad way that her mother did in that faroff day when she was his sweetheart and he her beau. How could he strike her I'd like to know?

But still he took her upon his knee and at once was lost in a reverie that carried him back to a shady street and a little maid whom he used to meet, a blue eyed maid whose counterpart now sat on his knee with a beating heart, waiting for him to forget those days and punish her for her wilful ways.

Mom peeped in through the half closed door. They were playing jacks on the parlor floor, playing jacks and quarreling, too, just as two children are apt to do. She frowned, it was more than half caress, "I will have to punish them both, I guess."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Origin of Confetti.

The history of confetti is rather curious. Several years ago a large printing works in Paris was turning out immense quantities of calendars, through which a small round hole had been punched to receive an eyelet for holding the sheets together. A heap of the little circular scraps of paper cut out by the punch accumulated on a table, and one of the machine men amused himself by scattering a handful of them over a working girl's hair. She immediately snatched up a handful and threw them in his face. Other girls followed her example, and the first confetti battle began. The head of the establishment came in when it was at its height, and, being what the Americans call a "smart man," he at once realized that there was "money in it." He ordered special machinery, placed large quantities of the new article on the market, made a fortune and created a new industry.

The Ways of Moles.

Among common animals few have been less studied in their life history than the mole. An English naturalist, Mr. Lionel E. Adams, says that under the "fortress" which the mole constructs above the surface of the ground will always be found a series of tunnels running out beneath the adjacent field. A curious feature almost invariably found is a perpendicular run penetrating about a foot below the bottom of the nest and then turning upward to meet another run. A mole is never found in his nest, although it may be yet warm from his body when opened. Guided by smell and hearing, a mole frequently locates the nest of a partridge or pheasant above his run and, penetrating it from below, eats the eggs. The adult mole is practically blind, but there are embryonic indications that the power of sight in the race has deteriorated.

An Arab Legend.

"There is none so poor but there is one poorer."

A poor Arab spent his last bara on a handful of dates and went up on a high cliff to eat them and die. As he threw the stones over a lean hand shot out below and caught them.

"Ho!" said he. "Why do you catch my date stones?"

"Because, O brother," answered a weak voice, "I have not eaten these three days, and Allah has sent these stones to save my life."

"Praise be to Allah," answered the first man, "for he has saved me also, for here is one poorer than I."

And both men went into the city.

First Test of the Air Pump.

The first public test of the air pump was in 1654 by its inventor, Otto von Guericke, in the presence of Emperor Ferdinand of Germany. Guericke applied the carefully ground edges of metallic hemispheres, two feet in diameter, to each other. After exhausting the air by his apparatus he attached fifteen horses to each hemisphere. In vain did they attempt to separate them because of the enormous pressure of the atmosphere. The experiment was a great success.

Schoolboy Definitions.

Here are some definitions from the schoolroom: "A Jacobite is a man descended from Jacob." "Snoring is our breath meeting the air which is coming in our mouth." "Sneezing is a kind of 'coding' in the throat." Another boy writes, "When you are cold the inside of your body rumbles and then it makes a noise which is called sneezing." "A telephone is a kind of long wire with a spout at each end."—Westminster Gazette.

A Good Opportunity.

Poor Pickings.

The new boarder had never been on a farm before. She was filled with interest and delight in everything she saw. On the morning after her arrival she saw Mrs. Howe apparently picking berries from some pretty green plants beyond the wall as she strolled in the road.

"Those are charming little plants," she said, pausing, with her eyes fixed on a pail which hung on Mrs. Howe's arm. "What kind of berries grow on them? Does it take long to fill a pail like that?"

Mrs. Howe looked down into the pail with a meditative air and answered the second question.

"I should hope 'twould," she replied.

"What kind of berries are they?" persisted the young woman. "I can't quite see. What are you picking?"

"Tater bugs," said Mrs. Howe as she made another contribution to the depths of the pail.—Youth's Companion.

Public Speaking Explained.

The Japanese visitor to the city was asked to make an after dinner speech. He arose and began quaintly.

"I often wonder," he said, "why it is you Americans will hinder your digestion by making these after dinner speeches. We Japanese rest after our meals. It is much better. I know that I traveled with a Japanese legation over the United States, and everywhere the Americans would make us dine, then ask us for speeches afterward. We would much rather have dined at our hotels and retired afterward to rest for the following day. I asked some one why it was, this universal after dinner speechmaking among the American men at public dinners, and he replied that the American man never had a chance to say anything at home and that was why."—New York Press.

Had a Good Reason.

Dan, a colored man, was employed as porter in a mercantile establishment in a town in Florida, and his duties required him to have the store swept by 7 o'clock in the morning. He had been late for many mornings, and on the sixteenth consecutive time his employer remonstrated with him thus:

"Dan, why can't you get here on time?"

"Well, Mr. L.," said Dan, "yer see, I live the other side of Mount Hermon cemetery and can't always get yere on time."

"Why in the world do you live so far from your work?" said his employer.

Without a moment's hesitation Dan responded.

"Yer see, it's dis yere way, Mr. L.—I'll be honest' wid yer—I wants a home beyond the grave."

Testing His Scales.

"Thank heaven James has quit calling me Baby!" said the woman who weighs over 200 pounds. "A strange butcher shamed him out of it. It was done unconsciously too. That is why it was so effective. Since I began to diet I have been weighed often. The other day when James was buying liver for the cat he remarked that he wished there were reliable scales in the neighborhood to weigh Baby on.

"Said the butcher, 'Bring her down here.'

"'Thanks,' said James; 'I will.'

"James told me the butcher was expecting us, so we went. He was ready for us. He had rigged up a nice little shawl arrangement suspended from the hanging scales to put baby in, and then he was introduced to—me. James hasn't called me Baby since."—New York Times.

Curious Old English Law.

It is interesting to recall in connection with railway accidents that only a few years back any instrument which by accident was the immediate cause of loss of human life became in English law "deodand"—that is, became forfeit to the crown, to be devoted to pious purposes. This law applies to locomotives, but in course of time coroners' juries, instead of claiming the forfeit, inflicted a fine. In the year 1838 a locomotive on the Liverpool and Manchester line which by exploding caused the death of its engineer and fireman was fined £20, while the following year another engine on the same line was fined £1,400.

Making Sure.

"Johnnie!"

"Yes'm?"

"Why are you sitting on that boy's face?"

"Why, I"—

"Did I not tell you to always count a hundred before you gave way to passion and struck another boy?"

"Yes'm, and I'm doin' it; I'm just sittin' on his face so he'll be here when I'm done countin' the hundred."—Houston Post.

Napoleon's English.

Napoleon I. began to learn English at St. Helena, and there is a letter extant from him which begins: "Since sixt week I learn the English and I do not any progress. Six week do fourty and two days. If might have learn fivty word for day I could know it two thousands and two hundred."

Lucky Dog.

"My wife is excessively fond of her poodle. Actually, I'm beginning to look on it as a sort of a rival to me."

"Say, you're lucky. I'm only a sort of a rival to my wife's poodle."—Kansas City Times.

Her Excuse.

Widow (to dressmaker)—You must really wait awhile for payment for the mourning dresses. We are still too sorrowful to consider financial matters

Raising a False Issue.

A story well known to lawyers of the last generation is about the "umbrella case." A man was charged with stealing an umbrella, and a number of witnesses went into the box to testify to the offense. The counsel for the defendant noted that each witness carried an umbrella (the time of year was midsummer, which explains the necessity for these impediments). As a matter of fact, the prisoner had no defense to make. The barrister, thrown on his wits, exclaimed: "Gentlemen of the jury, did you not notice that each of the witnesses carried an umbrella into the box? Why is this, gentlemen? It is done in order to infect your minds with the idea of an umbrella, to prejudice the prisoner in your eyes, to raise 'a false issue,' and I appeal to you to signify your detestation of this concerted action by bringing in a verdict of not guilty." The judge, who imagined that little attention would be paid to such a plea, took little time and less pains to sum up the case. The jury nevertheless brought in a verdict in accordance with the resourceful barrister's wishes.—London News.

Hot Air.

The sirocco blows hot from the highlands of north Africa and falls on the Mediterranean as far as Malta. The solano jumps like a windy fireball from the heat of the Sahara desert and lands flatfooted in Spain. The harmattan blows hot Sahara dust far into the Atlantic and gives nosebleed and makes skin and lips parch and crack, while furniture and ship timbers groan and crack and scream in an agony of droughty despair. The khasmin blows Sahara's ancient dust into Egyptian eyes every fifty days. The pamperos periodically blow down into Buenos Aires out of the unexplored desert highlands of Brazil, and the blowing causes suicides and murders to be more common and wounds to break out afresh, with a heavy death rate. Pamperos pass away in a second, leaving the air fine.—Exchange.

The Bulldog.

The bulldog, unlike the majority of dogs, very seldom barks. In fact, owing to the construction of his throat his attempts at barking are more like a burlesque of the real thing. He wades into a fight without any vocal warning, and the only sound he emits is his heavy breathing. His courage is astonishing, and the largeness of his opponent never acts as a deterrent when hostilities are imminent. Still, as he is not a quarrelsome dog, he very rarely indulges in street brawls, and, as he is exceedingly good natured, it takes a lot to rouse him.

The modern bulldog is undoubtedly a different looking animal from his bullfighting ancestors. The most conspicuous "improvements" introduced by the present day "fancy" are largeness of head, width of chest, heaviness of bone and more typical tail.

Why She Was Pleased.

"Do you mean to tell me that you actually overcame that ancient antipathy of yours for Mrs. Muggsby and called on her this afternoon?" said his wife's husband.

"That's about the size of it," replied her husband's wife.

"And she was glad to see you?"

"There isn't any doubt about it."

"Why do you think that?"

"Well, I had on that old dress I've worn three seasons and a hat that is entitled to a prominent place in some museum for antiquities, while she had on a new gown just from Paris. Oh, yes, I'm sure she was tickled to death, figuratively speaking, when I called!"—Chicago News.

A Sample of Suggestion.

A popular comedian and playwright was praising the humorous value of suggestions.

"It is funnier to suggest a thing," he said, "than to say it out. Playwrights should remember this. Suggestion, pregnant suggestion, is what makes really funny the little boy's remark to his father:

"'Pa, if you help me with my arithmetic lesson tonight I'll tell you where ma hid your trousers.'"—New York Sun.

The "Best Girl" Habit.

"Why," asked her anxious and excited mother, "do you think he is coming to the point at last?"

"Well," the maiden replied, looking demurely down at the rug, "when he took me in his arms and kissed me last night he said he'd got so used to me he didn't believe he could ever break himself of the habit."

Fellow Professionals.

Phrenologist (to fellow passenger)—Excuse me, but am I right in taking you for a professional man? Fellow Passenger—Yes, sir. Phrenologist—Thanks! It's not often that I make a mistake in judging my fellow men. Er—lawyer? Fellow Passenger—No, sir; barber!

The Main Point.

"I am glad to say that I bear no man a grudge."

"But the point is this: Are you of sufficient importance to make any man care whether you bear him a grudge or not?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Other Things.

"Remember, my boy, there are other things worth while in college besides athletics."

"I know. The mandolin and glee clubs aren't half bad."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He that is ungrateful has no guilt but one. All other crimes may pass for virtues in him.

SEVERELY BURNED

Young Girl Spills Gasoline on Her Clothing Which Is Ignited by a Match.

Receives Burns That at First Were Thought Would Prove Fatal.

Serena Offerdahl, a seventeen year old girl employed in the laundry of the Soo Cafe, was severely burned last Friday morning and for a time it was thought she could not recover, but is now past all danger and her recovery is certain but will require many months.

The girl was in the laundry, which is in the basement of the Grundy building alone, and in filling the tank of the gasoline mangle, spilled considerable gasoline upon her breast. She then struck a match to light the burner and it ignited her clothes. She ran in a high wind to the kitchen of the Soo Cafe, a distance of half a block where the fire on her clothing was extinguished, but not until all of the skin on her breast was entirely burned to the flesh. She was at once taken to the hospital, and little hopes was at first entertained that she could withstand the shock. She is now getting along nicely and, although suffering a great deal, will recover, although it will probably be several months before she will be able to be about.

The girl's parents reside up near Holt, and are recent arrivals from the old country, being unable to talk English.

Horses Killed by Bees.

H. B. Hogenson, mail carrier on R. D. No. 2, out of Fertile, lost a valuable team Tuesday in a peculiar way. While hitching up preparatory to getting out over his route the team became frightened at something and broke loose from their fastenings, running away.

The horses ran into three hives of bees belonging to C. H. Carlson, tipping them over and the bees lit on the poor dumb brutes by the thousands, and sought revenge. The horses became maddened by the stings of the bees, broke loose from one another, and one of them ran through a barbed wire fence and rolled down the steep railroad embankment near Mr. Carlson's place. Both died several hours later.

Save the Straw.

Reports from all parts of the state show a shortage of hay; and the Minnesota Experiment Station again tells the farmers to husband well their straw. It will be needed in the towns, as well as on the farms. There has seldom been a year when straw—and especially oat straw—has been so greatly needed for feed as it will be during the coming winter. Farmers will be tempted by large apparent profits to sell all the hay they can possibly spare. Hence they will find a great advantage in feeding their straw, as far as possible, as a substitute for hay on the farm. The weather has been favorable for stacking grain, and the straw ought to be fresh and bright. When the grain is threshed, a little care will preserve the straw in good condition for fodder.

County Division.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette, in its last issue tries to convince the farmers that Thief River Falls business men are all thieves and robbers and in the event of Pennington County being established would control all elections, gobble all the county offices draw their salaries and smoke good cigars at the expense of the tax payers. They do not attempt to deny extravagance, graft and crookedness under the present management of county officers but try to make you believe that Thief River Falls business men are going to rob you so much more systematically that you will be better off to remain in Red Lake County. For genuine gall this exceeds the limit. It reminds us of the passenger conductor in Iowa who, when caught stealing cash fares, was called up by the Superintendent and told that he would have to be discharged. His argument was that they better keep him as he had stolen all he needed and would be honest in the future while if they tried a new man he would probably steal more than he had stolen. They are even worse than this conductor. They have been at it for years and are getting greedier every year and the only thing to be done is to discharge the present management of county officers and run the chances of doing better. We do not say that all our county officers are dishonest but it is a well known fact that our county affairs are not run in a satisfactory manner and never will be as long as controlled by the present manipulators.

So far during the argument on county division we have not seen or heard one word derogatory to the business men of Red Lake Falls. In fact from personal knowledge we are pleased to say they are gentlemen and a more hospitable town cannot be found in the state. Why should the business men of Thief River Falls be called thieves and robbers? The most of our readers are acquainted with them and know them to be honest upright gentlemen and will resent the slurs cast upon them by the Gazette.

It is not Red Lake Falls business men we are fighting. It is the gang that controls the county affairs and the gang rule by which it is controlled. Besides, who will have control of Pennington County affairs and be responsible for an honest accounting of the funds? It will be our new board of county commissioners. Peter O. Wold; Peter Hedeen; Ed A. Aubol; Daniel Shaw and Olaf Larson and who is there who will dare say one word against the honesty and integrity of these gentlemen? Hunt the county over a better selection could not be made, with the county affairs in their hands the farmer can be satisfied there will be no extravagance or crooked work. If our readers could all read the article referred to and at the same time vote the fat county patronage the Gazette monopolizes and its bills which the county pays they would see a reason for its selfish argument opposing county division. If our opponents cannot advance any better argument than they have so far Pennington county is an assured fact.—The Eleven Towns.

[The following is taken from a pamphlet issued by L. M. Hoag, of the First State Bank, and sent to the customers of that institution throughout the county. If other business houses do likewise, county division will have a majority of over 1,000.]

REASONS FOR COUNTY DIVISION.

1. Every citizen of Pennington county can reach Thief River Falls and transact all business and return home in one day.

2. More settlers will buy Pennington county land and the value of the farms will increase when Pennington county is organized, by reasons of a convenient county seat.

3. Red Lake Falls village received $9,022.40 in the last five years from the Road and Bridge fund, while all the towns together in Pennington county have received only $5,325 in the same time.

4. Of $22,607.45 Road and Bridge tax levied in the past three years, Pennington county has paid three-fifths of it and has received in return only one-fourth.

5. The south end can stand a heavy tax as long as they can collect $2 from the farmers of Pennington county to every $1 paid in by the south, and the whole amount spent in the lower part.

6. Thief River Falls will pay one-third of Pennington county taxes.

7. Thief River Falls will give Pennington county a free court house and will free Pennington county from paying for the costly one now building at Red Lake Falls. Reduced Red Lake will have to pay for its own court house. By law, improvements remaining in Red Lake county are charged against that county retaining such improvements. Pennington county will be credited an amount equal to the cost of the court house.

8. Pennington county spells lower county tax and home rule. Pennington county stands for Pennington county taxes and Pennington county citizens.

9. The smaller counties in the state have the lowest tax rate and the lowest per capita tax. This is strange but true. $6,365 paid the county officers' salaries when the county was first organized. Now it takes $18,723.

10. Pennington county affairs will not be directed from Crookston, St. Paul or Minneapolis.

11. Pennington county board of commissioners will consist of four farmers and only one business man from a city, thus the farmers will control.

12. Pennington county has the bulk of the wealth and the votes of Red Lake county. Why not permit the majority to rule? In the last general election, Pennington county territory cast 1,967 votes. Reduced Red Lake county cast 1,112. Why should the tail wag the dog?

E. E. Stewart, for years a prominent business man of Detroit, and who has been the manager of the Detroit Grocery company, a wholesale institution, has disappeared, leaving a shortage in his accounts of probably several thousand dollars. The stockholders of the company recently called for a statement. Stewarts prepared it and the stockholders did not consider it satisfactory. They found a new manager and Mr. Stewart left for the twin cities, locking his desk before he left home. When he did not return home Monday some suspicion attached to the case, but the keys to his desk arrived by mail Tuesday and the shortage became known soon afterward. Mr. Stewart has been prominent in business and social circles in Detroit for several years. He has a wife and several grown-up children.

Sivrin, the nine year old son of Ole Farthum, a farmer residing seven miles east of town, was taken suddenly ill last Saturday with infantile paralysis, and on Sunday was brought to Thief River Falls for medical treatment. The boy died in Dr. Vistaunet's office, being beyond medical relief when he arrived here.

Given Anothers Month's Time.

Liquor dealers in Moorhead and the rest of the ceded Indian lands have been given until October 15 in which to dispose of their stock of liquor, the time has thus been extended for one month, on which date all of the provisions of the order must have been complied with by the liquor dealers.

The dispatch from Washington, through the Associated Press, states that Acting Secretary Pierce of the interior department, has taken this action in the matter. It now seems highly probably that the order will be no further modified than this postponement of the enforcement of the order, as the dispatch refers to the postponement as the result of numerous protests against the order and requests for its modification

Duck Hunting Spoiled.

According to all reports the duck hunters around here will have to transfer their scene of operations from Mud Lake to Thief Lake, the Olson Lakes and other places, as Mud Lake is so nearly dry that the ducks have to go elsewhere. It is reported that the ditches and the Olson Lakes are full of ducks.—Middle River Pioneer.

Young Elmer Brink Charged With Pointing a Gun at John Nelson

A case that is attracting considerable attention to residents living west of St. Hilaire will be tried in the municipal court in this city today. Elmer Brink, son of Ole Brink, is charged with pointing a gun at John Nelson. This happened on the 20th of July, but complaint was not made until the 20th of August.

It appears that young Brink, who by the way is quite well known in Thief River Falls, he having entered a horse in the running race at each county fair for the past few years, was in charge of a heard of cattle belonging to his father, but a hawk's nest was more attractive than the heard of cattle and so deserted his post of duty for a time and allowed the cattle to wander into the fields of John Nelson. When he returned he found Mr. Nelson in charge of the cattle, and in true wild west fashion he endeavored to convince Mr. Nelson. The gun was a large one, but the boy was small, and Mr. Nelson succeeded in gaining possession of the gun without much difficulty and took it home with him. Lately the boy's father asked for the return of the gun, and the result is the arrest of the boy. The case is to be tried before Judge Bishop today.

Fires a Benefit.

The recent fires have burned over many hundreds of acres of the wire grass land, burning the grass branch and root clear down into the turf, leaving a coating of ashes from two to four inches deep. Old settlers tell us that next year and probably for years to come there will not be a sign of vegetation on this land unless seed is sown on it, but that if red top and timothy is sown on it in the early spring while there is snow on the ground the seed will catch and the heretofore worthless wire grass land will thus be converted into the finest kind of meadow. If this be true, land owners generally should take advantage of it and the gain resulting from the fires will therefore be made much more than the damages.—Middle River Pioneer.

PEOPLES STATE BANK
Capital $30,000
GENERAL BANKING, REAL ESTATE AND INSURANCE.

In the olden days people used to bury their money in the ground; stuff it in mattresses and sleep on it; carry it in bags hung around the neck.

Sometimes they forgot where they had buried it; the matresses caught fire; or, a hold-up man knocked them on the head and took the precious bags.

Still they didn't tumble to the fact that banks are here for the purpose of caring for people's money.

And our generation is yet finding money hid away by those of the last generation who didn't believe in banks.

We saw in the paper a day or two ago that a farmer, digging a cellar, found $290 in a tin can stowed away by his father for safe keeping.

POSTAL ROBBERS ARRESTED

Stockholm Thieves Turn Out to Be Three Young College Students. Movement to Raise Million-Dollar Fund Meets Approval of Norwegian-Americans—Defense of Copenhagen Leading Question in Denmark.

SWEDEN.

The thieves who committed the postal robbery in Stockholm a few months ago, stealing letters carrying money and checks to the value of 25,000 crowns, have been arrested and are in the hands of the Stockholm police. The thieves turn out to be three young college students, one of them only nineteen years old. Two of them were arrested in Stockholm and gave their names as Falkner and Falk. The other member of the notorious and daring trio is one Malmborg, who was arrested in Vienna. Falkner is a Stockholmian and the other two are from Gottland. They had so successfully forged the name of Director Engstrom, head of a large contracting firm in Stockholm, that it was no difficulty for them to draw the amount at the postoffice. According to a telegram from Vienna Malmborg denies all connection with the robbery. He claims that the other two thieves told him that they had won 10,000 crowns in a lottery and asked him to come along with them and enjoy himself. The authorities in Stockholm are glad that they have been captured and the Stockholm police and detectives deserve much credit for the persistent way in which they followed up this robbery, which has been a mystery for months and which has kept all Stockholm guessing for a long time.

A kerosene war has broken loose in Sweden and the queer thing about it is that the warring factions are two American trusts, the Philadelphia Pure Oil company and the Standard Oil company, a name which certainly sounds very familiar to American ears. Brother Rockefeller has had a cinch in Sweden for a number of years, but now his firm has gotten in trouble with the Philadelphians. The German oil companies are also in the Swedish market, as well as the Danish, and together with the Swedish oil companies there is bound to be some interesting competition. The whole thing may be taken hold of by the Swedish government in the near future and the Standard Oil company and the Philadelphia company, as well as the other foreign oil companies, may soon be politely requested to leave the Swedish field altogether.

A great deal has been written regarding the last visit of the party of German journalists, who were the guests during their stay in Stockholm of the Stockholm Press club. The Germans were enthusiastically received and all of them have gone back to their fatherland and written all kinds of good stuff about Sweden. Emperor William received some of the editors some time ago and seemed greatly pleased to think that they were so well satisfied with their trip. The emperor is a great friend of both Sweden and Norway and he is looked upon by the great powers as the greatest and most valuable friend that the Scandinavian kingdoms have at present.

Director Wavrinsky, according to the Svenska Dagbladet, will sever all his political connections in Sweden and make his permanent home in Paris. Mr. Wavrinsky is not satisfied at the apparent dropping off in the ranks of the Good Templars and as chief of the world's Good Templar movement he believes that he can do better work in Paris. Wavrinsky made a tour of the United State a couple of years ago, when he delivered a series of Good Templar addresses.

King Gustaf has been spending a few days at Saro. He has also enjoyed a long cruise on the Drott and visited several of the coast cities. His majesty's health is now considered very much improved and his physicians are satisfied with his present condition.

Herman Lagerkrantz, Sweden's minister to the United States, will return to his post at Washington some time during the middle of next month. It appears that the minister will be retained at Washington in spite of the many reports to the contrary.

Dowager Queen Sofia has donated a sum of £500 to be distributed among the poor people in Satila parish and thus enable them to buy goats, which are a very useful and income bringing source for the peasants in that parish.

NORWAY.

The movement on the part of Norwegian-Americans to raise a million dollar fund with which to continue the restoration work on the great cathedral at Trondhjem and for other purposes as may be determined by the Norwegian government has met with universal response all over the Northwest and all over the United States wherever there are Norwegian colonies. It is hoped to raise the fund by 1914 and to turn over this sum to the Norwegian government at that time as a token of the good will for that country by her sons and daughters in America. Governor Eberhart of Minnesota, who was present at a great meeting of Norwegians at the Minnesota state fair grounds last week, said in his speech on that occasion: "France presented the statue of Liberty in New York harbor to this country and every returning American, when he first sees the statue, thinks gratefully of France. Every Norwegian or lover of Norway, when he gazes at the restored Trondhjem cathedral, will think gratefully of the United States. Every purpose to which the proceeds of the permanent fund may be put will raise up a host of well wishers for the United States in Norway. The bonds which unite these two great countries will thus be drawn closer and knit more firmly. It will bring us with great strides toward the ambition of all who have the welfare of mankind at heart, the establishment of universal peace." In Norway the movement has been hailed with great enthusiasm and the Norwegian people as a whole are universal in their praise of their patriotic brethren across the sea.

Typhoid fever has broken out among the soldiers in Skedsmo. About seventeen out of 100 have been sent to the military hospitals in Christiania. The disease has been rapidly spreading and the whole regiment has been threatened. It is believed that the cause of the epidemic can be traced to the milk which has been sold to the soldiers.

Dr. Alfred Ericksen, a clergyman, makes a scathing criticism of Colonel Roosevelt and his speech at the Nobel institute in Christiania. He characterizes Roosevelt as a little fat man with protruding teeth and with a face which has no signs of intelligence. Rev. Dr. Ericksen publishes a socialistic paper.

A German squadron, consisting of twenty-nine battleships and torpedo cruisers, has been cruising along the west coast of Norway during the past week. The crews on the various ships consisted of 16,221 men and it was one of the most formidable squadrons that ever cruised in Norwegian waters.

The German emperor paid his usual visit to the Trondhjem cathedral this summer and donated the usual 1,000 crowns, a sum of money which will be used towards its restoration. The emperor has now donated something like 20,000 crowns to the restoration of the famous old cathedral.

The Good Templars in Norway are rapidly decreasing in membership, if recent reports are true. The Christiania lodge has decreased from 5,389 to 3,060.

DENMARK.

There are so many different factions in politics in Denmark that it is a difficult nation to understand in this respect, but there seems to be one question upon which the country stands about evenly divided and that is regarding the defenses of Copenhagen. One party desires to put the city in a strong military position, with fortresses and other strong defenses, and another party is directly opposed to it. There is a third party, which is taking a neutral stand, but when it comes to settling the question at the polls this party would have to take a stand either for or against and therefore join hands with one or the other of the big parties. At present the question of the Copenhagen defenses is the one great question that is agitating the country.

The folkething has approved the government loan of $10,000,000. There was from the very beginning a demonstrative scene among the Social Democrats, who have all along opposed the loan. The minister of finance, however, took a determined stand and when it came to voting the Social Democrats did not attempt to show their strength. The landsthing will undoubtedly follow the folkething's example and there will be no trouble in getting the loan through. The loan will be furnished by French, Danish, Swedish and German bankers.

Professor and Madame Boghild, who have been making an extensive tour through the United States during the past summer, have returned to Copenhagen and, according to the Copenhagen papers, they feel extremely well pleased with their trip. Professor Boghild delivered about fifty lectures in the United States and wherever he and his wife went in the Danish American colonies they were most heartily received.

At Bornholm they have found the body of a Swedish laboring man named Anders Johnsen. He was for some time employed by a farmer, but suddenly disappeared early last winter. It is believed that he had been in an intoxicated condition and gone to sleep and then was frozen to death.

POLITICAL NEWS.

That California is progressive in its Republican politics was proved beyond question when Hiram Johnson, progressive candidate for governor, swept the field in the direct primaries, winning his party's nomination by a plurality that will border on 50,000 when all returns are in. It is believed that Johnson carried with him to victory two progressive candidates for congress, William Kent in the Second district defeating William McKinlay, incumbent, and D. W. Stephens defeating James McLachlan in the Seventh.

Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio gave out a statement at Beverly, Mass., in which he says he will never support Speaker Cannon again and that he does not believe Mr. Cannon ever can be re-elected. The fact that the statement was given out immediately following a conference at the summer White House regarding plans for the coming congressional campaign is taken as indicating that President Taft, as well as Vice President Sherman, is behind the movement to eliminate Mr. Cannon.

At a political conference between Colonel Roosevelt and his close personal friends a plan of action was agreed upon which will hold until the situation shapes itself more clearly. Briefly stated, it is this: Colonel Roosevelt is to stand aside in the New York state campaign and let the "old guard" fight its own fight and thus shoulder all the responsibility for the conduct and result of the campaign. He is neither to endorse nor criticise the Taft administration. He is to keep out all around if he can.

In the Democratic primaries in Nebraska Hitchcock defeated Metcalfe, the Bryan candidate for United States senator, by a decisive maporiity, even carrying Metcalfe's home city of Lincoln, where the Bryan influence is greatest. Shallenberger, present governor, also backed by Bryan, was defeated by Mayor Dahlman of Omaha for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's name was presented for the office of temporary chairman of the New York Republican state convention at the meeting of the Republican state committee, but his selection for that honor was lost by a vote of 20 to 15. Vice President James S. Sherman was then named as temporary chairman of the convention by unanimous vote.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean prints an interview with Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the house of representatives, in which he denounces the progressives, says that he will be a candidate for the speakership of the next house and declares that reports of a contemplated reorganization of the Republican party originated with progressives and Democrats.

Standpatism thoroughly defeated insurgency in the Republican primaries in Nebraska, Burkett, standpatter, for senator, defeating Whedon, insurgent, by a three to one vote. Hayward, secretary of the Republican national committee, defeated Tobey, insurgent, for the congressional nomination in the First district in a walkaway.

Although Samuel Gompers refused to say whether the American Federation of Labor would support Robert Black as an independent candidate for congress against Congressman John Dalzell of Pittsburg it is generally believed that Black will become a candidate and will be supported by labor.

Theodore Roosevelt denies emphatically that he has sent an ultimatum to President Taft demanding that the president break with Vice President Sherman.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

One of the most valuable assets of the Red River valley this year is going to be the hay crop. This condition exists in the face of the fact that the tame hay crop is generally short, less than a half crop, with the wild hay crop on a good portion of the farms that are not entirely under cultivation. The vast gain comes from the land ordinarily considered swamp land, which this year has produced an immense hay crop.

The construction of the Plummer-Moose Lake line of the Soo railway is nearing the "home stretch" of completion and the indications are Oct. 1 will witness the entire road with steel in position. At the present time practically every foot of the grade has been completed, and excellent progress is being made in laying the steel, which is being done with a track laying machine.

The State Association of Elks, after naming Austin as their next meeting place, elected the following officers: R. J. Angus, Fergus Falls, president; J. W. Foley, Stillwater, vice president; R. S. Eldridge, St. Paul, secretary; Samuel Donaldson, Faribault, treasurer; H. P. Parshall, St. Cloud, chaplain; Edwin A. Taylor, Minneapolis, sergeant-at-arms.

Frank J. Huber, for many years a St. Paul alderman, has been committed to the state insane asylum at St. Peter. Mr. Huber had been in poor health for some time. About a year and a half ago his cafe burned, prosecutions by the Law Enforcement league followed and his wife died last February. His mind was affected by grief, it is believed.

There were 2,304 deaths from tuberculosis in Minnesota in 1909, of which 1,222 were males and 1,082 females. This is said to be a slight decrease from the previous year, when the increased population and more accurate statistics are considered. Over one-half of those who died were between fifteen and thirty-four years of age.

Twenty of the largest cities in the United States have agreed to co-operate with Chief J. J. O'Connor of the St. Paul police force in furnishing protection to President Taft when he attends the second National Conservation congress to be held in that city Sept. 5.

Proposed economy in the department of Indian affairs has resulted in the agency at Leech Lake receiving notice expenses will be cut down nearly $3,000 annually hereafter and as a result some of the offices at that agency will be discontinued.

About 150 delegates, representing hotels of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska, attended the convention of the Northwestern Hotel Men's association at Minneapolis last week.

Joseph L. Murphy and Thomas D. Schall, both blind, have announced their candidacies for legislative honors in Minneapolis.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

John Hendrickson, the marine fireman who was shot through the abdomen on board the steamer James Corrigan at midnight July 29 by Serafino Petros, a wheelsman, is dead at St. Mary's hospital at Duluth. Petros is now in jail awaiting the action of the next grand jury for assault in the first degree. The charge will be changed to murder.

Peter Olson of Kasson, twenty-six years old, son of Rastus Olson of that city, was killed by being run over by a Northwestern passenger train in front of the station at Winona. He attempted to alight before the train came to a full stop, was caught between the coaches, thrown to the rails and his body horribly mutilated.

H. Sutherland, son of a farmer living four miles north of Lake Crystal, was found dead in his bed, having been smothered under the bed covering. He was subject to fits and it is thought that he had one during the night and got tangled in the covering and suffocated.

The body of an unidentified man, who had been murdered, was found in a burning box car in the Burlington yards, half a mile south of the state fish hatchery in St. Paul. The car had been set on fire in an attempt to conceal the crime.

George Roots, twenty years old, living in the northwestern part of Rice county, was instantly killed when he was run over by a threshing engine. He was riding on the toolbox of the engine and fell under one of the rear wheels.

Surviving a fall from the second story of his home and escaping hurts in an unusual series of small boy accidents Francis Boghan of St. Paul, eight years old, came to his death in a tumble from a dray wagon.

Miss Katherine Tully of Springfield, Mass., injured some days ago near West Union when the automobile driven by Walter F. Byrnes of Minneapolis turned turtle, is dead.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

George H. Reynolds, a prominent attorney of St Cloud, is dead. He was stricken suddenly after concluding an argument in a case on trial.

Daniel Armstrong, seventy-eight years old, one of the oldest settlers in the state, is dead at his home at Oakesdale.

Minnesota Indians Do Not Want Services of White Lawyer.

At a conference of 300 Indians of the White Earth reservation held at White Earth to discuss the advisability of engaging Daniel B. Henderson of Washington, an attorney, to represent them in the alleged fraudulent land cases, it was decided not to engage the services of any lawyer, but to let the government agents now on the case work out the matter along lines already mapped out. The Indians say they have been defrauded out of their rights to land in numerous instances by white men and also claim the ownership of state swamp land recently turned over to the state by the federal government.

The judicial department of the United States government has almost completed its investigation of the 2,000 alleged land grabbing cases on the White Earth Indian reservation and former Judge E. H. Long of Washington made a rapid and secret visit to the district attorney's office with ample evidence to begin legal proceedings against numerous prominent citizens near the reservation. Eighty per cent of all the land on the White Earth Chippewa Indian reservation is involved in this scandal.

Automobile Backs Into River After Crossing on Ferry.

In an automobile accident at Oslo, caused by the steep grade to the approach to the ferry across the Red river, Mrs. Rasmus Hage of Warren and her eight-months-old child were drowned and Mr. Hage and a twelve-year-old girl narrowly missed death.

Hage, with his wife and child and the child of a neighbor, left Warren early in the morning for Halsted in an automobile, and, while endeavoring to leave the ferryboat at Oslo up a steep incline, the machine refused to work and slipped back. After catching the slip of the engine three times, Hage, who was driving, gave up the battle, and the car, with its occupants, tore down the little hill into the river, burying all of the occupants beneath the wreckage.

Hage and the twelve-year-old girl were rescued from beneath the car, but Mrs. Hage and her eight-months-old baby were drowned, the bodies not being recovered for some time.

Government Officials on Trail.

Government officials who visited Minneapolis at the solicitation of the Minnetonka Protective association and as the result of the recent sheriff's raid on Minnetonka blind piggers, have obtained evidence showing that in three cases blind pigs have been operated without government licenses. The government exacts a tax of $25 and failure to pay the tax is punishable by three years in prison.

Prominent Merchant Dead.

George M. Tibbs, head of the mercantile house of Tibbs, Hutchings & Co., formerly of St. Paul, but removed a few months ago to Minneapolis, one of the largest and most important houses of its kind in the entire Northwest, is dead at his home at Minnetonka Beach. Mr. Tibbs' health had been failing for upwards of a year.

BANKER SENT TO WORKHOUSE

Head of St. Paul Institution Given Thirty Days for Reckless Automobiling.

Frank W. Waterman, president of the Ramsey County State bank of St. Paul, was sentenced to the workhouse for thirty days, without the option of a fine, by Judge John W. Finehout in police court, for automobile speeding. Judge Finehout scored the banker in scathing language before pronouncing the sentence.

Mr. Waterman, with four men companions, was driving along University avenue when he collided with a vehicle occupied by Percy Hagen and a woman. The automobile wrecked the vehicle, throwing the occupants to the street. Mr. Waterman sped on, leaving the injured persons dazed in the wreckage of the buggy. The Rondo police were notified of the accident and mounted officers captured the speeding machine.

Mr. Waterman appeared in court without an attorney and was almost breathless when Judge Finehout pronounced sentence.

"I have worked fourteen years to attain my position as president of the bank," said Mr. Waterman, "and if I have to serve this sentence my labors will have all been in vain. I shall have to call a meeting of the directors and resign."

WILL APPEAL FROM DECISION

Banker Sent to Workhouse Denied Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Frank W. Waterman, president of the Ramsey County State bank of St. Paul, who was sentenced to thirty days in the workhouse for reckless auto speeding by Judge John W. Finehout in police court last week, must serve his time out, according to a decision rendered by Judge G. M. Orr in the district court.

The banker had sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the sentence of Judge Finehout and he has been in the custody of the sheriff since Saturday, when he was brought in from the workhouse. In denying the writ Judge Orr decided it is not necessary to have a detailed complaint filed when trying cases in the police court.

The attorneys for the banker at once gave notice of an appeal, both from the decision on the writ and the sentence of Judge Finehout. There is no provision for admitting Waterman to bail pending action on the writ by the supreme court and Judge Finehout refused to fix any bail in the appeal from the sentence imposed by himself.

ORDER IS AGAIN MODIFIED

Saloons in Prohibited Territory Given Until Oct. 15 to Close.

Saloon and liquor interests affected by the recent order of the bureau of Indian affairs at Washington extending prohibition on ceded Indian lands in Minnesota have been given until Oct. 15 to comply with its provisions. The original date set for its enforcement was Sept. 15. The order gave rise to numerous protests, coupled with requests for its revocation or modification, and Acting Secretary Pierce of the interior department postponed the date of its operation.

The order refers to lands adjacent to the Leech Lake and White Earth Indian reservations, forbidding the introduction of intoxicating liquors in order to protect the Indians. The principal protests have been received from Moorhead and Barnesville.

Mr Fawcett was well known as a Northwestern newspaper man. He was at one time business manager of the St Cloud Journal and later was editor and manager of the Grand Forks Times.

Five years ago he came to the Twin Cities and was employed on different papers. In January he went to Chicago and secured a desk position on the Examiner.

ALL DRUGGISTS

B. E. Sandberg has again filed for the Republican nomination for senator in the Marshall, Roseau and Kittson counties' district. Senator Sandberg is a power at the state capitol and he will be nominated and elected without opposition. We hope more of his kind will be successful.

According to Sunbeam Hunt he and other heavy taxpayers in the town of Highlanding are against county division. A gentleman who is well informed as to the situation in Highlanding, having done considerable personal work in order to secure his figures says that 90 per cent of the rate in this township will be for division. If the Sunbeam keeps up its campaign of misrepresentation, we believe that it will be safe to increase this number to 95 per cent.

Many of the Polk county papers tell of the wonderful influence of Sen. A. D. Stephens at St. Paul and argue that he should be returned for that reason. Don't be too sure that Senator Stephens is going to have such a great influence during the next season. The lieutenant governor is going to be Sam Gorden. Mr. Gorden objected to the appointment of A. D. Stephens as a member of the state central committee, and he is going to appoint the committees in the senate. It is not at all probable that he will appoint A. D. Stephens as chairman of the committee on appropriations. Sam Gorden does not train with the same crowd that A. D. Stephens does.

It is not very often that you find any truthful statement in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, but since John King has taken his stand on the side of the farmers, the paper occasionally tells the truth. The following taken from the Gazette is a fact:

> If you live in the southern half of Red Lake county, there is clearly nothing to gain by division of the county, and a dead certainty of loss.

But the Gazette might have added that if you live in the north half of Red Lake county you have nothing to gain by voting against division. The north half of the county pays the bulk of the taxes while it is spent in the south half by the county commissioners.

A. L. Hanson's Platform.

To the Voters of the Sixty-First Legislative District:

Four years ago you nominated and elected me to represent you in the state senate. In announcing my candidacy at that time I made known to you my position on the questions that were being considered, as follows:

"I favor and will support, if elected, the extension of the primary nominating system to include all state officers and United States senators; the enactment of a reciprocal demurrage law; prohibiting the issuing to and use of railway passes by all state, legislative, judicial and county officials whether elective or appointive; reduction in freight, express and passenger rates; increasing the power of the railroad and warehouse commission; thorough control and regulation of all corporations; taxing of corporation property in the same manner as all other property; redistricting of legislative districts of the state so as to give to the Northern part of the state its proper representation in the state legislature; local option by counties in the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors; the enactment of a more stringent pure food law; liberal support of the state sanitorium for care and cure of consumptives; liberal support of schools, educational institutions, drainage, good roads and for state development; the safe guarding of state timber and mineral property; the re-electing of Knute Nelson as United States Senator. I will put forth my best efforts to secure the enactment of any other legislation that would be to the best interests of the people of the district and state."

In becoming a candidate for re-election I wish to respectfully submit that I supported every measure mentioned in that statement and endeavored to the best of my ability to fulfill every promise made therein and on all other measures that came up I voted for or against them on the merits of each measure. I voted for the the Initiative and Referendum; the nomination of United States senators by direct vote of the people; the submission to the people of a constitutional amendment granting equal suffrage; a tonnage tax on iron ore; reform of the rules, and the distance tariff. I opposed every measure proposed which, in my judgment was not in the interest of the people in this district and state. I assisted in defeating the million dollar appropriation asked for the holding of a "Semi centennial Exposition" at the State Fair Grounds; also the one hundred thousand dollars asked for the "Alaskan-Yukon" and fifty thousand dollars asked for the "Jamestown" expositions. I opposed every raise of salary, except that of governor and county commissioners, and every expenditure of the peoples money except for necessary and useful purposes. I also opposed the county bonding bill, taking away from the people the right to say whether or not the county board should issue bonds. In opposing this bill I was full aware that I was incurring the displeasure of the "big interests" in some of the counties in my district, but as I was there as the representative of the people I considered that I had no right to vote to allow their county boards to bond them without their consent. I believe the opposition to my re-election is largely based on my opposition to this county bonding bill and because I favor county option. I know that I am criticized as not having accomplished anything and the reasons assigned are that I am not a good mixer and that I created antagonisms. I believe that I can say without fear of truthful contradiction that I supported as much legislation in the interest of the people and opposed as much that was against their interest as any member of the Senate. I believe, too, that I can count as my personal friend every member of that body who stood for legislation in the interest of the people.

If you shall again decide to nominate and elect me to represent you I will continue to stand for such legislation as will be for the best interests of this district and state. I will do my utmost to secure a fair and just re-apportionment of the legislative districts of the state at the next session of the legislature, to take effect before the election of 1912. I believe that the state lands should be classified and that the agricultural lands should be appraised and at all times open to entry and purchase on liberal terms on a condition of residence and improvement. A constitutional amendment permitting a change in the handling of state lands should be submitted to the people so as to permit this.

It would be only exact justice for the state to aid in drainage and in building roads and bridges and in the support of schools in those counties from which it has received incomes from the sale of Internal Improvement and Swamp lands and in which it still owns large tracts of such lands. It was the purpose of the federal government in donating such lands to the state to have the state so improve them as to make them fit for cultivation and for the building and supporting of homes upon them.

I favor: Agricultural and industrial instruction in all schools of the state and liberal state support for that purpose; the best possible protection against the recurrence of forest fires; the loaning of the trust funds of the state within the state so as to aid in its development; a one mill road and bridge tax and in order to make it available to the counties most in need of assistance I favor the repeal of the constitutional requirement that a county must tax its people two dollars to be expended on roads and bridges for every dollar that gets out of the "State Road and Bridge Fund."

I will support a reasonable appropriation for advertising the state's advantages to actual settlers. It is however my judgement that it would be a far better investment to spend a much larger amount for the betterment of the people now living in the state. If they can be made prosperous and contented the question of immigration to the state will take care of itself.

I believe in the conservation and development of our state and natural resources in everything that tends to the betterment of our people. I believe in progressive measures.

I am a firm believer in that all people should have a voice in their government and that a majority should rule, and for this reason believe in "county option" in the granting of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors.

I believe that it is my duty if elected, to vote your wishes on all questions and believing that your choice for United States Senator to be elected at the next session of the legislature, Moses E Clapp, I hereby promise if elected to cast my vote for his re-election.

If these policies and those for which I have stood in the past meet your approval, I solicit and shall appreciate your good will and support in this campaign.

Thanking you for a consideration of my candidacy, I am,

Yours very truly,
A. L. Hanson.

Last week the state grain inspection board abolished the velvet chaff grade of wheat and hereafter this wheat and kindred varieties of "bearded" wheats will be graded in the northern grades but not better than No. 2. There has developed some kicking among the Minneapolis millers over this ruling, but both chemical and baking tests are declared to justify this advance in grade. The difference between No. 2 northern and velvet chaff has been from 6 to 8 cents per bushel heretofore, and the raise in price will be a substantial one.

Is an old and a very true saying and in nothing does it apply with more force than in the matter of saving money. Everyone should save some part of his earnings, as it is not what one earns but what he saves that makes wealth. Start an account this month with.

Endorse Watts and Grindeland.

We, the undersigned, members of the Red Lake County Bar Association do hereby endorse and adopt the following resolution:

"Whereas, in the persons of Honorable William Watts and the Honorable Andrew Grindeland, the Fourteenth Judicial District of Minnesota is favored with Judges who have proven themselves to be able, honest, impartial and painstaking in the performance of the duties of their office.

Be it resolved, that it is the sense of the Red Lake County Bar Association that the Honorable William Watts and the Honorable Andrew Grindeland be and they hereby are endorsed by said association for re-election as Judge of the Fourteenth Judicial District at the coming general election, and that this association use all honest means to insure the selection of the Honorable William Watts and the Honorable Andrew Grindeland as Judge of the Fourteenth Judicial District at said election.

Be it resolved further, that it is the sense of this association that Judges should be selected regardless of party line, and we commend the action of the State Bar Association, recently made, in advocating a non-partisan judiciary and separate election of Judges of our Courts."

Special Rates.

Special rates on all railroads from stations in Minnesota have been made for all who will attend the Minnesota State Fair. This will be welcome news to the two hundred thousand visitors to the Twin Cities during the week of September 5th-10th, and will undoubtedly cause an attendance far in excess of any in past years. Every railroad leading into Minneapolis and St. Paul will charge one and one-half fare for the roundtrip, or three cents a mile. The action was taken at the last meeting of the Western Passenger Association, when the managers of the passenger traffic on all lines voted to make this special concession on account of the three state fairs, those of Minnesota Iowa and Wisconsin. No other State Fairs in the country are favored in this way, which is a pretty clear endorsement of the importance of the Minnesota State Fair. Not even has this special rate been granted to delegates who will attend the forthcoming Conservation Congress, although as the State Fair and Conservation Congress will make the Twin Cities the news center of the nation during the big week of September 5th, a Special reduction will probably be made so as to include every visitor to both of the great events.

Stock Will Be High in the Spring

Olaf Ramstad, one of the best posted men in this section of the state on the live stock market, predicts that next spring cattle and horses will bring the best prices in the history of this country. Mr. Ramstad is familiar with conditions in all parts of the Northwest and he says that there will be a big shortage next year. Farmers of Montana and North Dakota have in many instances been forced to sell off their stock this summer and that is the reason that the prices are so low at the present time. He believes that any farmer in this section who sells any stock this fall will greatly regret the fact next spring.

Good work horse for sale. Inquire at Langseth Mercantile Co.

A Fine Farm for Sale.

Call quick or you may be too late. Evenson & Hamre.

A Red Lake Falls Man's Views.

A farmer who resides in the northern part of the county was recently down to Red Lake Falls looking up his ditch taxes. While he considered the taxes a little high, he was well pleased to pay them as the benefit to his land is great and he made the remark that he was well pleased with the ditch. A bystander immediately broke into the conversation. He said that, "I—d—m Thief River Falls people are always kicking that all of the money is spent in the southern part of Red Lake county, but look at the number of ditches that the commissioners are building in the northern part of the county." The farmer was tempted to say something, but on second thought he just smiled and walked out.

BUILDINGS DESTROYED

Family Was Away at Time, but Considerable of the Property Saved.

While scouting for "sooners" Game Warden Munch discovered the farm house of Ed. C. Garceau ablaze Sunday afternoon in Polk Center township, Red Lake county, and driving at breakneck speed he got Grainbuyer Schmidsang of Wylie and together they fought flames for three hours, saving the granary and 10 wheat stacks, but the house, machine shed, barn, and pigpens burned. They saved a few things from the house, got all the stock from the barn, and most of the machinery from the shed.

The Garceau family were absent at church.

The house and pigpen were ablaze when Messrs. Munch and Schmidzang arrived. They at once saved what they could from the house, which was doomed, and then they got the stock in the barn out, and lastly pulled all the machinery from the machine shed, including a binder, hay rake, wagons, etc.

They tried hard to save the barn, managing to extinguish the fire severa times when the shingles caught, but there was a strawstack close on one side and the heat finally drove them off. The wind blew the heat away from the granary which gave them a chance to save that building.

The house was a good two story dwelling and the loss will be a severe one for Mr. Garceau. Mr. Munch had no idea how the fire originated. The chickens had sense enough to save themselves, but several pigs were cremated, though most of them were liberated and driven away.

Fires East of Here.

There has been considerable damage done by fires east of here in the Germantown, Erie and Highlanding districts, but in so far as we have been able to learn hay stacks have been all that have been burned up. The country is quite dry and people should be careful of starting fires.

Mrs. Matt Erickson Dead

Mrs. Matt Erickson, a former resident of this city, died Tuesday at Highlanding from a complaint she had been suffering from for years. The body was brought to Thief River Falls yesterday and the funeral services will be today. Besides her husband, the deceased leaves four small children.

Pennington County Pointers.

The articles appearing in the Pennington county papers with reference to county division have never directly nor indirectly attacked any county officer of Red Lake county except the members of the board of commissioners, the three on this board who are responsible for the intolerable conditions of affairs in this county.

The only county officers possessing administrative powers are the county board of commissioners. They inaugurate the financial policy of the county; determine the tax levies, the officers' salaries, the annual appropriations and the cost of improvements; they increase or decrease the taxes and can issue bonds for buildings; can organize or disorganize school districts and commissioners' districts; in short, have absolute control of the county finances and policies, and they alone. They have the power and opportunity to punish or reward or favor certain persons, sections and interests without actually making themselves amenable to the action of the law.

On the other hand, every other county officer, from county auditor to court commissioner, has his duties and powers specifically set forth by law. He is limited in the scope of his authority and can perform such acts as the law or, in some cases, the board of county commissioners order or say. Not one of this class can increase or decrease the taxes even if he desired. Consequently, Pennington has no quarrel with any county officer in Red Lake county except the above named commissioners and had this board not permitted itself to become the servant of certain selfish interests, which are using the county for vicious purposes, would have no contest with even them.

It makes little or no difference to Pennington county from what section any county officer may come, so long as he attends to his official business properly. The only case where in any county officer, aside from the commissioners, can make himself subject to public criticism is when he takes a partisan stand for one side in county division or when he weakly becomes the tool of the majority of the county board, and commits illegal offenses acting under their orders. This occurred in this county last year in connection with the transfer of certain ditching funds. It also happened in Beltrami county a year ago, when the governor removed from office county auditor Wilman for merely obeying his county board. It has also taken place in other upper Minnesota counties in late years.

The present county officers of Red Lake county, aside from the three board members mentioned above, are as efficient, if not the most competent the county ever favored with its confidence. The division proposition concerns itself not at all with the political interest or existence of any public official either in Pennington or reduced Red Lake, so long as that person gives his official business proper attention. When he lends himself to the men in biding and sells himself to the interests which are responsible for the heavy county taxes and are feathering their nests at the expense of the hardworking taxpayer he may expect something to happen.

The Gazette of Red Lake Falls in its issue of August 18th contains the following touching tribute to the working men of Pennington county and Thief River Falls;" The hundreds of shifting homeless men who work in the sawmill and on the railroads, who pay no taxes and care nothing for expense—The bosses will vote them like a flock of sheep—." For the benefit of the youthful editor of the Gazette, who by the way is a recent arrival in the county seat, it might be stated that nearly all the "shifting homeless men" in the Thief River Falls mills are farmers and sons of farmers of Pennington county. The railway men residing here are also honest, hardworking industrious citizens, who as well as the mill men have the respect and confidence of all good people. That these earnest farmers' sons and sturdy railroad men, all voters, will eternally sink into political oblivion next November their cruel slanderers goes without saying.

The mills and factories and railways of Thief River Falls have in the past proved a godsend to many a hardworking settler in Pennington county, if they have not to the grafters down the river. They have supplied him with remunerative employment to tide him over that time of stress which every beginner on a farm experiences, and they will continue to perform this same good act for all the years in the future, notwithstanding the claims of the Gazette that these industries will soon disappear. Nearly every settler in Pennington county has at some time earned an honest dollar by working in the Thief River mills or on the railways. This enabled him to begin payment on a farm or home and become a taxpayer in the Red Lake county and, by the same token, to help maintain a county administration which holds the inglorious position of having secured to Red Lake county the highest average rate of taxation of any county in the state, 45 mills on the dollar. Not a "shiftless homeless" man in Pennington county but honestly earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. He never dreams of working the county for his support, nor does his existence depend on his suspiciously intimate relations with county contracts, jobs or appropriations. He is a sturdy producer, while his slanderers have perfected a system which is sucking the life blood from the country finances and taxing the citizens beyond endurance. Did this vile thrust at the toilers of Pennington county represent only the views of the young man who runs the Gazette it would pass without notice, but this article mirrors the feelings of those whose bread and butter are secured indirectly from the illicit relations with county finances and at the expense of the taxpayers. It simply proves the claim that the only remedy for this terrible condition of high and increasing taxes is for this "flock of sheep" to vote next fall so that the goats in the other end of the county may forever be seperated in a county by themselves, secure from the "shiftless homeless" men, the dangerous voting men, of Pennington county.

The Red Lake Falls papers of last week contributes a lengthy article on the great expense of county division and the danger of increased taxes from this action. It preaches eloquently about economy and lower taxes and good administration.

The whole fabric fades into thin air when it is known that this very paper, the Gazette, which is now so eager for economy and the interests of the dear taxpayers, made a deal last January with the board of county commissioners for the county printing at twice the rates for which it might have been done. Last January the following bids were, among others, submitted by the three papers mentioned for county printing. For the delinquent tax list, the Red Lake Falls Gazette bid 8 cents per discription; the Thief River News, 7 cents; the Thief River Press, 6 cents. For the financial statement and the proceedings of the board of commissioners-and this constitutes the bulk of the county printing-the Gazette bid 60 cents for the first publiction per folio and for the second,—30 cents; the News bid 25 cents for the first publication and 15 for the second; the Press bid 29 cents and 11 cents.

John E. King, the owner of the Gazette and a master hand in state politics, found it an easy task to "persuade" the board of county commissioners to give his paper the contract even though it involved the board in a plainly illegal act of giving a contract to the highest bidder. As the county printing for 1910 will amount to $3000 approximately, the board pratically took $1,500 out of the pockets of the farmers and other taxpayers and handed it over to the owner of the county seat paper. State history does not record another similiar act wherein a county board dared to give a contract to the highest bidder, when responsible persons were bidding for the work at low figures.

In the face of the facts recited above, no intelligent voter can hereafter seriously consider the arguments of the down river paper when it shouts for economy and low taxes. Let its preaching of public economy first be turned into practise of the same. Let it cease blaspheming with one breath while it prays with the next and let its right hand quit grabbing $1,500 on a printing contract while its left pounds the pulpit for public propriety and economy.

This profound argument against county division appears in the columns of the last issue of the Red Lake Gazette: "All criminals come from Thief River Falls. There are six in jail there now, and several hundred more at Thief River who have not been caught." That ought to move the voter to give the down river gentlemen what they want.

In addressing the farmers of the proposed new county of Pennington in the last issue of the Red Lake Falls Gazette the following truth is uttered: "You of Pennington county will be starting where Red Lake did thirteen years ago."

Here is a little financial history which goes to show why every man, woman and child in Pennington is so eager to get back to conditions similer to those of Red Lake county thirteen years ago. In 1897 but $[illegible] was levied in Red Lake county for revenue purposes. This paid all county officers' salaries, court expenses, county printing, etc. In 1898, $[illegible] was levied for the same purpose and in 1899, $[illegible]. In 1909, $18,722.02 was levied for exactly the same expenses and no person can show wherein there are more county officers elected by the people now than then, nor more terms of court held, nor more regular meetings of the county board held. In 1908, the large sum of $18,[illegible] was levied for revenue purposes and in 1907, $16,316.04.

The total tax levy in the county for every purpose—revenue, poor, roads and bridges, bonds and interest on same and special—in 1897 amounted to only $11,523.37; in 1898, only $12,074.93; in 1899, $12,619.62. In later years, when the village of Red Lake Falls began to fall in to decay and the system began to get in its work, the tax levies were as follows; 1907, $10,821.81; in 1908, $19,212.83; in 1909, $69,924.39. And bear in mind, Mr. Taxpayer, that these levies do not include the ditch taxes, the state tax, township or school tax.

They are purely for the purposes first indicated. The figures are taken from the annual report of the state auditor and can be verified there. And further and still more strange, Red Lake county has not one solitary thing to show for this extravagant 200 percent increase of taxation for revenue purposes in thirteen years, save a floating and bonded indebtedness of some $106,000. This does not include the recent ditch tax either.

Who is responsible for this terrible condition and who has received and is now receiving the benefit of this extravagance and inefficiency and finance run riot? Possibly the Gazette, which is so familiar with county business, so familiar with those who help run the administrative affairs of poor tax ridden Red Lake, can inform the trembling, waiting public.

Oh, for the conditions of 1897, 1898, 1899. How ardently the Pennington county taxpayers sigh for the good old days of low taxes and the absence of the system, the ever present maladministration, inefficiency and high taxes and the men in hiding! How they pray for the return to the times of former years, which the Gazette seriously tells them are threatening them! Hail the time when "You of Pennington county will be starting where Red Lake started thirteen years ago." May no untoward event occur to abort the fulfillment of the hopeful prophecy of the wise young seer of the down river village, who greets the tax burdened citizen of Pennington county with the encouraging blast that "You of Pennington county will be starting where Red Lake started thirteen years ago."

Taken to Jail

John Lundell, eighteen years of age (looks more like twelve) son of a washwoman and until recently night clerk at the Hotel Evelyn, will spend the next thirty days in the county jail at Red Lake Falls. John desired to take a few days vacation as night clerk and got Charlie Nelson to take his place. While Nelson was asleep Monday morning, John entered his room and stole $4.85 from his pocket. He admitted his guilt and was given a sentence of 30 days by Judge Bishop.

HENS NOT STUPID.

Every automobilist knows that when his car approaches a hen instead of calmly stepping to the side of the road and safety in nine cases out of ten she runs along ahead in hysterical excitement, doing what she should have done in the first place only when completely exhausted and then only by accident apparently. Other domestic animals have the same annoying habit, and as it often causes their wholly needless death, the usual explanation of it is their stupidity. That is an unfair criticism, for neither birds nor animals are ever stupid—never are, that is, about meeting exigencies which their ancestors were in the habit of meeting.

It is the lesson of immemorial experience for all these creatures that from the pursuit of an enemy that cannot be fought there is safety if anywhere in straightaway flight at topmost speed. Motion in any other direction would give the pursuer a fatal advantage by enabling him to "cut corners" and cover a shorter distance than his selected prey. The hen's mistake is not in running along the road, but in assuming that the automobile wants to catch her and will do so if it can. That assumption is a perfectly natural one, and every living hen is the descendant of innumerable generations of hens that acted upon it exactly as she does.—New York Times.

GOLD LEAF.

Made Now Practically as It Was Made Nine Centuries Ago.

In an article on gold leaf in the Magazine of Commerce John Mastin says that just as the date of the discovery of gold is too remote even to be guessed at so is the origin of gold leaf lost in antiquity.

On some of the most ancient mummies discovered gold leaf has been used on the skin, tongue, teeth, etc., and in some instances on the coffins also. It also appears on tombs, monuments and the like, and, strange to say, though gilding with "thin sheets of hammered gold" and "skins of gold"—otherwise gold leaf—was known to be practiced at least in the eighth century B. C., the process of bringing the gold into these fine sheets or "skins" was, at any rate in the eleventh century A. D., substantially the same as that used today, no advance whatever having been made in the intervening nine centuries.

Further, on some of the Grecian pottery of the fifth century the gold leaf used is as thin as that used today, so that in results obtained also we have not advanced in the least, but still keep practically to the same average thickness as that used on the Egyptian coffins of the third century A. D. and most of the Greek vases of the fifth.

Brougham and Mulled Port.

Lord Brougham who as a member of the house of commons was a most abstemious man, upon his promotion to the peerage acquired less commendable habits. During his long and impassioned appeal to the lords to refrain from rejecting the reform bill of 1832 "five tumblers of mulled port, with a dash of brandy, were brought to him at intervals." When he came to his last sentence ("I warn you, I implore you—yea, on my bended knee I supplicate you—reject not this bill") he knelt on the woolsack, whence he slipped to the floor. It is recorded in the "Lives of the Lord Chancellors" that "he remained some time as if in prayer, but his friends, alarmed lest he should be suffering from the effects of mulled port, picked him up and placed him safely on the woolsack."

A Proud Moment.

"The proudest day of her life, this is," said the woman who watched the third floor bride go out dressed in her prettiest frock.

"How do you make that out?" said another woman enviously. "I thought last Thursday was her proudest day. She got married then."

"Ah, yes, but today she goes calling for the first time and leaves one of her husband's cards with her own. Any married woman who can remember back that far will tell you that the first time she distributed the calling cards of some man who belonged to her was the day she truly felt her importance."—New York Sun.

When the Barber Was a Wit.

In original literature the barber is a great figure, and Arabian tales are full of him. In Italy and Spain he was often the brightest man in town, and his shop was headquarters for wit and intrigue. Jasamin became famous as a poet in southern France and recited his verses with razor, scissors, brush and comical gesture as he dressed the hair of fine ladies and gentlemen in his shop. He had a great run, made money, hived fame, and Smiles made a book about him.

Hadn't Heard It.

"Money talks," asseverated Gildersleeve.

"I am not so sure of that," retorted Throckmorton. "It is not on speaking terms with me."—Detroit Free Press.

Of Course Not.

If a man really loves a woman of course he wouldn't marry her for the world if he were not quite sure he was the best person she could by any possibility marry.—Holmes.

Too Rusty.

Lady (after singing a few rusty notes)—Don't you think my voice should be brought out? Manager—No; pushed back.

ANIMALS THAT WEEP.

Dugong Tears Preserved by the Malays as a Love Charm.

While the act of laughing may be peculiar to man, the same is not true of weeping, which, if we are to accept the testimony of a French naturalist, is a manifestation of emotion that is met with in divers animals.

It is said that the creatures that weep most easily are the ruminants, with whom the act is so well known that it has given rise to trivial but accurate expression, "to weep like a calf." All hunters know that the stag weeps, and we are also told that the bear sheds tears when it comes to a consciousness of its last hour. The giraffe is not less sensitive and regards with tearful eyes the hunter who has wounded it. This animal also weeps through downright nostalgia. Dogs also are held to be lachrymose, and the same holds in the case of certain monkeys. Sparrman states the elephant sheds tears when wounded or when it perceives that it cannot escape.

Aquatic animals, too, it appears, are able to weep. Thus, many authorities agree, dolphins at the moment of death draw deep sighs and shed tears abundantly. A young female seal was observed to weep when teased by a sailor. St. Hilaire and Cuvier recount, on the authority of the Malays, that when a young dugong is captured the mother is sure to be taken also. The little ones then cry out and shed tears. These tears are collected with great care by the Malays and are preserved as a charm that is certain to render a lover's affection lasting.—New York Press.

A PROPHETIC JEWEL.

Peculiar Ring That Was Owned by Marquise du Barry.

Marquise du Barry, whose lovely head fell into the basket beneath the guillotine in expiation of her levity, extravagance and folly, had in her possession a stone of which the Paris jewelers were unable to tell the precise nature.

There appeared upon it below the surface and as if under water an outline of a picture containing human figures. Strange to relate, when first the gem was given to its afterward unfortunate possessor this outline was not clear, but after it had been some months in her possession it grew more vivid.

One day the negro servant boy, Lamor, who was afterward instrumental from revenge in the downfall of the Du Barry, declared, looking at the jewel, that he could decipher the figure of a woman with disheveled hair leaning before a scaffold and surrounded by a crowd, while beside her stood the executioner.

A strange but authenticated circumstance is that the negro servant boy precisely described the guillotine. Dr. Guillotine had not then invented his celebrated instrument of death, nor had the horrors of the revolution begun.

Snatching the jewel from the hand of the servant, Mme. du Barry examined it, saw the kneeling woman, the angry crowd, the death knife falling and, with a cry of agony, fell senseless to the floor.

Fly Traps of Spiders' Nests.

Spiders' nests are used in Mexico as fly traps. During the rainy season the villages are invaded by numbers of flies and other insects. To rid a house of these pests the natives hang the branch of a tree bearing a spider's nest to a nail in the ceiling. The surface of the nest enlarges concentrically after each capture of an insect, and it exercises an irresistible attraction on flies. When a spider's nest is opened it is found to be filled with insects. Experiments made with paper nests so manufactured as to be exact copies of the real nests show that flies will not enter them. Though very small and apparently insignificant, the inhabitant of the mosquero attacks insects far more important in size than the largest housefly. The wasp is one of its favorite victims, and the wasp always gets the worst of the struggle.—Harper's Weekly.

A Silk Producing Caterpillar.

In Assam, where the natives call it "eri," a silk producing caterpillar has been used for silk spinning for centuries, but, strange to say, its employment for the purpose has been restricted almost exclusively to that region. One of its advantages is that its cocoons are not sealed like those of the common silkworm. One end of the cocoon is closed only with converging loops of silk. This renders it unnecessary to kill the insect when its silk is used.

Rubbing It In.

"What made the boss glare so at that man who just went out?" said one waiter to another.

"When he paid his bill for a fifty cent dinner he asked if there was any place in the neighborhood, anyhow, where a fellow could go and get a decent meal for fifty cents."—New York Press.

The Remedy.

The Mistress—Bridget, I must object to your having a new beau every night. The Cook—Thin buy betther food! One'll niver come again wance he's tackled what I have t' serve him! —Cleveland Leader.

In the Sunken Submarine.

"It's too annoying that we should be stuck down here. I bought myself the most splendid tomb only last week."—Lustige Blatter.

All philosophy lies in two words, sustain and abstain.—Epictetus.

Literary Firsts and Seconds.

The youthful newspaper reporter who has visions of being a famous author is still wondering over the epigram made by a successful confrere when the latter noted his disappointment over the return of a manuscript.

"I thought sure," said the reporter, with a sigh, "that that confounded story would sell. It's good stuff, if I did write it, and I am certainly surprised that it came back."

The successful writer grinned and then placed his hand on the other man's shoulder.

"My dear boy," he said, somewhat grimly, "there are only two stages in the life of a writer. One is when he is surprised at getting his stories back and the second when he is surprised at not getting them back. You're in the first; I'm in the second. And there you are."

But the reporter is still wondering.—Philadelphia Times.

Escorted Her Anyway.

While Robert Browning and his son Barrett were living alone in Florence the son gave one afternoon an exhibition of his new paintings in the family drawing room. To Mr. Browning was assigned the task of meeting the guests. Late in the afternoon, when the room was well filled, there appeared at the drawing room door—a woman whose face was familiar. Yet Mr. Browning could not recall her name, and he judged from her appearance that she was not an invited guest.

There was embarrassment on both sides for a moment, and then the woman said eagerly: "Oh, please, Mr. Browning, I'm the cook. Mr. Barrett said as I was to come and see his pretty pictur's."

Whereupon Mr. Browning, offering his arm, showed her about the room with all the attention that he could have bestowed upon a reigning queen.

The Rat and the Bulbs.

According to the French naturalist De Parville, a gardener planted one afternoon 250 tulip bulbs on a terrace, and next morning he noticed that the ground had been disturbed and that the bulbs had all been taken away. He was confident that rats had done the work, and, taking a spade, he began to dig in the hope of discovering their nest. Soon he unearthed a large female rat, which he killed, and after digging a few more minutes he discovered an underground chamber lined with hay and leaves and connected by a corridor with two holes, which were evidently used as storehouses, for in them he found the 250 tulip bulbs. This was remarkable, but more remarkable was the fact that they were neatly arranged in two rows and that not one of them had been gnawed or otherwise injured.

The Rhodum Sidus.

An amusing story told by Hood describes how a country nurseryman made a large sum out of sales of a simple little flower which he sold under the name of the Rhodum sidus. This charming name proved quite an attraction to the ladies, and the flower became the rage of the season. It was one of those freaks of fashion for which there is no accounting. At length a botanist who found that the plant was not an uncommon weed requested to know where the nurseryman got the name from. He elicited the following reply: "I found this flower in the road beside us, so christened it the Rhodum sidus."

The Purist Lost a Sale.

"I've just happened to remember that my wife told me to get a tin pan that will go under the icebox. Have you any?"

"No, sir, but we have some that can be shoved under the icebox. Won't that do just as well?"

"I think not, young man. My wife is a bit particular about my getting the exact thing that she tells me to get. I presume I can find it at some other store. Good day, sir."—Chicago Tribune.

Horse Sense.

During a heavy downpour of rain an Irish farmer sent his boy to a distant field to bring home a horse. Some time elapsed, and the messenger returned without the horse.

Father—Didn't Oi send ye for the horse, ye gamoch? Is your head in your brogues?

Little Boy (drenched to the skin)—Sure, he was standin' in shelter as dry as ye loike. Bedad, he knows more than the two of us.

Too Empty.

Bonney (morning of the second day out)—Come, old boy, let's go out on deck. Breakfast won't be served for half an hour yet, and a brisk walk on an empty stomach will do you good.

Klabber (feebly trying to smile)—Take a walk on yours, if you like, chappie; Mine is—is entirely too empty.—Chicago Tribune.

In Art Circles.

"That picture is by an old master," the owner stated proudly.

"Umph, umph," commented the critical visitor. "What was he master of?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Advice.

She (after the embrace)—Oh, how dare you! You have offended me. What shall I do?

He—Er—why not "turn the other cheek"?—London Tatler.

What Did It Mean?

A notice board in a Scottish kirk once bore, it is said, the following amazing sentence: "This church is licensed for the solemnegation of marriages."

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL. XXVII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1910 NUMBER 36

FACTS ABOUT ROAD AND BRIDGE FUND

Facts and Figures That Tell Where Money Was Spent.

Attempts to deceive the voters by circulating false statements of the condition of the several funds of the county will only act as boomerangs to injure those who first place them in circulation. All figures submitted in the division articles appearing in the Thief River papers were furnished by State Auditor S. H. Iverson and by County Auditor Latendresse. No one questions the integrity of these two officials nor the correctness of their records. When a division article presents any financial statements it is incorrect only so far as the office records of the two named officials are incorrect. this is absolutely true, as inquiry at either office will prove.

Last week the anti-divisionists issued what they called a statement of the appropriations and distributions of the road and bridge fund by years since the year 1905. The article is introduced by a fierce denunciation of the liars, grafters and thieves of the north end, but particularly of the liars, then in the very next sentence it deliberately leaves out of this supposed official list several large sums of money paid to southern townships and more especially to Red Lake Falls village. This was done, of course to deceive the voters and is characteristic of all the arguments and methods of the south end workers.

The patience of the taxpayers is requested for the consideration of all the items in the road and bridge fund appropriations. They are given with their warrant numbers so they can all be indentified if necessary. The copy from which this is made is an exact copy of an official statement supplied by County Auditor Latandresse, with not a single item changed or omitted.

Those marked with a star are the ones which the anti-divisionists purposely and dishonestly left out.

From 1904 to June 21, 1910, the three tiers of towns in the north of Red Lake county have received only $12,113.22, while the two short tiers of towns in the south end have received the large sum o f$24,862.83. As a two mile strip along the south of almost the whole of the third tier of towns will not be in Pennington county, these figures ought to be changed at least $2000, as this strip having some rivers requires more for bridges. This would give Pennington county about $10,113.22 and reduced Red Lake $26,862.33 The assessment of 1910 will show that Pennington county now pays at least 60 per cent of Red Lake county taxes yet she has recived only 27 per cent of the road and bridge fund To date in 1910 she has received just 10 per cent of the appropriations made by the commissioners. The city of Red Lake Falls alone since 1904 had grabbed the large sum of $9023.40, while all of Pennington county except Thief River Falls has received in the same time only $7-1340 and even this should be reduced $2000 on account of the two mile strip mentioned above. Terrebonne Emardsville Louisville and Poplar River have each received more than some dozen of northern towns together. No law, custom, need or excuse can be offered to condone this deliberate and systematic filching of northern funds for the benefit of southern people. It is an outrageand nothing less. The figures speak for themselves.

The statement o flast week issued by the anti-divitionists, when compared with the above figures copied from the report of County Auditor Latandresse, shows the unreliability of their arguments and their determination to deceive and misrepresent Many of their amounts were too large or too small; some were in wrong years; they stated that Thief River Falls got $5000 in 1907, when she got only $450; and the towns of Norden, Rocksburry and others were similarly treated. When they mention the south end towns they reverse their tactics, again so as to deceive. They failed to give the figures for 1910, because the money all went to the south end. This could be continued without limit.

The farmers of the towns of Wyandotte, River Falls and Hickory will receive a shock when they discover that while south end towns have been grabbing thousands they have received nothing. They have regularly paid into the road and bridge fund for years but have been ignored when the commissioners have passed the pie around. As the Red Lake Falls Gazette brutally and heartlessly stated to the farmers in its issue of Aug. 25th.

"If your town received none (meaning the road and bridge appropriation) it was because you did not need it or did not ask for it". The voters of the three towns mentioned, as well as the voters of othre towns in the county, will fittingly rebuke this cold blooded treatment on the 8th of November next. They will show what their opinion of this kind of high finance and legal robbery is.

It is safe to say that at least $15,000has been contributed by Pennington county to build roads and gridges in the southern part of Red Lake county and this system will never cease to exist, for the lower part is seamed by streams and coules and their need ofbridges will ever remain The building of bridges cannot stop despite the claims of the anti-divitionists that they will. It is ridiculous to expect any people, here or any where else in the country, possessing the bulk of the wealth, the greater number of votes and brighter prospects for the future to remain subject to a minority, and a dangerous minority at that. Pennington is not a county of philanthropists but like an individual, is selfish and seeks to have the control of its own finances and the spending of its own money and that is about all there is to the present division fight.

This discussion of the road and bridge fund is lengthy, but was necessary in order to permit the thinking farmers to settle for themselves whether the claims of the articles appearing in the Thief River papers were correct, or whether the south end arguments were nearer the truth. That the intelligence of the taxpayers will assert itself next November and properly and for all time set its stamp of approvel on the move for the establishment of Pennington is not doubted for one moment.

Pennington county will simply stand for Pennington county citizens and for their right to manage their own affairs. Reduced Red Lake will also stand for the management of its own financial affairs in its own peculiar way, so both sides will be satisfied after November 8th next.

Assurances to the voters

The taxpayers of Pennington county will be assured of three important matters in connection with county division.

First: Pennington county will not have to pay for the newcounty court house now under construction at Red Lake Falls. According to the statutes, when a new county is organized from an old one, the following method is taken to divide the property: An inventory of all county property as well as of its debts, is taken. All county buildings and other property becomes the property exclusively of the old or reduced county. The value of the same is deducted from the total debt of the whole county and the differenceis divided between thetwo counties according to their assessed valuations. To be more specific, it might be stated that the total debt of Red Lake county is in the neighborhood of $100,000. This does not include the ditch bonds, which are local. The county court house when completed and other county property will foot up about $55,000. The latter sum is taken from the $100,000 leaving about $45,000 to divide between Pennington and reduced Red Lake according to their valuations. This compels Red Lake reduced to pay for the county court house alone. Of course, the south end workers will deny this, but the authority for this method of division is the very highest legal authority in the state of Minnesota and copies of this document describing division will soon appear for circulation. The original will be kept for inspection, but it will surely not lie where other legal papers have in Red Lake county and be liable to disappear at a critical time.

Second: The taxpayers will be presented by the city of Thief River Falls with the present city hall, which will be remodeled and put in shape for county house purposes at the expense of the city. This gift will be final and absolute. This building will make a better county house than the one which has answered for Red Lake for the last thirteen years. It will be sufficient for the next ten years or more. Copies of the transfer will also soon be ready for distribution and the orginal will be filed and recorded. No legal obstacle lies in the way of the transfer, despite the claims of the anti-divitionists. The best attorneys in the state give this opinion and their signatures will appear on the papers connected with the transfer.

Third: The farmers of Pennington county and citizens of Thief River Falls must be assured that a new county house for Pennington county will not be erected for a long term of years. The board of county commissioners of Pennington county will consist of Messrs. Peter Wold, Peter Hedeen, Ed A. Aubul, Olaf Larson and Daniel Shaw, four farmers and one city man, only. The farmers can and will perpetuate themselves and their successors in office for all time and thus control the board. On taking office they organize the county into commissioners districts, and only one of these will contain Thief River Falls and the others will contain farms and farmers. Each district will elect its own commissioner, so the farmers have now the opportunity of organizing a county run absoluely by the farmers themselves. The other county officers have nothing to say about taxation or building county houses or creating expenses: The board of commissioners have these powers exclusively, as is well seen in Red Lake county.

With these three matters settled in the way suggested, the future of Pennington will be bright and secure.

If it suffers from high taxes it will be the fault of the farmers themselves, for they are now granted the best chance possible to organize a county in the interests of the largest class of workers in it, the farmers. Pennington's assessed valuation will be twice that of Red Lake county when it was organized thirteen years ago. The debts assumed by Pennington and which have been created by the extravagance of the management of the old county, will not be as great in proportion as were the old Polk county debts taken over by Red Lake when it first started. The condition of reduced Red Lake after the first of next year can be imagined only, but the citizens of Pennington county are today interesting themselves solely in their own particular interests, as their votes next November will prove.

A Pioneer Dead.

Amund J. Monstad, one of the first settlers of this section, died at his home four miles west of Thief River Falls last Friday. The funeral services were held Sunday and the remains buried in Park Ridge cemetery, the Rev. L. J. Parbst officiating. The services were largely attended by old neighbors and friends.

The deceased was born in Romsdalen, Norway, on the 4th of October, 1852, and when a young man came to the United States. Besides a wife, he leaves ten children, all of whom are alive and attended the funeral.

Would Not Allow Grip to Be Opened.

In view of the fact that inspectors of the government have frequently boarded trains between this city and Detroit and opened and searched grips for liquor, the encounter between one of these government men and Former Congressman Frank M. Eddy on a Soo train north of Detroit, will be interesting.

Mr. Eddy was traveling north when an inspector came into the car and said to him: "Let me see the contents of your grip?" Mr. Eddy asked, "Why do you wish to see what is in it?"

"I understand you have liquor in it. I am a government inspector." "I don't care if you are," said Eddy, "I won't open that grip and you won't open it."

Then followed high words between the two until someone drew the inspector aside and told him who he was talking with. The inspector did not again molest Mr Eddy.

"I had a heavy cane with me and would have used it to defend my rights if it had proved necessary" said Mr. Eddy.

Taken to Asylum.

Frances Eisbrener, the twenty-two year old daughter of John Eisbrener, of the town of Hickory, was brought to this city last week, adjudged insane and on Saturday taken to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls. The girl is a complete nervous wreck and had to be carried on a cot. She does not have one rational moment.

Favors Division.

Editor "News": We all favor county division here. There're many reasons why we do, and I will state some of my views, if you will allow me space in your valued paper.

We thought when we first settled here in the Eleven Towns, that the county would be redistricted, so as to give us a fair representation on the county board, but it is an easy matter now, to see that we can get no representation, as the three Red Lake Falls commissioners dare not redistrict the county for they would then lose control, and the people would get a vote on the county seat.—Why doesn't the Gazette explain why these three men refuse to redistrict the county, instead of prating about somebody being a liar. Calling a man a liar won't save old Red Lake, but giving a satisfactory explanation of why these three commissioners refuse us representation on the county board, would maybe gain votes against division, although I would still vote for Pennington County, as I do not think it is right to take the county seat away from those people down at Red Lake Falls, as long as we have more than enough territory for two counties.

I used to live in Norman and also in Clay county before I came here, and I know that Norman county was giving much better satisfaction to the people, before the White Earth country was opened, than was the large Clay county, and after White Earth got opened we were mighty glad to let them go, as our county government expenses were increasing as the size of our county was increasing, and the dissatisfaction with county affairs was growing. This is very easy to understand when we consider the mileage and distance to be traveled both for the officials and the people. Say, farmers, how do you think you would like to run a farm 20 miles long, or so, if you were only allowed one set of buildings? Do you think it would pay to drive half a dozen miles morning, noon and night, during the busy seasons? Well, this would be exactly on the same principal as an excessively large county. There is no logic whatever in the argument for big counties. Let us get a nice little, economical county ourselves, and help the southern portion get one also, instead of wasting our time and money quarrelling like ill-bred children. Then you will see what good will there will be all around, and how economically both counties will be run. We will then be acquainted with our respective commissioners, and they will be familiar with our needs, but now their districts are so large their constituents are seldom personally acquainted with their commissioners, nor he familiar with large parts of his own district. How can you expect satisfactory county government under such conditions? Let us all be sure to go to election and vote for Pennington county.—By the way, let us not forget to go to the primary election and vote for O'Neil and Hanson as they are good men, and friends to this locality.

Very Sincerely yours for division,
HENRY KAUSHAGEN.

John Gleason Killed.

Word has been received in Crookston to the effect that John Gleason was killed at Oregon City, Oregon, by an interurban electric car.

John Gleason was at one time one of the most prominent men in Polk county and served three terms as county auditor, having been elected by the populists in 1894 and re-elected twice. After leaving the county auditor's office in 1900 he shortly afterwards went to St. Paul and served on the board of appeals of the state railway and warehouse commission, and later returned to Crookston, where he published the Crookston Press for a time before leaving for Oregon with his family, where he has since been located in the Hood River Valley on a fruit ranch.

Mr. Gleason resided at Fisher for many years prior to entering politics in Polk county. He was a veteran of the Civil War and was about 65 years old at the time of his death.

No Caps for the Enemy.

Sam H. Clark, a former Thief River Falls newspaper man, is having a lot of fun out at Minot, North Dakota, the home of C. A. Johnson, the republican candidate for governor. For some reason Samuel and C. A. are not on friendly terms, and Sam in his desire to spurn his distinguished fellow citizen, prints his name in lower case, thusly, "c. a. johnson". To show the enjoyment Sam is getting out of the campaign, we publish the following extract.

"We were told point blank yesterday that we must either quit telling the truth about the rottenness of local political conditions—quit hammering c. a. johnson, or get out of the newspaper business in Minot. We were told that several of the best advertisers would never give us another dollar's worth of business; we were told that the Reporter will be wiped off the map. A certain individual even tried to rent the building occupied by the Reporter. We have been threatened with personal violence, and the publication of certain bits of personal history which have marked our short though checkered career in life. Our closet is to be thrown open and the skeleton is to be rejuvinated and caused to stalk about in the market place. There isn't anything that wont be coming our way in a very short time.

"Huh, thats' nothing. If there's anything coming this way, we'll stop it.

We've stopped so allfired many bootjacks and other things lately, that we rather enjoy it."

SHADOW LEGENDS

Zulus Believe the Bodily Shade Is the Future Spirit.

TAKING AWAY ONE'S SHADOW.

Why Some Races Are Forbidden to Look Into a Dark Pool of Water. The Way Donald McKay Managed to Escape the Clutches of the Devil.

That mysterious counterpart of a human being which lengthens with the day and disappears with the sun, to reappear more faintly with the rising of the moon, which we call a shadow, has always struck the imagination of man. It has played a prominent part in primitive superstition and in later folklore. Shadows or shades was the classical name or figure for the spirits of the departed which still remains in use.

This idea is not confined to civilized races. Among the Zulus the spirit is the shade. Bishop Callaway, whose knowledge of Zulu beliefs and modes of thought was unrivaled, says that the Zulus connect the bodily shade with the future disembodied spirit. They believe that the shadow cast by the body will ultimately become the "itongo," or spirit, when the body dies, and they say that the long shadow shortens "as a man approaches his end and contracts into a very little thing. When they see the shadow of a man thus contracting, they know he will die. The long shadow goes away when a man is dead, and it is that which is meant when it is said, 'The shadow has departed.'" There is, however, a short shadow which remains with the body and is buried with it. The long shadow becomes an ancestral spirit.

Identification of the shadow in any mysterious or spiritual way with the person whose body casts it, naturally leads to respect for the strange second self. To tread on the shadow of a chief is an insult to the chief himself. In the Institutes of Manu, the ancient Hindu law giver, the law runs:

"Let him not intentionally pass over the shadow of sacred images, of a natural or spiritual father, of a king, of a Brahmin who keeps house, or of any reverend personage, nor of one who has just performed a sacrifice."

There are traces of the survival of these primitive ways of regarding a man's shadow in the English country feeling that it is unlucky to cross the path of a newly married man as he leaves the altar; and in another rural belief that it is unlucky to cross the path of horses ploughing when the sun is shining behind them.

Association between shadows and mirrored representations of the human form is obviously natural, so it is not surprising to find superstitions about the shadow mingled with widely scattered versions of the Narcissus legend. The story of the beautiful youth who became enamored of his own image as he saw it represented in the water, and languished thereafter till he died, has its origin in the belief that trouble follows from beholding the watery image.

"Let him not look at his own image in water; that is a settled rule," commands Manu, the Hindu law giver.

The reason for the prohibition is to be found in the beliefs of man in a primitive state of civilization. The Melanesians of the Pacific, says a learned observer, say: "There is a stream in Saddle island, or, rather, a pool in a stream, into which if any one looks he dies; the malignant spirit takes hold upon his life by means of his reflection in the water." Some such idea as this was probably the root of the Narcissus legend.

The Zulus explain why it is ill to look into the water of a pool by a story of a great beast in the water which can seize the shadow of a man and when his shadow is gone a man no longer wishes to turn back, but desires to enter the pool. He goes in, dies, and is eaten by the great beast which inhabits it. So, says Bishop Callaway, "men are forbidden to lean over and look into a dark pool, it being feared that their shadow should be taken away."

There are other ways in which a man may lose his shadow. There was a temple of Jupiter in Arcadia which if entered by those who were forbidden to do so, robbed them of their shadows.

In the north of Scotland there are some quaint legends of folk who lost this usual attendant. In Sutherland they tell more than one story of a wizard named Donald-Duival McKay. Donald went to a school in Italy where the black art was taught by the devil, who sat in the professor's chair, and at the end of each term claimed as his own the last scholar to depart. Breaking up at this academy was naturally a scramble, none wishing to be last.

On one occasion Donald was really the last, but just as the devil was about to seize him, the resourceful Donald pointed to his own shadow which fell behind him, saying, "Take thou the hindmost!" Accordingly, his shadow was seized, while he himself escaped, and after his return to Scotland was never seen to have a shadow!

A companion illustration of "deil tak the hin'most," from Aberdeenshire, is a story of a witch laired laird watching his reapers, whose shadow was seized by Satan, and who was ever after shadowless. In literature Chamisso's famous tale of "Peter Schlemihl" is a well known example of the stories of the shadowless.—New York American.

A CHINESE BANQUET.

Culinary Mysteries That Bewildered an Englishwoman.

One moment we were eating ducks eggs whose blackened, lime flavored whites indicated that their age was unimpeachable; the next we were grappling with sea weeds, macaroni and the slippery sharks' fins that eluded our clumsily manipulated sticks. Now we tackled—not without fear—unknown meats and vegetables cooked in sugar, fresh shrimps, mushrooms from Mongolia, young bamboo sprouts, pigeons' eggs and a hundred different foreign tasting messes. Then clean plates were given to us, and bowls of sickly pink sirup, sweet potato and Indian corn cakes of dusky hue were set before each one. These were only crevice fillers and concluded the first and lighter portion of the repast. Now came the real substantial meal, wherein every dish had an accompaniment of smaller ones, containing gravies, etc., in which to dip the morsel taken from the central bowl.

There was stewed duck cooked without salt, roast sucking pig, forcemeat balls and chicken; there were soups of birds' nest, of mushroom, of vegetables and of sea slugs. There was grilled fresh water fish, which, according to custom, was helped from the top side only, for the Chinese remembers his servant. And, finally, at the conclusion the inevitable small bowl of rice and rice water was set before each person.

After some three hours, with a feeling of thankfulness that all was over, pipes, cigarettes and tea were served, and it seemed to me that the delicious aroma which rose from the latter soothed our senses and almost dispelled the antipathy that had been growing on us for all things Chinese.—Mary Moore in London Express.

The Kind Needed.

"Dear me," said the first young woman, taking her initial lesson in golf, "what shall I do now? This ball is in a hole!"

"Well, let me see," said her companion, rapidly turning the leaves of a book of instructions. "I presume you will have to take a stick of the right shape to get it out."

"Oh, yes; of course," was the somewhat cynical reply. "Well, see if you can find one shaped like a dustpan and brush."—New York Tribune.

Kissing In Iceland.

Among old time laws against kissing those of Iceland appear to have been the most severe. Banishment was the penalty laid down for kissing another man's wife, either with or without her consent. The same punishment was enforced for kissing an unmarried woman against her will; if it could be proved that she had consented to be kissed the offender was still liable to a fine of a great quantity of cloth for each offense.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd., 1910.

A. L. Hanson.

For State Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

Albert Berg,
Spooner, Minnesota

Lindquist does not want to give any of the other fellows of the first district a chance to build as large a barn as he has.

Bemidji Socialists certainly are not bashful. They have a candidate for governor, state senator and representative. The sixty-first senatorial district is quite large, but Bemidji is not the whole of it. However, if other parts of the district had as many candidates as Bemidji, the other parties would not stand much of a chance.

The farmers of this section are going to have their fall work done early this year and will have lots of time to talk politics during the month of October. Owing to the county division fight, Red Lake county will cast a very large vote.

C. A. Lindquist has again filed as a candidate for county commissioner. Owing to peculiar conditions existing in that district it is possible that he may be elected, but he will have to remove out of Pennington county in order to serve.

Yesterday was the last day for filing as a candidate at the primaries. Except for the office of sheriff, there will be no exciting contests in this county at the primaries, but it will be different at the general election.

Reports from Polk County are to the effect that every voter in the county will be out on primary election day and there is a suspicion that some living in North Dakota across the river from East Grand Forks will become so interested that they will cross the river and vote.

TO FIGHT BIG DITCH

Farmers of Polk County Will Approve Those of Red Lake and Marshall Counties.

Don't Want to Have Land This Side of Pembina Trail Drained to the East.

One of the biggest ditch controversies that have arisen in this section is on over the construction of a proposed judicial ditch which starts in Southern Marshall county, east of the Thief river, cut a corner off Northwestern Red Lake county and then run practically due west through the northern townships in Polk county to the Red River. About 100 farmers in the Polk county township principally west of the St. Vincent line of the Great Northern, have banded together to fight any assessment for the ditch and prevent its construction altogether, on the ground that if constructed it will necessitate the cutting through the sand ridge known as the Pembina trail, the old ox cart route from St. Paul to Pembina, making it necessary to drain the swamp water east of the sand ridge clear through Polk county. The contention is that this will cause an overflow of the land during the flood waters in the spring, and wash great quantities of the sand over the farms overflowed, thus ruining some of the farms.

W. E. Rowe has been retained to fight the case for several of the townships and the town board are taking action to prevent the construction of the ditch. A hearing was held before Judge Grindeland last Saturday and the case adjourned. George A. Ralph, engineer of the state drainage board, has been appealed to by the opposition to the ditch and every means will be exhausted to prevent the construction of the proposed waterway which would cost an immense sum. It is further claimed that the natural drainage for the water in Southern Marshall and Northwestern Red Lake county, would be towards the Thief river, on the theory that it would be impracticable to cut through the several sand ridges which have heretofore acted as a barrier to prevent any of the swamp land water to the east, finding their way to the Red River direct, all the water having first found its way to Thief river and Red Lake river and thence to the Red river at Grand Forks.

Rural Carriers Now Notaries.

The creation of an army of 40,000 notaries public was authorized by the postoffice department in accordance with legislation enacted during the past session of congress. All carriers of the rural delivery mail service are now required by the department to execute vouchers for United States pensioners, residing on their routes, for which service they are to receive 25 cents for each voucher executed.

The establishment of the rural free delivery service resulted in the discontinuance of 23,550 fourth class postoffices, the postmasters of which have been authorized to execute pension vouchers. In order to afford assistance to the pensioners congress provided that the carriers of the free delivery service should do the work.

Be Careful of Fires

Next week the hunting season opens up and a large number from this city are expecting to go out hunting.

It is not going to be a very easy thing for hunters to find hunting ground this fall, as nearly every farmer is going to forbid persons from shooting upon their land. This action is taken by the farmers because it is so dry and they fear that many who hunt will be careless in throwing down lighted cigar stumps and start a fire that will cause an immense amount of damage. The country is so dry that the least spark will cause a fire and after it once gains headway it will be impossible to put it out.

It is a serious offense to cause a prarie fire to be started and hunters will do well to observe more than ordinary precaution.

"A Prince of Sweden."

After a hard day's work in the office, at the factory, behind the counter, or wherever it may be, what is more refreshing and restful than a hearty wholesome laugh. One forgets his or her worries. If you care for an evening of pure, clean and refined entertainment, you should not overlook seeing that funny good-natured Swede, Comedian Carl Olson as the "Prince of Sweden" at the Auditorium on September 21 1910.

The Prayer of the Horse.

There are so many humane societies established in North Dakota now that the members will undoubtedly see that the "Prayer of the Horse" is given wide circulation. It should be posted in every livery barn, public place and in every farm barn in the state. It reads as follows:

"To thee, my masters, I offer my prayer: Feed me, water and care for me, and when the day's work is done provide me, with a shelter, a clean dry bed and a stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort. Talk to me. Your voice often means as much to me as the reins. Pet me sometimes, that I may serve you more gladly and to love you. Do not jerk the reins and do not whip me when going up hill. Never strike, beat or kick me when I do not understand what you want, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I fail to do your bidding, see if something is not wrong with my harness or feet. Examine my teeth when I do not eat. I may have an ulcerated tooth, and that, you know is very painful. Do not tie my head in an unnatural position or take away my best defence against flies and mosquitoes by cutting off my tail.

"And finally, oh, my master, when my useful strength is gone, do not turn me out to starve or freeze or sell me to some cruel owner, to be slowly tortured and starved to death; but do thou, master, take my life in the kindest way, and your God will reward you here and hereafter. You will not consider me irreverent if I ask this in the name of Him who was born in a stable. Amen."—Fargo Forum.

EXHIBIT IS COMING

Anti-Tuberculosis Exhibit Coming to Thief River Falls in the Near Future.

Every Resident of This Section Should Not Fail to Be Here at That Time.

The Anti-Tuberculosis exhibition which is coming here in the near future under the auspices of the Minnesota State Board of Health is the plan being adopted all over the country for the purpose of enlightening the general public as to how to eradicate tuberculosis; to present the best known means of preventation and cure in a manner which can be easily understood by all.

Much valuable information may be gained from looking over the exhibition carefully. The exhibit consists of numerous photographs, statistical charts, mottoes, etc., which are displayed on the walls; also window tents, model rooms, etc. No specimens of diseased organs are shown—this is an anti-tuberculosis exhibition.

In connection with the regular program of local and outside speakers stereopticon lectures will be given, illustrated with several hundred slides, pointing out in a interesting and instructive manner much valuable information.

The opening meeting is planned especially for the students from the schools; the second afternoon's meeting will be in charge of the ladies. Each program will be different from the preceding ones so everyone should plan to attend as many as possible. It is hoped that the people of this place will support the movement. Being given by the State Board of Health all the meetings are free and the enterprise unselfish in every respect.

Some press comment from cities and villages where the exhibition has been held, follow:

Sleepy Eye Herald: "The Anti-Tuberculosis Exhibition was most interesting and instructive throughout. The local board of health is deserving of much praise for securing the exhibit for Sleepy Eye."

Fairmont Sentinel: "The health meetings were a great success."

Osakis Review: The meetings here were splendidly attended and showed that Osakis people are alive to the benefits of the great work the State of Minnesota has undertaken in their efforts to stamp out the Great White Plague."

Morris Tribune: "The Anti Tuberculosis Exhibition sent out by the State Board of Health has been most successful in exciting interest in the preventation and cure of tuberculosis."

50 BUSHELS—WANTS 100.

A reader of these notes living near Palmyra, Ill., writes stating that he has a five acre tract of bottom ground—a black sandy loam which never packs—which produces cornstalks big enough to yield 100 bushels per acre, but from which he is able to husk only fifty bushels. He further states that the tract has been cultivated about six years, is always well tended and kept free from weeds. He would like to know what this condition of things—low yield from apparently rich land—would indicate that the soil lacked. With several important points not stated in our friend's letter, it is a bit difficult to give an adequate diagnosis. However, there are two or three suggestions which may be helpful. In the first place it is well to remember that while we have quite a habit of associating richness of soil with a black color, there is not necessarily any connection whatever. In fact some of the richest soils known are red and green gray, the latter the volcanic ash of western states. Another point that it is well to take account of is that a sandy soil loses its fertilizing elements much sooner than do clay soils or these referred to. This brings us to the probable cause of our friend's tract failing to yield as much corn as he would like—namely, a lack of fertilizer. We would suggest that he do a little experimenting with this tract next season and would like him to report the results. Let him apply about eight tons of manure per acre to two acres with a manure spreader, which will insure even distribution; on an acre and a half apply the same amount of manure and about three tons of ground limestone per acre, which may be scattered with the manure, and on the remaining acre and a half he might apply the limestone alone. While our correspondent says nothing to indicate that this tract is sour, he says nothing which shows that it might not be. In the spring let him give these three tracts the same preparation, plant them with seed which will give an average of three and a half stalks per hill, and at husking time let him keep accurate count of the number of bushels which each produces. He will have conducted a very practical experiment, can tell definitely just what the soil most needs and will not only have instruction for himself, but for his neighbors, and for the readers of this department, if he will furnish a statement of acre yields for the three tracts. There are hosts of farmers all through the corn belt who ought to be carrying on just such experimental work as that outlined above. It is simple and the result would be increased yields and a larger bank account.

A DURABLE WHITEWASH.

With need arising for whitewash at all times of year, some of our readers may be glad to have published again the recipe for making whitewash recommended by the department of agriculture at Washington. It is as follows: Take one-half bushel unslacked lime and slack, starting with warm water, and cover during process to keep in the steam. Strain liquid through fine sieve or strainer; add peck of salt previously well dissolved in water, also three pounds of rice boiled to a thin paste. Stir in boiling hot one pound Spanish whiting and one pound of glue which has been previously dissolved over a slow fire. Then add five gallons of hot water to the mixture, stir well and let stand for a few days covered so as to keep out the dirt. The whitewash is best applied with a small brush and should be put on hot. One pint should be sufficient to cover a square yard of surface. There is no whitewash which excels this for indoor or outdoor use. It may be colored whatever shade one likes and will retain its brilliancy for years.

A NEW DEAL.

When a scheming manufacturer could take a quart of molasses and fifty gallons of rainwater and make a barrel of "pure cider vinegar" there was mighty little incentive for the orchard owner to go through the laborious process of pressing the juice from his cull apples. But this state of affairs has changed. Uncle Sam has got after food adulterators with a big stick, and now nothing but the fermented juice of apples can be labeled "pure cider vinegar." The better condition should give a decided impetus to the manufacture of pure vinegar, while it should also greatly stimulate the manufacture of pure jellies and other preserves as the nasty coal tar concoctions which used to be palmed off on an unsuspecting public no longer go. The pure food law has put all of this trash out of the running, and both consumers and manufacturers of legitimate goods will be the better for it.

Every stack of straw set afire to prevent its cumbering the ground means a loss of a good deal of humus, an element present in none too large quantities in the most fertile sections of the country and greatly deficient in sections where a grain selling type of farming is largely in vogue.

Wild grape vines, or the Virginia creepers, serve a practical and aesthetic purpose when their handsome green or autumn colors cover the naked uncouthness of outbuilding or dead tree, but they are quite out of place when they throttle live shade or fruit trees and deprive them of needed sunshine, moisture and plant food.

We have made the observation before, but it is nevertheless worth repeating, that on every farm where there are a hayfork and a manure spreader at the barn there should be lincoleum on the floor in the kitchen and a drainage system for the kitchen sink which will do away with the necessity of emptying pails.

In a case we read of the other day a bunch of lambs were turned into a field of rape from which the small grain had just been cut, and three were shipped to market without having received any other feed. They had made a good gain, sold at a high price and gave the owner a handsome profit for the rape and weeds on which they had foraged.

Carbonic acid gas or carbon dioxide is the chief chemical agency which is operative in the crumbling of rock formations and the loosening of compact masses of earth. It is this same agency, by the way, which causes the crumbling and disintegration of poorly made cement tile within a comparatively short time after they have been put in the ground.

What the co-operative gathered cream butter factories have to contend with in their effort to make a strictly high grade product is illustrated in the remark of a patron of one of them who, when he was buying a milk pail the other day, wanted one with a coarse strainer so that he wouldn't have to wash it so often to keep it in running order.

We have a more adequate appreciation of the age of the old world geologically when we have the opinion of scientists that for water to wear a channel in solid limestone to a depth of forty inches would require 728,000 years. There are erosions worn by water and glacial action which are a mile deep and a mile or miles wide, the time required to effect which being well nigh incomprehensible.

In sections where winter weather is not so severe as to prevent the growth of cowpeas and cow horn turnips there could hardly be a better combination for loosening and adding humus to stiff, resistant and depleted soils. If the turnips grow the way they should they will bore the ground full of deep holes, while the plowing under of both turnips and legume in the spring will give a splendid supply of green manure.

Last spring there were two or three pear trees in the writer's orchard which looked decidedly sick. A nurseryman who saw them thought the trouble might be blight. A fruit inspector at first diagnosed the case as crown gall. But a digging up of one of the trees showed a perfectly clean and healthy condition of the root wood and bark, but that the lower roots were virtually standing in the water, which came within a foot and a half of the surface at that point. None of the tree fruits flourishes with wet feet.

Much can be done in the way of achieving a larger success in an agricultural way if the individual tiller of the soil will exercise his own good horse sense and judgment unaided. But he can do just as well and a whole lot better if he takes two or three up to date agricultural journals, which will keep him in touch with the best thought and achievement along the lines in which he is most interested. Many a fellow has turned his farming operations from failure or mediocrity to success simply by getting hold of a paper which gave him new ideas and set him to thinking.

There is many a boy who for one reason or another is not making satisfactory progress in school, but nevertheless is compelled to attend by his parents, who would be vastly better off, as would also the other pupils of the school, if he were taken out and put at some job which would keep his hands busy, occupy his mind and furnish an outlet for a whole lot of pent-up physical energy. As a general rule, there is no time that a boy can put in that will give larger or more satisfactory returns than that spent in school. Occasionally, however, the time thus spent is worse than wasted, breeding idleness, inattention and disrespect for constituted authority.

The department of soils of the Wisconsin Agricultural college has undertaken the job of restoring the fertility of a wornout sandy farm near Sparta. The tract in question has been cropped for the past forty years until it is sour and thin and unresponsive. Lime has been applied for correction of the acidity of the soil at the rate of from 1,000 to 2,000 pounds per acre, while, for the purpose of increasing the humus and nitrogen, clover, cowpeas, soy beans and the lupines have been grown. With the last named crop as high as two or three tons of green stuff per acre have been produced for green manure, where a short time before the soil grew nothing but pigeon grass and sand burs.

THE DOLLAR MEASURE.

In an era in which so many folks seem to be dollar daft and money crazy it is well to take stock now and then and reflect how pitifully inadequate is this quite universal standard to express the real value and worth of people and their activities and services to their fellows. Many a man starts out in life with this as the only standard to go by and makes a sorry mess of it before he has lived out his allotted years. Too often following the demise of such a man the question is asked whether or not he was respectable, honest and decent. He was a kind neighbor and a considerate man in the home, but how much money did he leave (for heirs to squabble over)? There are tens of thousands of men not known perhaps outside their own families and a limited circle of friends who couldn't negotiate the purchase of a $250 town lot, yet who in all the essentials of character and good citizenship far outrank many others who could display a good fat bank roll and who drive fast steeds or ride in automobiles. They live cheerful, happy, helpful lives, and when the time comes to go they are remembered for the kind of life they lived and the services they rendered to those who were thrown in contact with them. When the fellow who has taken the dollar measure for his sole motive for actions departs he may be the occasion of a more elaborate funeral, but public estimate of his value as a man and citizen is already registered if in acquiring his wad he has compromised his honor, preyed upon the helpless and unfortunate or sacrificed the respect of his relatives and friends. Not what one has, but what he is and does, should be taken into account far oftener than is the case. The boy on the threshold of life and soon to take up its serious problems will achieve a far greater measure of contentment and happiness for himself and his fellows if he keeps the above distinction somewhat clearly view.

BETTER METHODS PAY.

The North Dakota Agricultural college has been conducting experiments for several years past at twenty-four different substations in the state for the purpose of determining the value of crop rotation and more careful preparation and handling of the soil as a means of increasing the yield of wheat. It has been found possible to increase the average yield of wheat from 13.7 bushels to 26.47 bushels per acre, and it is the opinion of those in charge of the experimental work that with the farmers of the state following approved methods in as large a measure as would be feasible under average conditions the yield of wheat for the whole state might be raised to an average of twenty-two bushels per acre. The five year rotation which has been followed in the tests consists of clover or field peas the first year, cut for hay; corn the second year, wheat for the next two years and for the fifth year oats. In the drier sections the ground is plowed six inches deep, harrowed at once and also after each rain. A press drill is used for seeding, and when the grain is about three inches high the soil is stirred with a weeder.

A BAD BREAK.

That state experiment station officials now and then get their wires crossed has been shown lately in some disastrous results which have followed the use of commercial lime sulphur as a summer spray for apple scab in the Hood river valley. Used at a strength which was considered safe by the directors of the Oregon Agricultural college, a serious burning of the leaves and damaging of the fruit have nevertheless resulted, and so serious is this damage that a quantity of the fruit of this noted section will be rendered second class or worse. In the adoption of a new spray, as in the taking up of some other new things, changed conditions under which the work is carried on may greatly vitiate or render entirely useless what seem to be excellent results achieved in other places.

THE CORN ROOT WORM.

Not in years has the damage from the corn root worm been so great as it is proving to be during the present season. In the state of Iowa alone it is estimated that the damage from this one source will aggregate close to $20,000,000. Fields that early in the summer gave promise of yielding sixty bushels per acre will be thought to do pretty well if they husk out fifteen. This pest is the legitimate result of a continuous corn after corn system of cropping and seems to be nature's protest at a very prevalent agricultural abuse. The only effective remedy is a system of crop rotation in which some legume and the small grains shall have a prominent place, as the pest subsides when there are no more corn roots in which it may breed and feed.

THE PUBLIC LANDS.

It is a commentary both on the character of some of the lands which the federal government has disposed of and the various methods by which they have been distributed that of the first 8,000 winners in the land drawing of the Cheyenne River and Standing Rock reservations, in North and South Dakota, less than 2,000 have completed their filings to date, while of the 12,000 who have the right to file after Sept. 2 it is hardly likely that a larger percentage will complete their contracts. It would seem high time for devising some less expensive and more effective way of disposing of the public domain which does not have in as large a degree the earmarks of the shell game and gold brick swindle.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

Wellington's Cool Interview With a Murderous Maniac.

One day as the Duke of Wellington sat writing at his library table quite alone his door was suddenly opened without a knock or announcement of any sort, and in stalked a gaunt man, who stood before the commander in chief with his hat on and a savage expression of countenance.

The duke was of course a little annoyed at such an unceremonious interruption, and, looking up, he asked, "Who are you?" "I am Dionysius," was the singular answer. "Well, what do you want?" "Your life." "My life?" "Yes; I am sent to kill you." "Very odd," said the duke, sitting back and calmly gazing at the intruder. "Not at all, for I am Dionysius," said the stranger, "and I must put you to death." "Are you obliged to perform this duty today?" asked the commander in chief. "I am very busy just now and have a large number of letters to write. It would be very inconvenient today." The visitor looked hard during a moment's pause. "Call again," continued the duke, "or write and make an appointment." "You'll be ready?" "Without fail," was the reply.

The maniac, awed doubtless by the stern old soldier, backed out of the room without further words and half an hour later was safe in bedlam.—London Graphic.

FULL OF GRATITUDE.

But the Little One Had a Queer Way of Expressing It.

Mr. Brown's business kept him so occupied during the daytime that he had little opportunity to enjoy the society of his own children. When some national holiday gave him a day of leisure his young son was usually his chosen companion. One day, however, Mr. Brown, reproached by the wistful eyes of his seven-year-old daughter, reversed the order of things and invited the little girl to go with him for a long walk.

She was a shy, silent, small person, and during the two hours' stroll not a single word could Mr. Brown induce the little maid to speak, but her shining eyes attested that she appreciated his efforts to amuse her—indeed, she fairly glowed with suppressed happiness.

Just before they reached home, however, the child managed, but only after a tremendous struggle with her inherent timidity, to find words to express her gratitude.

"Papa, what flower do you like best?" she asked.

"Why, I don't know, my dear—sunflowers, I guess."

"Then," cried the little girl, beaming with gratitude, "that's what I'll plant on your grave!"—Exchange.

Tennyson's Tactlessness.

Several stories are told of Tennyson's thoughtless speeches. "What fish is this?" he once asked his hostess where he was dining. "Whiting," she replied. "The meanest fish there is," he remarked, quite unconscious that he could have wounded any one's feelings.

Yet his kindness of heart was such that when his partridge was afterward given him almost raw he ate steadily through it for fear his hostess might be vexed.

On one occasion Tennyson was very rude to Mrs. Brotherton, a neighbor at Freshwater. The next day he came to her house with a great cabbage under each arm.

"I heard you like these, so I brought them," he said genially. It was his idea of a peace offering.

Women's Time Schedules.

Few women speak of a train starting slightly off the even hour, as the 3:02 train, for example, or the 3:12. "Three" will do. It bothers a man a heap to go hunting for a 3 o'clock train by feminine directions when it is a 3:12 train. For some women "3" will do for the 2:54 train; it's near enough. Then the man following feminine directions, unless he is on his guard against these pitfalls, is lost. Probably if it weren't for his business training, which teaches a man that 3:02 is not 3, not 3:01, not 3:01½, not 3:01¾, but 3:02, he'd be better natured about women's time schedules.—Boston Post.

The Soft Answer.

Two men were occupying a double seat in a crowded car. One of them was a long distance whistler and the other was evidently annoyed. "You don't seem to like my whistling?" said the noisy one after a five minute continuous performance. "No, I don't," was the frank reply. "Well," continued the other, "maybe you think you are man enough to stop it?" "No, I don't think I am," rejoined the other, "but I hope you are." And the whistling was discontinued.—Argonaut.

Warmth Not Wanted.

"This would be a pleasanter world if people put more warmth—genuine warmth—in their letters," said the man of sentiment.

"I don't agree with you," replied his worried friend, "there was a warmth about some of the business letters I got this morning that I didn't at all like."

FORCE OF GRAVITY.

How It Would Affect Man's Weight on the Celestial Bodies.

If the planet Mars be really inhabited the people who live there must be an exceedingly agile race. The average weight of a man is about 140 pounds, but the force of gravity on Mars is so much less than on the earth that the 140 pound man would weigh only fifty-three pounds if he were transported thither. With such light weight, and still retaining the same strength, an individual would be able to run with the speed of an express train, go skipping over ten foot walls and do various other extraordinary things. On the moon a man would be even lighter.

But on the sun our 140 pounder would have his troubles. Instead of being an airy individual he would weigh in the neighborhood of a ton and three-quarters. He would probably have the greatest difficulty in raising his hand, for that member would weigh about 300 pounds.

According to scientific computation, a man who on earth weighs 140 pounds would on the other celestial bodies weigh as follows:

The moon, 23 pounds; Mars, 53 pounds; Venus, 114 pounds; Mercury, 110 pounds; Neptune, 123 pounds; Uranus, 127 pounds; Saturn, 165 pounds; Jupiter, 371 pounds, and the sun, 3,871 pounds.—Chicago Tribune.

A SAD STORY.

The Misfortune That Came With a Terrible Tumble.

Fowling is now very little practiced in the Shetland islands, although many eggs are secured annually. Many thrilling stories of fowling adventure are told by the Shetlanders. A man who had undertaken to climb a certain steep cliff was neither very experienced nor very brave, although he boasted of being both. He pushed upward, however, briskly without looking behind until he had got up about 150 feet, when he stopped to breathe. The pause was fatal to his self possession, and he called out in tones of terror, "Men, men, I am going—I am going." But he still held on for a little, and it was not till he had shrieked many times "I am going" that he did fall headlong.

His comrades, having thus been warned, moved the boat out of the way so that the poor fellow came sheer down into the deep water. Mighty was the plunge, but at length he rose to the surface, when of course he was instantly caught hold of and dragged into the boat. After many gasps and much spluttering of sea water from his mouth his only remark was: "Eh, men, this is a sad story. I have lost my snuffbox."—"Sketches and Tales of Shetland."

The Last Ditch.

When William, prince of Orange, afterward William III. of England, was elected stadtholder of the United Netherlands in 1672 and found himself in the midst of war with England and France he was asked by the Duke of Buckingham whether he did not see ruin impending over his country.

"Nay," he answered. "There is one certain means by which I can be sure enough to see my country's ruin. I will die in the last ditch." And, rejecting all terms of peace, he checked the invasion of France by opening sluices and flooding every tract of land, drove them from Holland in 1674 and made honorable terms with England and finally after varying effort brought the war to a successful close by a treaty with France in 1678.

Taken at His Word.

The doctor was telling how he came to lose one of his best paying patients. The man was a hypochondriac, who was always imagining that something terrible was about to happen to him, and the doctor, who was a great jollier, was kept busy trying to reason him out of his morbid condition.

"You have worried yourself until you are bordering on a nervous collapse," said the doctor to him one day. "You shouldn't think about your symptoms all the time, but just attend to your affairs as if there was nothing the matter with you."

"All right, doctor," replied the patient. "I'll do as you say. You needn't come to see me any more."—New York Times.

And He Wasn't.

"Victoria," said her husband, "you will not mind it, I presume, if I should happen to be detained downtown late this evening?"

"I shall not mind it," austerely answered Mrs. Vick-Senn, "because you will not be detained downtown late this evening or any other evening."—Chicago Tribune.

MODEST VICTOR HUGO.

The Great Master Thought No Honor Too Great For Himself.

It was Theophile Gautier who said something to the effect that if he thought that one line of the great master, Victor Hugo, was bad he would not acknowledge it to himself if he were alone at the bottom of a dark well. On another occasion Gautier spoke of Victor Hugo as "a new Moses fresh from Sinai, charged to deliver the tablets of the law." Decidedly, Victor Hugo was a man who knew how to cast a spell upon those about him. For example, look at the following picture drawn in the "Souvenir sur Turgenieff:"

"One evening Hugo's admirers assembled in his drawing room, were competing with one another in the eulogy of his genius, and the idea was thrown out, that the street in which he lived ought to bear his name. Some one suggested that the street was too small to be worthy of so great a poet, and the honor of bearing his name ought to be assigned to some more important thoroughfare. Then they proceeded to enumerate the most popular quarters of Paris, in an ascending scale, until one man exclaimed with enthusiasm that it would be an honor for the city of Paris itself to be renamed after the man of genius. Hugo, leaning against the mantelpiece, listened complacently to these flatterers outbidding each other. Then, with an air of one engaged in deep thought, he turned to a young man and said to him in his grand style, 'Even that will come, my friends—even that will come.'"—Bookman.

THE OVARINAS.

Picturesque Barefooted Fish Hawkers of Portugal.

The ovarinas are perhaps the most interesting people in Portugal. They are probably the lineal descendants of the original inhabitants of the land, and now come from a small place called Murtosa (Estarreja), not far from Oporto. As the termination indicates, the ovarinas are the women of these people.

Both old and young, for even young children are thus employed, are exceedingly active and energetic. They go about barefoot, wearing a peculiar costume, and carrying huge baskets of a peculiar shape on their heads. They travel many miles a day and penetrate into every corner of the city, crying their wares in a loud, unmusical shout. They mount even to the sixth floors and bargain with buyers. They go barefoot not because of their poverty, many of them possessing expensive gold ornaments, but because they can thus more easily cover the many miles they run during the day. Attempts have been made to do away with this method of selling fish, but they have all failed. The customers like to deal with these fish girls and can purchase from them very small amounts.

Fish is not purchased by weight, but by the fish or part of fish. The price averages 12 to 15 cents per pound. There are not less than 2,000 ovarinas engaged in selling fish in Lisbon.—Consular Report.

When He Didn't Stutter.

A confirmed stutterer went into a restaurant and met a few casual acquaintances, who at once commenced chaffing him most unmercifully respecting the impediment in his speech. At last one of them, a pert little fellow who had been making himself rather conspicuous by his remarks, said, "Well, old man, I'll bet suppers round you can't order them without stammering." "D-d-d-done," says Brown, and, to the astonishment of the company and the discomfort of his challenger (all of whom were unaware of his being, as is often the case with stutterers, a first class singer), he beckoned the waiter and sang the order without the slightest hitch, then, turning round to his tormentor, said, "N-n-n-now, y-y-y-you c-c-c-can p-p-p-pay."—Argonaut.

The Start of an Author.

Soon after "Treasure Island" had appeared and attracted public attention to Robert Louis Stevenson, two gentlemen were traveling up to London from Norfolk. One of them was reading "Treasure Island." Presently, having finished the book, he dropped it into his traveling bag, remarking: "Well, I think I could myself write a better child's story than that." The other, who, by the way, was his brother, urged him to try. Six weeks afterward the former handed to the latter a complete tale in manuscript. It was "King Solomon's Mines," the first novel that made a reputation for Mr. Rider Haggard.

The Phrenological Test.

A distinguished phrenologist while dining at a hotel stated at the table that he had formed an opinion of the character of each one present. An Irishman said that he would propound a question and that if it was truthfully answered he would forever believe in phrenology. The phrenologist said he was satisfied and told him to proceed. "Thin," said the Irishman, "will yez be afther tellin' me am I married or single?"—London Telegraph.

Says a Stockholm correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal: "It was 100 years ago Aug. 22 since Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte, the son of an impecunious lawyer in the little town of Pau, France, was chosen crown prince of Sweden, to become successor of Charles XIII., who had no children. The important historical event, which would have been celebrated on the actual day of the anniversary had it not been for the death of King Edward VII., which involved the observance of the customary period of mourning. Extensive preparations for the celebration, however, have been made and the jubilee will be observed in the near future. The life history of Bernadotte, the founder of the reigning dynasty of Sweden, is unusually brilliant and interesting. Bernadotte was born in Pau, France, on Jan. 26, 1764. His father was a poor lawyer and wanted his son to follow the law. But the profession held little attraction for the ambitious and dashing youth. He decided to become a soldier and in 1780 enlisted in the royal marines. When the French revolution broke out Bernadotte joined the revolutionists and became a power in their councils. He was one of the soldiers who assisted at the execution of Louis. With the restoration of order in France came Napoleon, who quickly recognized the brilliant talents of Bernadotte. The young soldier advanced rapidly and in 1793 he became a general of brigade. He developed a gift for diplomacy and was sent as ambassador to the court of Vienna, where he distinguished himself by his ability. When Bonaparte went to Egypt Bernadotte was appointed minister of war. He reorganized the whole French army and paved the way for the conquest of Holland. He also distinguished himself in the battle of Austerlitz. Napoleon, although jealous of his brilliant marshal, rewarded him with vast estates and made him Prince of Ponte Corvo. Bernadotte had so distinguished himself in Northern France and had shown himself a man of such wisdom and strength of character that the attention of Sweden was attracted to him when it became necessary to elect a successor to the throne. Napoleon hesitated for some time before giving his consent to the acceptance by his marshal of the high honor offered him. But Bernadotte was determined to accept and Napoleon finally gave in. Bernadotte went at once to Sweden and for eight years was associated with Charles XIII. in all affairs of the government. He helped to unite Sweden and Norway under one crown and in 1813 joined the grand alliance against Napoleon. It was the Swedish contingent which virtually decided the battle against the French at Leipzig. Bernadotte proved himself a great benefactor to Sweden. He built roads, encouraged industry and brought the country to a fine state of prosperity. He was never popular, for he never learned to speak the Swedish language, but the people appreciated his merits just the same and remained loyal to him after he succeeded to the throne on Feb. 5, 1818.

Five members of Captain Mikkelsen's ill fated crew have reached Aalesund. Says a recent Christiania dispatch: "Five members of Captain Mikkelsen's expedition, which was wrecked during the winter on the coast of East Greenland, arrived a few days ago at Aalesund, Norway, on a small motor boat. The Mikkelsen expedition left Copenhagen June 22, 1909, in the Danish Arctic ship Alabama to search for the bodies of the Erichsen Greenland expedition, two of whose members perished in November, 1907, while trying to return from the north coast of Greenland. The returning explorers report that Captain Mikkelsen and the engineer of the Alabama proceeded to North Greenland after the vessel was wrecked. The body of one of Erichsen's companions was found on the ice, but it is supposed Erichsen's body was carried out to sea by one of the ice floes.

The Tromsoposten relates that the Swedish vaudeville singer, Hjalmar Svedlund, while on board the steamer Midnattsolen during its recent trip to Finnmarken, was discovered in the act of robbing the strong box of the vessel, in which there were deposited several thousand crowns. He had secured a file and with this he was in the act of breaking the box open when he heard a noise and sneaked away from the room. One of the ship's crew, who had discovered Svedlund coming out of the office, went in to see what he had been up to. He found the box lying on the floor and a broken file, lying alongside of it. Svedlund was immediately taken in charge by one of the ship's officers and in the beginning he denied that he had been in the ship's office at all. After a while, however, he confessed and stated that he had intended to take the money contained in the box.

From Christiania comes the report that a representative of the firm of N. A. Andresen & Co. was robbed of a sum of money amounting to 11,400 crowns at the offices of the Kreditbank a few days ago. The person who carried the money is considered absolutely trustworthy and reliable and claims that when he put aside the purse containing the money, while a record of the amount taken out was being recorded by the bookkeeper, some person was on hand to nab it and make away with it. The theft was committed when the person who carried the money had temporarily placed it on one of the writing tables to go out and send a couple of telegrams.

It was certainly a unique party that was held in Bergen the other day, when the directors of the public baths, garbed in their bathing suits, received about fifty of their friends in similar costumes at the Bergen public baths. After the bath hosts and guests were invited to a lunch at Soldiers Bridge, in which all participated while still wearing their bathing suits. Levity broke loose and one jolly speech followed another and the affair was written up in all the daily papers and reported as one of the jolliest and most pleasant affairs that has been held in good old Bergen for many a day.

POLITICAL NEWS.

President Taft's keynote "speech" for the congressional campaign is contained in a letter to Representative McKinley of Illinois, chairman of the Republican congressional committee. By the contents of the letter the president shows that he will favor further revision of the tariff. While he is still convinced that the Payne-Aldrich law is the best tariff the country has had up to this time he has at least reached the conclusion that there is decided room for improvement.

In discussing the New York political situation former President Roosevelt said: "I am very much pleased with Mr. Taft's statement. It makes the situation perfectly clear. If Nassau county wishes me to go to the state convention I shall go. I regard the issue as clear cut, and, as far as I am concerned, there will be absolutely no compromise."

Theodore Roosevelt wound up the first day of his pilgrimage by placing himself directly in opposition to Vice President Sherman. MUST SERVE HIS SENTENCE

Minnesota Supreme Court Denies Application of Banker.

The state supreme court has denied the application of Frank W. Waterman, president of the Ramsey County State bank of St. Paul, for bail and a stay of execution of the thirty-day workhouse sentence imposed upon him last Friday by Judge Finehout of the municipal court for reckless driving of his automobile. This takes away almost the last hope of Waterman and his friends that he might postpone or escape serving the thirty days in the workhouse, as the court says there is no merit in his appeal and holds the law under which he was sentenced constitutional.

Thomas R. Kane, attorney for Waterman, made his motion for a stay of execution before Chief Justice Start and the other judges in chambers. They heard his arguments and handed down a per curiam decision and opinion denying the motion.

The court says the right to a stay of execution is not absolute and the court may and should refuse it if clearly satisfied upon inspection of the record there is no merit in the appeal.

Dade took the three women, who were almost unconscious, out of the windows, although in doing so he stood on burning embers and his feet were badly scorched, his shoes being literally burned off.

Rogers, Jr., twenty-one years old, and Howard Dywater, twenty-five years old, were seriously injured when an automobile in which they were returning to St. Paul from Bass lake skidded over an embankment midway between McCarron's lake and Bass lake and turned over. FOR ENFORCEMENT OF LAW

Attorney General Holds That Sheriffs Are Responsible.

Minnesota sheriffs are responsible for law violations in the different counties. Under an opinion submitted to Governor Eberhart by Attorney General Simpson the sheriffs of the state must not be content with serving processes. They must investigate complaints of nonenforcement of the law and must take the initiative in seeing that the laws of the state are enforced.

Governor Eberhart, to whom many complaints of violations of the liquor laws have been made, wished to know what local officers he could hold responsible for law violations. The sheriff is directly responsible to the governor and for this reason the governor wrote the attorney general and asked for an opinion not only as to the duties and obligations of the sheriff, but also as to the penalties provided in case the sheriff neglects or refuses to perform his duties.

According to Mr. Simpson the sheriff is the chief peace officer of the county and is answerable directly to the governor. If he is derelict in his duty the governor may dismiss him. There is no appeal from the action of the executive.

HUNTING THE WALRUS.

The Eskimo Takes Advantage of the Animal's Curiosity.

In his frail skinboat it is a difficult and dangerous task for the Eskimo to go out to sea forty to sixty miles and intercept the walrus as he passes on his migration into the Arctic.

One carcass will fill his boat, for it weighs from 1,000 to 3,000 pounds. He hunts the walrus when they are lying asleep on the ice floes in herds from ten to several hundred. Death must be instantaneous, else with a few rolls or the peculiar lumbering, humping movement (seen of the seal when ashore), he makes the few feet to the water and then is lost, as he has not sufficient blubber and air to float. He has much natural curiosity, and if not scared by shots will come up close to your boat or the ice floe on which you are sitting, spurting, snorting and rolling his eyes; with his gleaming tusks and bristled snout he has an uncanny, goblin, monster-like appearance. A herd of fifty or sixty of them will come up en masse, raise high out of the water to stare at you, then snort, spurt and disappear again, only to come up on the same spot and repeat the maneuver indefinitely. Taking advantage of this the Eskimos hide behind ice hummocks and throw a harpoon into one, then snub the tough rawhide line around an ice cake. He must perforce come up to blow, and he is then killed with the rifle. The thick skin and the mass of blubber and meat beneath render him almost invulnerable.—Pacific Monthly.

MAKE THEM LAUGH.

A Bachelor's Idea of the Way Children Should Be Trained.

"The people who don't have to do things can always do them better than the people who are obliged to do them," said the cynical bachelor. "If you want to know how to invest money, ask a fellow who has never had any to invest. I suppose it's the same with raising children. Nevertheless, I am fond of children, and never having had an opportunity of raising any of my own, I am critical about the way other people, more fortunate than I, raise theirs.

"My brother has a youngster, a boy about six years old, and everything that kid wants he cries for. The minute he begins to cry he gets it, which, according to my reasoning, is all wrong.

"Why not make him laugh for it? It's just as easy for a child to laugh as to cry, and it's far more healthful, besides being much more cheerful for the surrounding populace.

"I've tried the experiment with him, and it works like a charm. If I happen to have anything he wants, and he cries for it, I make fun of him. 'That isn't the way to get it,' I say. 'Don't cry for it. Laugh for it.'

"It took only about two lessons for him to understand this, and you have no idea what a wonderful difference it has made in the disposition of that kid. Still, I'm only an old bachelor, and I'm not supposed to know anything about such things."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Took an Unfair Advantage.

Mrs. Dorkins — Yesterday I called Mrs. Grundage's attention to the fact that she had left the gate between our back yards open and that her chickens had come through and scratched up our flower beds, and she looked as if she would have liked to bite my head off. How foolish it is for people to get angry when you remind them that they have been careless about something they had no business to overlook!

Mr. Dorkins—I am glad to hear you say that, Maria. You won't mind if I mention that when I came home last night I found that you'd left both the back doors unlocked.

Mrs. Dorkins — Yes; you're always watching to see if you can't catch me in some little fault, and it makes you perfectly happy when you do!—New York Tribune.

Something to Live For.

Three little girls were playing. The mother of one came into the room and engaged the children in conversation. "Marian, what are you going to be when you grow up?" she asked.

"I am going to be a famous singer," she replied.

"And you, Susie, what are you to be?"

"Oh, I am going to write stories when I grow up," she answered.

"And what is Marjorie to be?" continued the mother.

Marjorie, aged five, thought seriously a moment, and then said, "Well, I am not sure, but I think I'll be a widow."—Delineator.

She Was Different.

"John," asked his wife, who was writing to one of her former schoolmates, "which is proper—to say, 'I differ from you' or 'I differ with you'?"

"Tell her you differ from her. I understand that she lets her husband keep part of his salary to have fun with himself."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Failure.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, pursuant to chapter seven (7), Revised Laws of Minnesota, 1905, a petition was filed with the Secretary of State on the 12th day of May, 1910 praying for the creation of a new county out of the territory now lying in Red Lake County, Minnesota, the same to be known as Pennington county, and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the southwest corner of section nineteen (19), in township one-hundred fifty-two (153) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, according to the United States Government survey thereof, running thence east along the south line of sections nineteen (19), twenty (20), twenty-one (31), twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23), and twenty-four (24) in townships one hundred fifty-two (152) north of each of ranges forty-five (45), forty-four (44), forty-three (43), forty-two (42), forty-one (41) and forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of section twenty-four (24) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges thirty-nine (39) and forty (40) west to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (153) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north on the east line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the northeast corner of said township one-hundred and fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west, thence running west along the north line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north along the east line of townships one-hundred fifty-three (153) and one-hundred fifty-four (154) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of Marshall county as the same now exists, thence running west along the southern boundary line of said Marshall county to a point where said boundary line intersects the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian, the said point being the northwest corner of said Red Lake County as the same now exists, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west to the northwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, the same being the place of beginning.

LOWER TAXATION IN PENNINGTON

Reasons Why Tax Rate in New County Will Be Lower.

The taxpayers desire to be assured that their county taxes will be less in Pennington county than they are now in Red Lake. This is proper and the organization of the new county ought to lessen the extremely heavy tax under which Red Lake now staggers. Every voter, when he casts his ballot next November, ought to feel that he is cutting out some needless expense and working for a lower county tax rate. That this will be the result is not doubted for an instant by those who have given the subject consideration. The following reasons are presented in support of the contention that Pennington county taxes will have to be lower than are those of Red Lake:

1. The assessed valuation for Pennington as equalized by the county board for 1910 is $2,113,256. This is sufficient to maintain a liberal county government and still not have a high rate of taxes. The county of Chisago with a valuation of $3,250,000 has an average county tax of only 32 mills; Grant has a rate of 23 mills; Benton with $2,500,000 property has a rate of 32 mills; Mahnomen with only $1,080,000 has the low rate of 21 mills and she has every officer which Red Lake has; Pope has a rate of 22 mills; Kittson with $3,500,000 has rate of 32 mills; Sherburne with just $2,200,000 of taxable property maintains the rate of 35 mills; Wadena with $2,700,000 has a rate of 33 mills. The average tax rate in Red Lake county is 45 mills, the second highest in the state. Beltrami has a rate of 47 mills. Of all the counties named above, they have as much, if not more public business than has Red Lake, and very much more than Pennington county will have. By remaining in Red Lake county the taxpayers are assured of the highest rate possible, 45 mills, but by organizing Pennington they can, with the valuation of $2,113,256 which is increasing all the time, cut that tax in two. They can surely do as well as Mahnomen, Wadena, Grant, Pope, Sherburne and many of the small counties in the south, where they have low rates. If it can't be done, it might as well be acknowledged that those counties named possess business men and officials whose work cannot be duplicated in Pennington, which is a foolish proposition to concede.

Red Lake started in 1897 with a valuation of only $1,254,900 and the taxes during the first few years of the county's existence were low. It took just $6,350, $6,765, $6,868 and $7,259 to pay officers' salaries, printing, county court expenses, etc. for the first four years. For the last three years it has taken $16,327, $18,620, $18,723 for exactly the same number of offices. That the work was not properly done during the first four years, or that there were no men to accept the places at the reasonable salaries paid, or that the printers did not get their pay, or that everyone performing some work for the county was not paid fairly well cannot be proved. The fact is that the county is being made a vehicle to feather some persons' nests and Pennington county can, if it will, return to the economical ways of the early years when they had to be saving. Great or small valuations cut little figure in county business. Counties are exactly like families; big salaries soon disappear and the families suffer want when no sense or economy is practised in spending the money. When public business is loosely conducted and economy is not known, then as surely as morning follows night, so certainly will high taxes be the portion of the property owner. Pennington county will have more taxable property than several counties in the state and her valuation will ever increase, so she cannot fail to secure a lessening tax rate. The anti-divisionists claim that to cut the county in two will double the taxes. They mean that half the assessed valuation will have to support the present expense and if this were true (which it is not) then the same proposition would mean that double the present valuation should reduce the county tax by just one-half. The facts are that property has increased 300 per cent since 1897, the assessed value of all property in the county at that date having been $1,254,900, while it is $3,870,473 today. According to their theory, this threefold increase should have divided the county tax rate by three, which it has not done. Instead of cutting the tax rate off some two-thirds, the county taxes have actually increased from 500 to 600 per cent, as the following figures furnished by County Auditor Latendresse prove; The total county expenses for officers' salaries, interest on bonds, roads and bridges, court expenses, poor (and that expense is not now in existence), printing and every manner of county expense for the first three years of the county were $11,523, $12,074, and $12,640. For the last three years the like expenses were $40,824, $40,212 and $62,921, an increase of from 500 to 600 per cent. In addition to the above, there are unpaid county warrants to the amount of $17,192.

The inevitable conclusion is that Pennington county can, with the assessed valuation of $2,113,256, which is her share of Red Lake county's assessed property, reduce her county taxes more than one-half what they are now, probably two-thirds. Her valuation is almost double that of old Red Lake and her tax rate will be proportionately low.

2. The large part of the heavy expense of $18,723 62 which was levied for revenue expenses last year, as well as much more appearing as special taxes, was paid for officers' and clerks' and deputies' salaries. Many of these deputies and special officers and clerks are not required. Some of them are really earning their salaries, others have a pull with a certain class of voters and therefore it says to keep them, and some have influential political friends whose aid is essential to success in campaigns. The county pays almost as much to some of these deputies as to their superiors in office. To prove this, note the fees of the deputy county auditor and the deputy sheriffs, etc. Counting the special county attorneys, and all the other persons finding employment from the county offices, in the capacities indicated above, the pay roll for county salaries is necessarily doubled. In counties such as Chisago, the deputies are unknown. Pennington county will not have to have deputies, as it will not require them, the officers being able to perform all of the duties of their respective positions themselves. As population, assessed valuation and taxes determine what some of the officials receive, it can readily be seen that the salaries in Pennington and reduced Red Lake will be cut almost in two. The present officials acknowledge this, but they are all running for office just the same. Men will, for some strange reason, chose public office as long as human nature is constituted as it now is, regardless of the size of the salary connected therewith. There will be no scarcity of first class material in Pennington, even if the salaries must by law be very low in nearly every position. In short, one third of the pay roll of Red Lake will be a generous amount for the same purpose in Pennington, and if the amounts mentioned in section 1 were sufficient to meet all county expenses in old Red Lake, why can't it be duplicated again in new Pennington?

3. The court expenses of Pennington will be less than one-half what they now are. Two regular sessions of the district court are held annually in each county seat, but Red Lake has had several special sessions which can be avoided in Pennington. The expenses of witnesses and jurors and some other officers connected with court business are based on mileage and day duty. Witnesses receive $1 per day and 6 cents each way for mileage. Jurors receive $3 per day and 10 cents each way for mileage. Sheriffs receive 10 cents per mile for serving certain processes. As the cases in Pennington county will surely be not over one-half those of the present Red Lake, and as the fees mentioned above will be less than one-third of the present fees, it can be readily seen that those court expenses will reduce the burden of taxation. In addition to these county taxes, there are the heavy expenses,—indirect taxes—of livery, hotel and railway fare which must be paid by the individual to attend court at the present county seat. Probate expenses are also of this class. With Thief River Falls as the county seat, easy of access to all parts of the county in one day by rail from three directions and by highway from all, there will be a great reduction, probably two-thirds of the present court expenses.

4. Ditch expenses can be cut in two. Nearly all ditch viewing, and assessing benefits and the livery expense connected with the same start at Red Lake Falls. This makes the expense twice what it ought to be. Why not let Pennington county farmers who live near these proposed ditches perform these simple duties and receive in return some of the heavy tax which they are paying into the county for the construction of the ditches? If any Pennington county farmer has ever received anything from this kind of a job he has kept his good fortune to himself. The expense of the publishing of the notices ought to be half what it is, and it would have been had the commissioners accepted the lowest bid for the county printing last January for the year 1910.

5. If the taxpayers refuse to organize Pennington county they will have to pay for the present $50,000 court house at Red Lake Falls. If they vote for Pennington county they will be saved from paying for this costly county house, and in addition, will receive a gift of the city hall of Thief River Falls absolutely free, from the latter city. In addition, they will be relieved from paying the illegal and exorbitant building tax of 4 mills which is levied for the building of this same county house in Red Lake Falls. Two taxes, one for bonds and one for building, are levied this year and will be next and for a long time. The city hall of Thief River Falls will be presented without any strings to it, and it will first be put in condition for county purposes by the city. It is comparatively new and ought to satisfy the taxpayers of Pennington county as a public building for the next ten years at least. No particular keenness of mind is necessary to discern the difference between these two propositions.

6. The large road and bridge tax will almost disappear when Pennington county is organized. $10,771.58 has been distributed for roads and bridges since the county of Red Lake was organized, and of this amount but a small portion has been granted Pennington county. This is part because the south end has many coulees and streams which must be bridged, and partly because a majority of the county board favors the south end. Pennington county pays 61 per cent of the taxes, but has received less than 40 per cent of the road and bridge fund in return. During 1910 she has received to date only ten per cent of the appropriations. (See the issues of last week of the Thief River papers.) Pennington county has only one river, the Red Lake and that is under federal control, so it might safely be said that the road and bridge tax of 2 mills might almost be abolished in the north end.

The state appropriations for the county road and bridge fund will never reach the north end of the county under the present conditions. Within five years the state legislature has appropriated for Red Lake county the sum of $5,848, nearly all of which has been spent in the south end, as the commissioners have the distribution of this money. For instance, Emardville received $700 at one stroke and Garnes $500 at another. Of the total county appropriations, Red Lake Falls has secured $9,023, while all of the townships in Pennington county have received only $5,123 in the same period. After next November all state appropriations intended for the north end will surely be spent in Pennington. With a very low road and bridge tax levy, with the absence of rivers and creeks, and with the state appropriation the new county ought to have the best highways in this upper part of the state.

7. The absolute power to issue bonds for the construction of county buildings which every board of county commissioners possesses, gives color to the report that if the vote on the organization of Pennington county fails to carry, a new jail and sheriff's residence will at once be erected by the Red Lake county commissioners. They cannot be prevented from adopting this course if they so desire. The ease with which the court house bonds were issued, when even the farmers in the south end were not in favor of the action, proves how near at hand is this new danger. To escape the cost of the new court house and the impending danger of the cost of the new set of buildings indicated, the voters ought to cast a unanimous ballot for Pennington county and its free court house next November.

8. Other reasons might be presented to substantiate the claims of the divisionists that Pennington county spells lower taxes for the north end. Aside from the financial considerations connected with the new county are many others which should receive the closest attention of the voters Among these are the questions of the right of a majority to rule, the right of the people to be fairly represented on the board of county commissioners, and the many causes which have provoked the present contest. Some consider these of paramount importance.

The division of the county appears the most reasonable and logical solution of the difficult problem of settling Red Lake county's troubles. The ill feelings stirred up by six years of strife; the peculiar railway situation of the county; the lack of social, business and political relations, and also the inconvenient communication between the north and south sections; their difference in nationality or racial origin; and the rapid growth of the north end all point to but one conclusion and that the division of the county. Each part will have a valuation ample to maintain an efficient county government at a low tax rate, if economy governs official action. In the main, the people are a hardworking, honest, law abiding citizenship, desirous of living and letting live and wishing no harm to their neighbors. That each section can peacefully work out its destiny best by being divorced from the other is the opinion of nearly all interested persons, and that this judgment will be confirmed at the polls next November is confidently expected.

1,500 SUITS TO BE STARTED

Action to Annul Deeds to White Earth Indian Lands Has Been Started.

Full Blooded Indians Sold Their Land Contrary to Law It Is Said.

Attorney General Wickersham of the Department of Justice through United States Attorney Houpt of St. Paul, last week fired the opening guns in litigation over the White Earth reservation of the Chippewa Indians in Northwestern Minnesota, suits in equity being filed in the United States court in Fergus Falls.

This is the result of a prolonged investigation commenced in the summer of 1909 by agents of the Interior Department and followed up from January, 1910, down to the present time by a mixed force of officials from the Department of Justice and Indian bureau. By legislation of congress the adult mixed blood Indians of this reservation were allowed to sell their allotments of land on the reservation the same as any person having a complete title to land could do, but the act of congress prevented such sale by minors of the mixed blood, and by full blood Indians either adults or minors.

It is generally claimed that persons interested in obtaining the Indian lands took deeds almost indiscriminately of full bloods, and minors of the mixed bloods. It is to recover these lands alleged to have thus been illegally transferred; that is, transferred without right that these particular suits have been instituted and it is stated that they are more forerunners of a very large number similar suits yet to follow, the whole to embrace a considerable portion of the 700,000 acres on this reservation and a very large amount of pine and other valuable timber growing on these illegally conveyed lands estimated to be of from one to two millions of dollars in value.

In addition to the immense amount of work by way of preliminary to the commencement of these suits, it is understood that the force above mentioned is preparing an official roll of between five and six thousand Indians belonging to the White Earth band and passing upon the application of many hundreds of Indians for what are called fee simple patents to their allotments, so that they too may convey.

Probably no such extensive work has been entered upon outside of Oklahoma as this above mentioned, and no such number of cases in one series has been brought in any federal court since the establishment of the government. Since lumber companies of large means and extensive operations, as well as land speculators and operators, are involved it is expected that developments will be of great general interest throughout the United States.

Assistant United States District Attorney Dickie, Eugene H. Long special agent of the Department of Justice, and John H. Hinton, of the interior department, arrived at Fergus Falls last Thursday and filed 109 suits. It is expected that from 1,000 to 1,500 suits for the cancellation of deeds given by Indians will be filed in all.

It is alleged that the Indians had no right to transfer, and further that they were defrauded by those procuring the deeds. Much of the land has passed to timber companies which are stripping it of its valuable timber.

G. N. to Build a Boat.

While with Louis Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway last week, O. A. Moody received the promise from Mr. Hill that adequate steam boat accomodations between Warroad and Kenora, or somewhat larger, of about 20-knot speed, modern in every respect.

Mr. Hill and party are scheduled to arrive in Warroad on the 12th day of September for a tour of inspection of the lake and harbor facilities, at which time data will be gathered from which it will decided just what shall be done in regard to the matter.

With a modern first-class passenger boat at this point, the hotel and the improvements now planned in connection therewith, it is practically an assured thing that there also will be material improvements in the train service on the Great Northern on this line.—Warroad Plaindealer.

Fr. Ambrose to Europe.

Rev. Fr. Ambrose of St. Mary's church has been granted a leave of absence for one year and he expects to spend the time in Europe. He is now in New York and will embark for the old world trip this week. Fr. Ambrose has been in ill health for a number of months and his friends here hope that the travel and change will result in the hoped for improvement. During the absence of Fr. Ambrose, Rev. Fr. Conrad of St. John's will have charge of St. Mary's church.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Did you ever give thought to the fact that it is largely due to the material aid and encouragement given by banks and bankers that this is a country of homes and home owners?
Do you realize that this aid and encouragement, which has been such a help in making improvements and advancing property values, was possible only because many people deposited in banks their surplus money, the money for which they have no immediate use?
Individually these accounts were small, collectively they stand for the world's progress.

Death of a Pioneer.

Mrs. Carl Steinbauer, one of the first settlers in the town of Excel, died Sunday at the hospital at Warren from the affects of an operation. The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon from the German Lutheran church on the East Side and the remains were buried in Greenwood cemetery.

The deceased was born in Germany 58 years ago and came to this country in 1881 and in 1883 went to the town of Excel with her husband and settled upon a homestead which had since been her home. She was an ideal mother and was held in high respect in this section. She leaves six children—Fred, William, Arno, Pauline and Annie, of Excel and Mrs. Pulaski, of Duluth.

Route No. 2

Weather for this week has set in pretty favorable in regard to the condition of the soil.

Those who make it a practise to plow their fields as early as circumstances permit will receive a far greater return than if the ground is turned under just before it freezes up.

J. Meier a tenant on one of the old C. J. Knox farms near Ringbo will leave for Canada as soon as chances will allow to convert his harvest into solid cash.

Whom shall we vote for at the primaries Sept. 20th? A number qualified for office candidates on line this year and one stands as much show as the other.

Threshing would be making its full headway were it not for the late flax that still lies out in the field to obtain sufficient curing.

Hunting season opens this week and the farmers wish to warn the hunters not to reach out too far. By this we mean to prevent the least damage and injuries to fences, meadows and other property.

The Childrens Industrial Contest of Marshall Co. will be held at Warren Sept. 14th 15th and 16th. All entries must be made on the 14th but the 15th will be the big day.

In all cases a way can be reached to reap a harvest for an unknown rainy day if co operated with the efforts of Prudence, Temperance and Diligence.

Some more improvements done by farmers once in a while to attract a passer's-by attention.

Otto Rupprect erected a pumping monitor to raise water for his thirsty stock lately.

Another Farmer Heard From.

Editor and Readers of the "News:" As I see much written about county division, it struck me that I might as well say a few words too, being a taxpayer in the proposed new county.

I notice that invariably the arguments are based on the selfishness in human nature. Now, this question, like most other public questions, has a moral side to it, and the main thing is to make sure that it is just and right to divide the county.

By voting for division I help to accomplish "The greater good for the greatest number," in fact for everybody excepting those who shall be elected county officers next election.

If we should not divide, the people in southern Red Lake county would gain nothing, and the people in the north would lose the new county, and new county seat near home. If we do divide, the people in the north would lose absolutely nothing that rightfully belongs to them, while we would gain a representative county government and a county seat near home. It is not right that the people of southern Red Lake should lose their county seat, as they have worked to get it, and have become accustomed to have it. Neither can it be right, that the majority shall not get the county seat where they want it, nor get proportionate representation; so it is very plain that the only way to vote so as to do nobody injustice is to vote for Pennington county, and give each part of the county what it is entitled to, and no more.

It has been a great waste of time and money for the people to keep up this county seat fight, and with the outcome so far no one can tell what or when the end would come without county division but we do know that the outcome will not be satisfactory to all parts of the county. Not so with the pending proposition. Let Pennington county win and there will be great rejoicing, not only up north, but also with all down south who want Right to succeed, and wish to do to others as you want them to do to you. They will also be much better satisfied with all this factional feeling gone.

Let us all vote to divide, not merely because it is a paying proposition, but also because it is the only righteous solution of the county seat question in our county.

Yours for justice to all. T.

BEN CHRISTIANSON

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd., 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

For State Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910 and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

ALBERT BERG,

Spooner, Minnesota

Voters Should Be Careful.

G. L. Hanson, an unknown, has filed as a candidate for state senator from this district. He gives his postoffice address as Red Lake Falls and is said to be a farmer residing in Lake Pleasant township. There is no question but that this filing is made in order to secure a certain per cent of votes that are intended for A. L. Hanson. Many voters will become confused and vote for the wrong Hanson. Albert Berg, who is A. L. Hanson's opponent, says that he had absolutely nothing to do with the filing of G. L. Hanson, and we give Mr. Berg credit for being too honorable to take this underhanded method of attempting to defeat his opponent. G. L. Hanson was without doubt brought into the race by a small gang of Red Lake Falls politicians that have never stopped at anything to gain a point. They are opposed to A. L. Hanson because he is too square a man to satisfy them and are backing Berg because he is the opponent of Hanson. Personally we do not believe Berg would adopt underhanded methods to defeat Hanson, and the filing of the second Hanson is going to be a boomerang to Berg. The majority of the people like fair play.

Announcement.

I hereby announce myself as a republican candidate for Representative of the 61st district at the primaries to be held September 10, 1910. If nominated and elected I pledge the people of this district to support their demands I am for re-apportionment and good roads.

Respectfully,

IVER A. KROHN.

The report comes from Red Lake Falls to the effect that the people of that place will give C. A. Lindquist no aid in his candidacy for the office of county commissioner, in fact the people down there attempted to persuade him not to file, and now that he has filed they will oppose him secretly. Spurned by his alleged friends and deserted by his neighbors, it is easy to see the finish of Mr. Lindquist. It will not be any blow to good government.

That portion of Red Lake county which will form Pennington county has paid sixty per cent of the road and bridge fund during the past six years and has received from the county commissioners only $10,132.22, while reduced Red Lake county which pays 40 per cent of the taxes received $26,862.33. The reason for this is the lack of representation the northern part of the county has on the county board. It is one of the reasons why all living in the northern part of the county will vote for division.

In trying to explain why Minnesota lands are so much lower than those of Iowa and Illinois, the Hutchinson Leader says it is because Iowa country towns have grown much faster than those of Minnesota. This is scarcely the correct idea. Country towns as well as cities, grow as the territory tributary to them, is developed and becomes populous. The Hutchinson Leader thinks the railroad laws of Iowa and Illinois, which prevent discrimination in favor of the large cities is the cause of rural prosperity in those states, and we believe this view is correct. In our state, the manufacturing industries are forced to the large cities, which tend to drain the country districts.—Todd County Argus.

Two weeks ago no one wanted to be auditor of Red Lake county. Now three want the job.

It may be that G. L. Hanson expects to secure some of the benefits of the advertising done by A. L. Hanson.

Unless we miss our guess, C. A. Lindquist is going to have no trouble in retiring from the board of county commissioners.

The Democrats of Pennington county are to be congratulated. As well as they like to hold office, none of them are willing to serve Red Lake.

Well, if nothing else can be accomplished, it is safe to say that C. A. Lindquist will not be a favorite at Red Lake Falls much longer.

County Commissioner John A Sorum, of Holt, is a candidate for sheriff in Marshall county. John is a good man for the job and we wish him success. His opponent will know that there has been an election.

So Charlie Boughton is a Democrat. We have been a resident of this county for a good many years and never before were able to find out with what political party he affiliated.

"Farmers of Red Lake county this division fight is your fight" shouts John King in the Red Lake Falls Gazette. We had kind of thought it was King's fight—he does so love to work for the poor farmers.

THE POWER OF ONE VOTE:

In about three weeks there will be a primary election in Minnesota, at which candidates for congressional positions, legislature, and county offices will be picked.

The primary election is as important as the general election. In many places, where nomination practically means election, it is more important. It is the duty of every citizen, therefore, to go to the polls on primary election day and register his choice. Not only that, but in the meantime he should study the contesting candidates and pick out those who, in his belief, will best serve the interests of the nation, the state and the community.

The average voter, especially when thousands of votes are being cast, is likely to underestimate the importance of his individual vote. What difference can it make, he thinks, in those thousand of votes, whether I cast my ballot or not or how I cast it?

He should take a card from the policy of the accomplished political manager. The trained politician treats every vote just exactly as though that vote would decide the election. It may decide it; you can't tell about that. And anyway the result, whatever it is, will be determined by totals made up of individual votes. The wise politician does not deal so much in masses of votes as he does in individual votes. To him every single vote is important. He never looses track of the fact that a single vote may determine the result, or the fact that a result is nothing but the sum of individual votes.

The voter ought to look at it in the same way. He ought to respect his own vote as much as he respects the votes of his fellow-citizens. If the votes of his fellow-citizens should happen to be divided equally, his own vote may settle the contest. And even if the result is not close, it depends upon how each individual casts his ballot.

The safe way and the fair way, the way every good citizen always should do, is to go upon the assumption that your vote is going to be the deciding ballot. When you decide between candidates for congress or county auditor or state senator or representative, act just as you would if you were personally responsible for the selection of the men who are to fill those offices. If by chance your vote should decide an equal contest, you would be personally responsible for the way it was decided.

Look over the field of candidates. Pick those who seem to you best fitted for the places they seek, and most likely to fill them to the satisfaction of the community. Go to the polls on primary election day and vote according to your judgment.

Especially important is the selection of senators and representatives in the legislature. You can't afford to let friendship or sympathy or any other outside consideration affect your choice, for the welfare of the state and of your community may depend upon the kind of men you send to the legislature. Study the candidates. Find out all you can about them. Judge them impartially, and with a view solely to the service you expect them to give and vote accordingly.

Don't underestimate the importance of your own vote. Treat it as though it were the only vote that is being cast, and as though it would decide the election.—Duluth Herald.

Call quick or you may be too late. Evenson & Hamre.

Plan to Fight Closing Order.

As a result of a conference held in St. Paul last week of business men from the villages and cities in the so called Indian country affected by the federal methods of dealing with the liquor question, a committee will be sent to Washington. This committee will be empowered to proceed along such lines as may be decided upon to present the officials at Washington with information that it is hoped will result in revoking some of the obnoxious orders that have recently been put into effect in the northern part of the state by officials of the Indian bureau.

As a preliminary to the business of the conference, delegates from the different towns represented discussed the situation relating experiences of the tactics employed by the representatives of the federal government to enforce the provisions of the old treaty of 1855, prohibiting the traffic in liquor in the greater portion of Minnesota.

Mayor Dumas of Cass Lake, Mr. Carman of Detroit, ex-Judge Spooner of Bemidji, Dr. Brown of Deer River, Mr. Kiley of Grand Rapids and others told of the high handed methods adopted by the deputies of Special Officer Johnson in holding up travelers at the point of a revolver, searching grips and trunks, breaking open shipments of merchandise and generally searching property throughout the northern part of the state in their efforts to locate and destroy liquor, under the pretense that it was being carried in for the purpose of sale to the Indians.

Mr. Dumas of Cass Lake explained how the regulations prescribed for the operation of the three saloons in his town were so well observed that it was impossible for him, as a physician, to secure alcohol and brandy for his fever patients without going out of the prescribed territory and bringing it in himself, in violation of the regulations. This, he said, he had done. Other delegates told how visitors to their towns had been subjected to the indignity of having their goods and their persons searched by deputies and instances were cited of travelers on the country roads being held up and searched.

A Farmer who Reads.

There is a farmer in South Dakota who does not scoff at "book farming." His name is J. C. Brown, Willow Lake. Mr. Brown is not a "born farmer." but one of the kind that is willing to learn. He has been reading some, and he has learned the lesson of rotating crops, fertilizing the soil, and deep plowing with repeated harrowing and dragging of the soil. In fact, he says that his prairie farm was harrowed until the top soil was as fine as talcum powder.

There is danger, of course, on the prairie of having this powdry top soil blown off into the next county, and the harrowing must not be rolled upon without packing of the soil, but Mr. Brown's experience shows that he had not labored in vain.

He had never been to an agricultural college, but he has read the farm papers, and attended the Farmers' Institutes, and read the books and this year his crop of Velvet Chaff wheat averages twenty five bushels to the acre. That is not a phenominal yield, but it has set other farmers thinking when they find their own yields running from six to ten bushels to the acre on account of the drought.—Agriculturist.

Young Men

This Is the Age of Distinctive Clothes Wear Those Made by Young Men's Experts

MOST all clothes makers and retail stores boast of the perfect fit, splendid materials and wonderful tailoring of the clothes they make and sell.

Young men, these are mere details. There are set rules that all good makers know and observe in making a garment fit and tailoring it right. All use materials of equal worth, woolens from the same mills. In these details the clothing that many good makers produce is equally perfect.

But when it comes to style, smartness, individuality, no two makers are equal. There are no set rules or laws for making Distinctive clothes. Few makers know how to give these qualities expression.

Appropriateness, fitness, tone and effect are the qualities you want, Young Men, if you've the least spark of pride in your clothes. Your clothes must fit your figure. But, more than this, they must fit your personality, actually be a part of you.

This is the principle on which Ederheimer-Stein clothes are made. They are designed to harmonize with Young Men's ideas and tastes. Foolish extremes are avoided, but every line of the garment contributes something in the way of smartness, distinctiveness, exclusiveness.

These are your kind of clothes, made your way, different clothes than the ordinary, distinctive clothes.

Eating House Butter Mergers.

It seems that many hotel and restaurant keepers throughout the country are using so called "mergers," or "blenders" machines for mixing cheap fats with butter, thus not only deceiving their patrons but deceiving the government by manufacturing butter substitutes without paying the required tax. The machines are said to make two pounds of butter from one. Royal E. Cabel, commissioner of internal revenue, has, however, determined to either put a stop to their little game or compel them to pay the oleo tax of 10 cents a pound. They should also have a fine imposed upon them for defrauding their customers.—Princeton Union.

Another Gazette Lie Nailed.

Editor, THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS:

In a recent issue of the Red Lake Falls Gazette it is stated that the reason why the north end of the county did not get more of the road and bridge money was because we did not ask for it.

I do not know very much about county matters but I do know that last year the writer and several of my neighbors sent a petition for $50 for a road in which we agreed to raise another $50 by private subscription; and this was turned down by the board altho it was proposed by Mr. Aubol.

I write this to show that the Gazette is mistaken in one instance at least and I am inclined to believe that it is mistaken in a good many respects.

Yours truly,

City Council.

At a meeting of the city council held Tuesday evening, it was decided to let the contract for the three sewer systems that have been established, on the 30th of September.

The muncipal court rooms, library and chief of police's office were assigned rooms in the auditorium.

For County Auditor.

I fully intended entering another vocation and had no intention of filing for the office of County Auditor but have been constantly urged to become a candidate for the office by your township and school officials and other men throughout the county with whom I have come into close contact through my relations with them as County Auditor. I have therefore decided to enter the race for County Auditor on the Republican ticket at the primaries to be held September 20.

Having been appoined by your county board May 15, 1909, to fill the unexpired term of the late John B. O'Brien, deceased, I have conducted the affairs of the office to the best of my ability since that time.

I will appreciate the vote and support at the coming primaries of all those who believe I am worthy of filling this responsible position and promise you that if nominated and elected I will conduct the affairs of the office in an honest and impartial manner the same as I have in the past.

Respectfully,

Is a Success.

The ditching machine invented by Gust Stocke and Ben Erickson, which for the past few weeks has been working on the east side of the river in the town of Rocksbury is proving a success in every way, and will make good money for the investors. For small ditch work, it is said that nothing can compete with this machine.

A THRILLING RIDE.

The Piano Run a Frenchman Gave a Locomotive Engineer.

"I was loitering around the streets last night," said Jim Nelson, one of the old locomotive engineers running into New Orleans. "As I had nothing to do I dropped into a concert and heard a sleek looking Frenchman play a piano in a way that made me feel all over in spots. As soon as he sat down on the stool I knew by the way he handled himself that he understood the machine he was running. He tapped the keys away up one end, just as if they were gauges and he wanted to see if he had water enough. Then he looked up as if he wanted to know how much steam he was carrying, and the next moment he pulled open the throttle and sailed on to the main line as if he was half an hour late. You could hear her thunder over culverts and bridges and getting faster and faster, until the fellow rocked about in his seat like a cradle. Somehow I thought it was old 36 pulling a passenger train and getting out of the way of a special. The fellow worked the keys on the middle division like lightning, and then he flew along the north end of the line until the drivers went around like a buzz saw and I got excited. About the time I was fixing to tell him to cut her off a little he kicked the dampers under the machine wide open, pulled the throttle away back in the tender, and how he did run! I couldn't stand it any longer, and yelled to him that he was pounding in the left side, and if he wasn't careful he'd drop his ash pan. But he didn't hear. No one heard me. Everything was flying and whizzing. Telegraph poles on the side of the track looked like a row of cornstalks, and trees appeared to be a mudbank, and all the time the exhaust of the old machine sounded like the hum of a bumblebee. I tried to yell out, but my tongue wouldn't move. He went around the curves like a bullet, slipped an eccentric, blew out his soft plug—went down grades fifty feet to the mile and not a controlling brake set. She went by the meeting point at a mile and a half a minute, and calling for more steam. My hair stood up straight, because I knew the game was up. Sure enough, dead ahead of us was the headlight of a special. In a daze I heard the crash as they struck, and I saw cars shivered into atoms, people smashed and mangled and bleeding and gasping for water. I heard another crash as the French professor struck the deep keys away down on the lower end of the southern division, and then I came to my senses. There he was at a dead standstill, with the door of the firebox of the machine open, wiping the perspiration off his face and bowing to the people before him. If I live to be a thousand years old I'll never forget the ride that Frenchman gave me on a piano."—Life.

Heat.

Little things like bacilli will live in a temperature of above 211 degrees F. Experimental observations of stokers have shown that man is a cousin to the salamander. Dante made six fiery circles of hell and felt constrained to resort to ice for the seventh and last condemnation of souls. Heat, in other words, is a relative term. Heat is beneficient if you like things hot. It depends on the point of view. Heat is supposed to be enervating. The bookworm is engendered by it. But, then, a race horse will go much faster on a hot day than a cool one. The fiercest rays of the sun appear to lubricate the joints. There are various kinds of heat, such as just common, everyday heat, prickly heat and the heat of debate, etc.—Kansas City Times.

A Spartan Father.

Recently a first year high school pupil handed her history teacher what she evidently considered an exhaustive and final study of Lacedaemonian customs. In it she stated that one Spartan habit of strengthening youth was to compel the boys to sleep always on beds and thistles.

The incident reminds one of a story that is told of one of the Camerons of Lochiel.

The chief, when bivouacking with his son in the snow, noticed that the lad had rolled up a snowball to make a pillow. He thereupon rose and kicked it away, saying sternly, "No ef feminacy, boy!"—Youth's Companion.

Burning a Diamond.

The diamond was first burned by Davy and Faraday in 1814. It was held on a platinum rod in a glass globe of twenty-two cubic inches of pure hydrogen and the Duke of Tuscany's burning glass—a lens of fourteen inches and one of three inches separated six and one-half feet—concentrated the sun's heat. In three quarters of an hour the stone burst into a scarlet flame. Out of focus it blazed four minutes and was consumed in two more trials.

Playing Safe.

"Johnny," said the teacher, "this is the third time I have had to punish you this week. Why are you so naughty?"

"Because," answered the incorrigible youngster, "grandpa says the good die young, and I ain't takin' any chances."—Chicago News.

Sheep will kill out iron weeds, but it takes several seasons to do the job, and it will not be done in that time if other forage is too abundant.

The day referred to in Holy Writ "when the grasshopper shall be a burden" is fulfilled this year for a good many farmers in sections west of the Missouri river.

The hollow block is not only a cheaper building material than the common solid brick, but the air spaces which it contains mean a lighter and at the same time a warmer structure.

A Colorado rancher is said to have recently completed harvesting 125 bushels of grasshoppers and to have hit upon the idea of drying and sacking them and using them for hen feed.

Title to the land which one buys as well as to water rights which may be guaranteed should be inspected with great caution before one turns over hard earned coin for the closing of the deal.

Not infrequently it is the farmer who owns the runtiest and scrubbiest bulls who keeps his fences in such miserable repair that his animals are an all around nuisance to all of his neighbors.

Billygoats and brush patches are both sorts of unlovely propositions when viewed separately, but when both are inclosed within the same fence the combination is a very satisfactory one.

The average soothing sirup with which fretful babies are doped by tired mothers is at bottom a deadly poison whose treacherous character is concealed by some euphonious and soothing appellation.

It is truly inspiring to note the resignation with which the average resident of the corn belt views the many days of sweltering heat which are necessary to bring this great staple crop to a proper maturity.

It usually takes a spell of rainy weather in spring or fall to cause teamsters to be sufficiently public spirited to take the center of the road and work down the dirt and gravel put there for grading purposes.

It should increase one's determination in waging a vigorous warfare on the fly tribe to know that their hatching places are manure piles and their feeding places for a part of the time at least cesspools and garbage piles.

In no case is it truer that "the best is the cheapest" than in the purchase of tile for permanent systems of drainage. What is true of the tile applies with equal force to the kind of help which is secured for laying out and putting in such a system.

While the western poultryman gets 50 per cent more for his eggs and poultry, he has to pay just about the same per cent more for the ration he feeds his hens, and, while he gets more eggs in winter, he has to fight lice and mites harder in summer. So all in all it is about a standoff.

In the vast majority of cases the deliberately unruly pupil comes from a home where the parents are neither respected nor exercise any wholesome authority. And quite often it is the parents of just such pupils who back them up rather than the teacher when they make trouble at school.

The best evidence that a town is not on the downhill road toward the municipal graveyard is the appearance in the columns of the local paper of advertisements of the merchants and business men there residing. It is a better index of enterprise than Fourth of July doings or bulletin boards put up at the depots.

It doesn't make much difference whether one goes into the poultry business, sheep raising, beekeeping or the productive of new crops on an intensive scale; the best way to proceed is to take up the new work or occupation on a small scale, so that instruction in the school of experiece will not entail such heavy tuition fees.

Every tiller of the soil who would have his land become richer as the years go by should try in every way possible to increase the manure output of the farm. This will mean the keeping of more cattle, horses, sheep and hogs, a more generous use of straw in the bedding of the pens and stalls, and lastly, what comes to the same end, the putting of the manures which are produced on the land as soon as possible following their accumulation.

Whether it is advisable to dehorn the dairy cow is now quite generally viewed as belonging to the same class as do using silos, cream separators and manure spreaders—no longer in the list of debatable questions.

The dry season closing has cut the straw crop unusually short, and the wise man will stack whatever straw he may have in the most careful manner possible, for in many sections it promises to have a value of from $3 to $4 a load before pasture time next year. The bulk of it is of extra good quality, and it will go a long way toward tiding over a period of short feed.

It has often been noticed when timber has been cleared from a piece of land and a tilled crop planted that weeds put in an appearance which do not usually grow in wooded tracts. An easier way of explaining this than contending that the seed has been lying dormant in the soil is that birds deposited the weed seeds in their droppings after the land was broken and planted.

There are many tracts of land in irrigated districts whose low runs or spots should be given effective tile drainage if the largest measure of good is to be derived from an application of water to the surface of the soil. Especially is this true in most arid sections where the soil is heavily impregnated with alkali, the presence of which in excessive quantities means death to growing things.

Under date of June 22 last the department of agriculture published farmers' bulletin No. 401 on the protection of orchards in the Pacific northwest from spring frosts, by fires and smudges. The subject matter was prepared by Professor P. J. O'Gara, assistant pathologist, at present stationed in the Rogue river valley. It will be a valuable bulletin for every ranchman located in districts subject to spring frosts.

A lot of folk in town and country are pretty regular takers of booze tonics and invigorators and are breeding blear eyes and red noses when what they need is not slop of this kind, but more corn fed beef, more pure milk and fresh eggs, more sunshine during the day and fresh air at night. This last prescription doesn't cost anything, but it will take the kinks out of a disordered stomach or liver quicker than any dope on the market.

There is many a hill prone to washing and cutting by heavy rains that can be helped much by a terracing and ditching of the hillslope in such way that the water may be run to the sides on a gradual incline instead of being allowed to course in large quantities directly down the slope. Laid off in the above manner there will be but a relatively small amount of water to be drained from each area, and the washing of the soil will be by that much reduced.

An effective quietus can be put on the several varieties of worms that affect pigs by the use of turpentine, which is best given in ground feed at the rate of a teaspoonful to 100 pounds of pig after the afflicted porkers have been without food for about twelve hours. A few pigs should be fed at a time so that each animal will be sure to get the amount of medicine needed. The treatment should be repeated at intervals until three doses have been given.

The present season is no exception to the quite general rule that, while seasons of drought cut down yields of small grain and corn in sections where it is most severe, there is matured during such dry seasons a quality of grain that is plump, well filled and heavy. In a good many sections where the rainfall was not too short the growers are this season getting both yield and quality, while prospective market conditions promise them excellent returns for their season's operations.

Report has it to the effect that Kansas City bankers have got together and agreed to loan no more of their funds to folks who would mortgage their town or rural property to raise the amount of money necessary to buy automobiles. This may be a bit tough on those who would fain ride in just as high style as some of their neighbors, but in the end it will prove a lasting kindness. There are a stack of folks who have gone absolutely daft with this automobile mania, and some rather drastic action of this kind is needed to bring them to their senses.

Within two or three years there has been a radical change in the method of handling the animals in the largest zoos of the country, particularly during the winter season. Formerly it was the aim to reproduce as nearly as possible by means of warm quarters and steam heat conditions of temperature to which the animals were accustomed in their native haunts. But monkeys from the tropics treated in this way seldom survived one winter's confinement, usually contracting and dying of consumption. Finally a new plan was tried of keeping the monkeys and other animals in open outdoor cages and allowing them to become accustomed gradually to the colder temperatures. It was found that instead of dying of the cold, as was supposed would be the case, the animals flourished as they never had before, while those which were already suffering from tuberculosis were cured of their trouble by this fresh air treatment. The best doctors agree that what is good for monkeys and kangaroos is equally good for human beings.

RECALL OF LAGERKRANTZ

Various Reasons Given for Return to Sweden of the Minister to Washington—Emigration From Norway to the United States Receives a Fresh Impetus—Socialist Congress at Copenagen Criticises Colonel Roosevelt.

SWEDEN.

Various reasons have been given for the recall of the Swedish minister to the United States. One is that in an address at a banquet in New York he spoke indiscreetly regarding American politics. Another story is that he is retiring voluntarily because he finds the cost of living too high in the United States. Still another reason given is that his business interests in Vastmanland and Dalarne are so extensive that he cannot afford to spend any more time in Washington. Be all this as it may Herman de Lagerkrantz has given up his post in Washington and another man will be selected for his place in the very near future. A great many people believe that Herr Wachtmeister will be selected to succeed Lagerkrantz. Mr. Lagerkrantz, who has held the post at Washington during the past three years, was born in 1859 and received a university education. He entered the army while still a young man and was for a number of years an officer in the Swedish army. In 1889 he took up Salvation Army work in London and General Booth thought that he was such a splendid organizer that he sent him to Holland, Germany and England, and later on, for a year or two he continued his Salvation Army work in India. Owing to ill health he resigned from this kind of work and in 1896 he purchased a lumber plant at Virsbo, in Vastmanland, for which he paid 400,000 crowns. Since that time his business interests in Sweden have been expanding at a rapid rate. While at Washington Mr. and Mrs. Lagerkrantz were very popular and no former Swedish minister has commanded so much attention in Washington as Herr Lagerkrantz. Two years ago he made an extensive tour through the Northwestern states and made several excellent addresses during that journey.

Richard Gustafsson, the publisher of the humorous paper known as Kasper, celebrated his seventieth birthday the other day. He was the recipient of hundreds of congratulatory telegrams from all parts of the country and an elaborate banquet was held in his honor. Mr. Gustafsson, who will now retire froe active duties in connection with his paper, will be succeeded by his son, A. M. Gustafsson.

The Mission union (Forbundet) of Sweden paid out in all 469,767 crowns for mission purposes during the past year. Of this amount 121,554 crowns were given to inner mission work, while 317,268 crowns were given to foreign missions. The union is supporting mission work in Congo, China, Russia, Caucasia, Persia, East Turkestan and Lapland. It has 122 active laborers in the foreign mission fields.

Professor Alfven, the well known Stockholm musician and composer, has been appointed director of the musical department of the University of Upsala. His strongest competitor for the position was Professor Ruben Liljefors.

Consul Birger Morner has asked to be relieved from consular duties in Sydney, Australia. The consul will return to Sweden, where he contemplates spending his entire time in pursuit of his extensive literary work.

The king, queen and dowager queen have each donated 1,000 crowns to the Swedish church in Paris.

NORWAY.

Emigration to America, which during the past few weeks has been comparatively small, has received a fresh start again, says the Verdens Gang. During the first six months of the present year about 15,000 Norwegions, chiefly young men and women, have emigrated to America and Canada. This is far in excess of last year's emigration for the same period. There are about 5,000 Norwegians in Canada at present, but Norwegian emigration to that country seems to be increasing very rapidly. Over 20 per cent of the emigrants are women. About 6,000 Norwegian Americans during the past summer have visited Norway and it is estimated that they spent at least 4,000,000 crowns. The Verdens Gang adds that "these American people all seem prosperous and intelligent looking."

Leon Marcher, who left New York some time ago with a woman after having robbed his employer in that city of [illegible], was captured in Norway the other day in the little idyllic town of Holmestrand, where he was placed in jail. The Christiania police had been scouring the country for him for several weeks and were glad to know that they at last had succeeded in arresting the man and bringing him to justice. His stay in the jail at Holmestrand was of a very short duration, however. The jailkeeper had forgotten to lock the door and after Marcher had been in there only three hours he skipped out through the main door and now the police and Christiania detectives are looking in vain for him.

The German Spitzbergen expedition aboard the steamer Carmen returned from Tromsoe the other day and all the members of the expedition were in excellent health and spirits. The expedition found large masses of ice eighty miles west of Velsund. The steamer Maintz has visited King's bay, where it met the Isaachsen's expedition, which was taking deep water measurements. The Zeppelin expedition was also encountered and the latter aboard the Phoenix will also go as far north as Spitzbergen.

The contemplated Christiania exposition, which will be held in 1914, will, according to the calculations and estimates of the architects, entail an expenditure of about 3,000,000 crowns. Sweden and Denmark will be well represented at this exposition and Sweden contemplates erecting a large industrial exposition building, which will be one of the largest on the big exposition grounds. Norway's fisheries exhibition will be one of the great features of the big fair.

Norway's export and import business last year amounted to not less than 614,400,000 crowns. Of this sum total the imports amounted to 366,400,000 and the exports to 248,000,000, thus leaving a surplus on the imports amounting to 118,400,000 crowns. This is a splendid showing and Norway is way ahead of Sweden when it comes to the export and import business, comparatively speaking.

The secretary to the Norwegian legation in Berlin, Michael Lie, has been appointed Norway's representative to Mexico and Cuba, and will from now on serve as consul general for the two countries. Mr. Lie has been in the foreign service for a number of years and is well qualified to fill the position in question.

The thief who stole a large pocketbook at the Christiania Credit bank, containing 11,400 crowns, besides a number of checks, is believed to have escaped to some northern town in Sweden. A reward of 1,000 crowns has been offered for his capture.

the vicinity of Fjaerland. While making the ascent, however, he fell, glided down the glacier and disappeared. About two days afterwards a searching party succeeded in finding his body in a terribly mangled condition at the foot of the glacier.

DENMARK.

Says a Copenhagen dispatch: Former president Roosevelt came in for a raking incidental to the discussion of anti-militarism at the session Aug. 31 of the International Socialist congress. Several speakers turned their guns on the American, the most bitter attack being made by George Ledebour, a Socialist member of the German reichstag, who described him as a "political drummer." Among other things Herr Ledebour said: "He has forgotten that he represents a democratic nation whose existence was due to a revolution. Shame on him for joining the British rulers against Egyptian patriots." On the general subject of anti-militarism so many conflicting opinions developed that the congress was in a constant turmoil. The committee on international disarmament were unable to agree among themselves.

The composer and musician, Carl Lumbye, is dead. He was a son of the celebrated Hans Christian Lumbye, the famous Danish composer. Carl Lumbye was for a number of years first violinist in his father's orchestra at the Tivoli gardens and of later years he has been its director and was as such very popular with the Copenhagen audiences. He wrote a number of waltzes, which are very popular. He attained an age of sixty-nine years.

Dr. Max Henius of Chicago, who has been making an extensive European tour this summer, is trying to arrange an international brewery exhibition in Copenhagen next summer. Dr. Henius is also heading a petition of Danish Americans the purpose of which will be to donate a large sum of money to the homeland for the purpose of establishing a national park.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Danish People's museum was celebrated Aug. 8 and some of the best educated men and women of Copenhagen attended the festivities which were held in connection. Lund University of Sweden sent a representative and there was also present a representative from the University of Leipzig.

I. C. Christensen, who has recently visited Skansen in Stockholm, is now planning to establish a similar national open air museum for Denmark. He would locate the same in Copenhagen not far from where the Swedish church is located.

A school for journalists has been opened in Copenhagen. It starts out in good hands and is backed up with a substantial appropriation from the government.

LABOR NEWS.

The New York city cloakmakers' strike, one of the greatest industrial disturbances in the history of American labor, has been settled. Seventy thousand garment workers who have been idle for nine weeks have returned to work. The industrial loss to employers and employes has run high into the millions. In loss of wages alone the total is more than $10,000,000, while the loss to manufacturers, jobbers and retailers the country over has been computed at ten times that amount. One essential to this victory, and one important not only to the strikers but to the nation at large which wears their output, is the abolition of all contract work at home. Hereafter garments made in New York will be manufactured under sanitary conditions. There will be no more sweat shops.

Attorneys for the coal operators who have filed suit against the union miners in the Irwin-Westmoreland (Pa.) coal fields, charging conspiracy in preaching sedition against laws of the state and nation, declare these suits to be the first of their kind to be filed in the United States. The legal action is the outcome of the strike being waged against the plaintiff companies by several thousand miners in the Irwin-Westmoreland field.

Colonel Roosevelt delivered the Labor day address at Fargo, N. D. He declared labor organizations were a necessity and endorsed several planks in the platform of the American Federation of Labor.

POLITICAL NEWS.

In clear and emphatic language Theodore Roosevelt announced his political creed at Osawatomie, Kan. It was a creed of progressive Republicanism. It aligned him definitely with the progressive movement within the party as a whole. It placed him on record as an advocate of some policies which find favor with the progressives and as an opponent of every "special interest" which he believes exercises a sinister influence upon the affairs of the people. The speech was delivered in a grove on the battlefield where John Brown fought the Missouri raiders on Aug. 30, 1856. The setting was picturesque. Thousands of people had gathered for the dedication of the battlefield as a state park.

Warning the people of New Mexico and Arizona against the danger of having an ironclad constitution not easily amended Colonel Roosevelt took occasion to speak of the affairs of those new states at Pueblo, Colo., explaining that he will be unable on this trip to visit them.

David R. Francis of St. Louis, former president of the Louisiana Purchase exposition and former governor of Missouri, has filed with the secretary of state his declaration as a candidate for the United States senate as a Democrat.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

New York is beginning to awake to the danger of a cholera epidemic. The recent holding of the Lusitania because of a suspicious case aboard has served to bring home the fact that only the utmost care can prevent the introduction of the plague, which is now raging in Russia and Italy, whence come the majority of the immigrants landing at the port of New York.

INDIANS REFUSE TO MOVE

Government Faces Peculiar Situation in Minnesota.

Two hundred Indian families refuse to leave Mille Lacs reservation for White Earth and the government must either make a new treaty or move the Indians from Mille Lacs by police or military force.

The Indian department at Washington and the Indian Agent, John R. Howard, at White Earth, are in a fix, and are puzzled at what to do with the Chippewa Indians on Mille Lacs reservation, who refuse to move to White Earth, notwithstanding the fact the government has entered into a treaty with them and has transferred them from Mille Lacs to the White Earth lands.

It has taken the government several years to induce about 200 Indians to leave Mille Lacs, and it has cost thousands of dollars to persuade them to remove. This money is said to come from the Indian fund belonging to the Chippewas, which the government has in trust for the Chippewa tribe.

One of the chief objections to the removal is the fact the government in the treaty transferred some of the best land at Mille Lacs, worth from $10 to $50 an acre, for swamp land on the Chippewa Indian reservation. Then this land was claimed by the state from the government and the state has been granted the land, and thus far the Indians have not been given the old land back or other land in its stead.

Another more serious objection to the removal is that the Chippewas have buried their dead in the Mille Lacs reservation and they hold the land in sacred trust on that account.

MINNESOTA COPPER RANGE

Scene of Much Development Work at Present.

A company headed by Minneapolis men is developing a copper property at the point where the Keweenaw beds are cut by the Kettle river east of Hinckley, and within two or three miles of the monument erected by the state to the victimes of the great Hinckley fire.

Another company, directed by Cloquet and Minneapolis men, is carrying on a similar work between the Snake and Kettle rivers. Other Minneapolis people, who have already done some work with the diamond drill, have announced their intention of opening a copper mine on the Kettle river some four or five miles below the one named. Still another company, headed chiefly by Sioux Falls men, has recently been organized to open a property in the same section.

Minnesota's copper range is nameless, which has doubtless deprived it of much publicity. It lies about midway between the Twin Cities and Duluth, in the lower valleys of the Snake and Kettle rivers in Pine county, and is the nearest of Minnesota's mineral fields to Minneapolis. It comprises a belt about three miles in width by perhaps forty in length.

Masses of pure, metallic copper, torn from rock beds during the glacial period, are scattered profusely throughout. The Minnesota range apparently carries as much copper at or near surface as does that of Michigan.

NEW DEPOT FOR ST. PAUL

Railways Centering There Agree on the Plans.

A new Union depot for St. Paul is assured, according to M. D. Munn, chairman of the Union depot committee.

This announcement followed a meeting of the general citizens' committee and representatives of the nine roads interested in the station. After the meeting M. D. Munn, chairman of the general citizens' committee, said:

"The railroads through their representatives all admitted the need of a new Union depot. They decided to select through the Union Depot company a competent engineer to draw plans for a new station and terminals and to begin the preliminary work on the new structure at once. The plans, approved by all the heads of the roads, include changing the channel of the river so that land enough for the railroad terminals can be secured."

BIG COAL DOCK PLANNED

Pittsburg Company Purchases Eighty Acres in Duluth.

The Carnegie Dock and Fuel company of Pittsburg, a subsidiary of the Carnegie Coal company has purchased from the Lowry Holding company of Minneapolis eighty acres of dock property in Duluth, on which it will at once begin the construction of a coal dock to cost $750,000. The price of the dock property was $1,000 an acre and the land has a frontage of one-fourth mile on St. Louis bay. The land lies immediately east of the plant of the Zenith Furnace company at West Duluth. The dock is for the use of the Carnegie Coal company and when it is completed the company will have a large modern dock both in Superior and Duluth, the dock on the Superior side having lately been completed.

Record Month at South St. Paul.

With the enormous increase in hog receipts of 175 per cent, sheep 115 per cent and cattle 95 per cent, the South St. Paul stock yards did a record August business during the month just closed. Increases indicated above as compared with the same month in 1909 indicate the heaviest business for an August at the yards in a decade, if not in the history of the yards.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

ATTEMPT AT MURDER FAILS

Discharged Employe Killed by Railway Official Whom He Attacked at St. Paul.

Failing in an attempt to assassinate Chief Special Agent Alton G. Ray of the Great Northern railroad at St. Paul by firing five shots from a revolver at him C. P. Welsh, a discharged agent of the road, hurled a bottle of nitroglycerin at his former chief in the latter's office.

The deadly fluid failed to explode and Mr. Ray shot his assailant dead as he dodged into an anteroom.

The affray was the culmination of a number of threats Welsh had made against his former chief.

Welsh, after having shot George Miller at Duluth on June 21, was discharged by Mr. Ray, who declared Welsh had done so without provocation.

Walsh left the employ of the Great Northern July 21 and since that time had been calling at Ray's office almost daily, asking for re-employment and demanding a recommendation. When Ray refused to have anything to do with him he became ugly and said that he would kill him.

After the shooting Ray accompanied Detective Frank Fraser to police headquarters under technical arrest awaiting the action of the coroner.

CAUSES LOSS OF $225,000

Fire Destroys Large Department Store at Minneapolis.

The Leader department store at Minneapolis was destroyed by a fire which for a time threatened the building adjacent to it on Nicollet avenue and Third street. Estimates on losses vary, but the owners believe it will reach $225,000, practically covered by insurance.

The blaze was one of the most stubborn the Mill City has witnessed for many years, and the firemen, on account of the denseness of the smoke and the inaccessibility of the blaze, were unable to cope with it for some time. It was witnessed by thousands, which crowd was well sprinkled with state fair visitors, who accepted the fire and the work of the fire department as sort of a treat.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN KILLED

H. G. Stockstad Slain by Man Frenzied by Liquor.

Taking up the fight of his brother in a drunken frenzy John Hoglund shot and instantly killed Hans G. Stockstad in the latter's saloon at Minneapolis. Hoglund is in jail, charged with murder. His brother, Herman Hoglund, with whom he lived, is also held by the police, but a charge of drunkenness only will likely be preferred against him. Stockstad was shot through the head, the muzzle of a shotgun having been held within a few inches of his head.

BOAT FOUND ON THE SHORE

Two Young People Drowned Near Wadena.

Gladys Wiswell and Frank Kingsley, aged eighteen and twenty years respectively, were drowned in Lake Blanche, a few miles from Wadena. They left the camp in a canvas boat and when they did not return search was begun.

The girl's jacket and hat, the oars and boat seat were found washed up on the shore. Only the girl's body has been recovered. Dynamite is being used to raise the body of the young man to the surface.

WILL MEET ON SEPT. 15

Lind's Decision May Be Before State Central Committee Then.

There will be a meeting of the Democratic state central committee Sept. 15 in St. Paul. The place has not been selected. This statement is given out by State Chairman Frank A. Day and is taken to mean that before the 15th of this month the final decision of John Lind, nominee for governor, will be in the hands of the committee and probably will have been made public.

Fugitive Commits Suicide.

Tony McGuire, the maniac who narrowly missed killing Mayor Parker at the Parker lumber camp near Kelliher, when he rushed by the mayor and twice sank his axe into William Durkee, was found dead in the woods near Foy. McGuire's victim is in a Bemidji hospital in a serious condition. McGuire had cut his throat with a razor. Fear of starvation and capture is thought to have caused him to kill himself.

Big Attendance at Fair.

The combination of Labor day and the presence of President Taft on the grounds overcame the unfavorable weather Monday and caused an attendance at the state fair which probably will run over 90,000, counting paid admissions and employes, as has been the custom heretofore.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

About 100 bills in equity were filed in the federal circuit court at Fergus Falls on behalf of the United States government by M. C. Burch, assistant attorney general; Judge E. H. Long, special assistant in the attorney general's office, and J. M. Dickey, first assistant district attorney for Minnesota, asking that transfers and mortgages of vast tracts of valuable timber land on the White Earth Indian reservation in Northern Minnesota be declared null and void on the ground that the allottees, being full blooded Indians, had no right either to sell or mortgage their allotments.

Charges that state game laws are being generally violated near Alexandria and that the lakes in that vicinity are becoming mere bathing and boating resorts without any fish in them are contained in a letter written by William Southern, Jr., an editor from Independence, Mo., to his paper, the Examiner. Southern is spending his annual vacation in Minnesota, but finds that the fishing is not as good as it used to be. H. A. Rider, executive agent of the game and fish commission, when shown the letter, said that there is good ground for the charge.

A hearing on the question of putting the lid on Moorhead and various other towns in the Indian country in Northern Minnesota will be held in Washington some time in October, it is expected. The time for the order to go into effect has been postponed until Oct. 30 and there will be a general hearing some time before that. Various cities that are affected are sending petitions to Washington protesting against the order.

Forty-eight gallons of whisky and 288 bottles of beer were confiscated by Special Officer Way of Akeley at Park Rapids and for a time the main street was literally running with liquor. The whole consignment was spilled on the street by the officer. A wagonload of liquor was on its way to an alleged blind pig. The goods was in charge of a farmer and the liquor was for a well known firm at Park Rapids.

Mrs. Hans Dalager of Glenwood is the first person in Pope county to pay an inheritance tax. The tax amounted to $60.74. Hans Dalager, a farmer, died last spring. When his will was probated it was found that he had left farms and other property worth $66,060. This he had accumulated as a farmer in Pope county. When he settled in the county about forty years ago he was practically penniless.

During the past two years the chemical laboratory of the state dairy and food department has analyzed 6,026 samples of products which have been sent in by the inspectors, who doubted their purity under the state laws. Of this number 1,997 samples were found to be impure.

Edward Yanish, St. Paul postmaster, announced that the receipts at the St. Paul postoffice during August, 1910, were $94,697.73, against $91,623.26 in August, 1909, showing a gain of $3,074.47, or a little over 3½ per cent.

A deal has been made at Lake City whereby P. H. Rahilly disposed of his 1,200-acre farm to James McCahill of Duluth for $100,000. Mr. Rahilly personally conducted the operation of this large farm for fifty-two years.

Real estate valuations of the city of St. Paul will show an increase of approximately $10,000,000 over the figures of 1908. For the first time in the last fourteen years an entire new valuation has been made.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

The North German conference of the Methodist Episcopal church lost one of its oldest pastors when Rev. J. C. Pfeiffer, retired, died at St. Paul. Rev. Mr. Pfeiffer suffered a stroke of apoplexy about five weeks ago, and this, coupled with heart trouble, caused his death. Altogether he worker in the Northern conference twenty-four years. During that time he had charges at Rochester, Kenyon and other cities. He was a little more than sixty-five years old.

Rev. Brother Emery, assistant principal of the cathedral high school of Duluth, is dead following an operation for appendicitis. Rev. Brother Emery was twenty-eight years old and was born in St. Paul.

Ejsype Filiatrault, aged seventy years, a pioneer resident of Minnesota, is dead at Duluth. He had resided in Duluth twenty-three years and formerly resided in Faribault.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

John Gleason, auditor of Polk county from 1894 until 1900, during the Populistic regime, and later a member of the board of appeals of the state railway and warehouse commission, was struck by an interurban car at Oregon City, Ore., and instantly killed.

Henry Stein, aged twenty-three, employed as car repairer for the Duluth and Iron Range railway at Two Harbors, fell backward, striking his head on a block, breaking his neck and killing him instantly.

Fred Parker, the Hamline aviator, smashed two blades of his propeller when attempting to make a flight and thus disabled his machine. He was somewhat bruised in the accident.

TESTNG FIRE CLAY.

The Most Practical Method Is to Literally Eat It.

Fire clay has been in use for centuries, and yet I believe the industry is one which lacks definite laws more than any other, including those which are either modern or ancient and of less prominence. You can go to a manufacturer of steel and specify what you want by actual figures or statements and you can check the product by chemical analysis or mechanical tests and thus make sure you get what you need. The producer knows how to combine certain elements and what quantities of various kinds to combine in order to get a result at least very closely approaching what you call for, but not so in the fire clay business. In the past the most skilled and highest salaried chemists have been employed to make tests, to promote and carry through investigations on the natural product and to study the workings of certain manufactured and elaborated articles derived therefrom. The result has been, generally speaking, confusion worse confounded. Two professors, working at similar times on brick or clay obtained from the same source and manufactured under exactly equal conditions, have recorded diametrically opposed conclusions! The same scientists at different periods have reached vastly varying conclusions when testing identical qualities and shapes of bricks, so can you wonder if a prominent fire clay manufacturer should exclaim, as I heard one on an occasion after having the above experience, "All tests of fire clay are empirical, and I would sooner trust our superintendent to pick and select his clays in the old fashioned way than pay a high fee for a highbrow's recommendations?" The chief method of testing fire clay by a practical man is literally to eat it. He can detect grit and sand best by that method, and a good fire clay (free from silica, quartzite or flint clay) is free from grit. His only other personal test is by experiment.—Engineering Magazine.

The government Crop Reporter for June contains some very interesting statistics on the fruit situation by states and for the country as a whole. The condition of apples, which outrank in value any other single fruit crop, is placed at 53 per cent as against 61.4 for June, 1909, and 62.8 per cent which is the ten year average yield. Washington leads with a percentage of 85, Oregon shows 83 per cent, while of other important apple producing states Idaho promises 92 per cent of a normal crop, New York 75, Colorado 58, Michigan 57, Arkansas 70 and Missouri 22 per cent. Iowa was hardest hit of all with the April freezes and shows but 7 per cent of a normal prospect. The estimate on pears for the whole country is placed at [illegible] per cent of a normal crop as compared with 61.8 a year ago, while the prospect for the peach crop is placed at [illegible] per cent as against 54.1 per cent a year ago.

TAXATION AND COUNTY DIVISION

Some More Facts and Figures for Our Readers.

The claims of the anti-divisionists in the present county fight that the small counties in the state have heavy taxes and that the large ones have lower taxes are not borne out by the facts. Their statements are incorrect, as the following tables show. The first is a list of ten of the small counties of the state (though twenty might have been taken as well) with the number of townships in each and the county taxes each raised last year. The second list is of ten of the large counties. The figures are the state auditor's and their correctness cannot be questioned. As Red Lake county and a few others have no county poor fund, this amount was deducted from the total county tax in the counties which maintain the county poor, so all could be compared on the same basis.

These totals, with the exception of poor tax, constitute all the taxes which can be legally raised by county authority. That the smaller counties are meeting their necessary expenses at much less cost proportionally is plainly seen. The difference would also be more pronounced if the largest counties, such as St. Louis, Koochiching and Cass were included. They were left out in the tables in order to count only such large counties as corresponded with Red Lake and the smaller ones in age, wealth and settlement.

The average yearly county tax in the ten small counties is $22065; in the ten larger, $84507. This, of course, does not include a large sum of indirect taxes which are avoided in the small counties by reason of their nearness of their population to the county seat town.

The average number of townships in the smaller group is 14; in the larger one, 45. Reduced Red Lake will have 12 and Pennington county will have 17 full townships. Even reduced Red Lake will be as large as many of the best counties in the commonwealth, so the subject of size ought to be satisfactory to all concerned.

The average cost per township for county government in the small counties is $1565, while in the large ones it is $1869; again showing that the small counties have the advantage.

The average per capita cost of the county government in the two lots of ten each is $1.05 for the small counties and $3.29 for the large ones. This is caused by the great number of deputies, clerks, and assistants and by the court expense occasioned by the distance from the county seats.

Pennington county will have $2,113,256 assessed valuation, which is almost twice what Red Lake had when she started and is in excess of what several of the old counties of the state have at the present time. It is also equal to that of many others. Reduced Red Lake will have $1,731,343 of valuation, which, to, is greater than Red Lake county had at first. This latter amount is about as several county assessments and larger than a few. So the subject of sufficient property to maintain an efficient government at a low tax rate should not worry anyone. Kanabec, which had no settlers except lumbermen until some twelve years ago and whose land was assessed at $4.50 per acre on an average last year, while that of Red Lake was valued at $4.66, is assessed at only $1,780,099. This is less than that of Red Lake or reduced Red Lake or Pennington county, yet Kanabec county raises only $11.148 for revenue purposes and $17,371 for all county expenses. The rate is very low and the taxes the same, and still this county has a beautiful court house—and is in good financial condition. Chisago, Mille Lacs and Isanti and many other very small counties with poorer land than has Red Lake and with a low tax valuation on it all raise small sums for county purposes, as the above tables indicate. Supposing that the $62,924, which was raised for county taxes in Red Lake last year was divided in two and each half assigned to Pennington and reduced Red Lake, these respective amounts would then be still two or three times as large as what it raised for county purposes in the counties cited. Why not admit that what is being done in many of the small counties in the state can be duplicated in Pennington, which will have more people, more property and more good land than has any of the counties under consideration: Even reduced Red Lake could also do as well, if economy were permitted to govern official actions.

Any person desiring to discover the facts about the rates and taxes for himself is urged to study the county and state records and he will find that the division articles, which are based on figures supplied by the state auditor and the county auditor of Red Lake county, are not overdrawn nor distorted but represent real conditions. Nothing can be more convincing or correct than the office records of the two officials named and despite the statements to the contrary, it must be admitted that the small counties in the state have the low tax rates, the low taxes and the most efficient county governments.

Twenty-Eight Good Reasons.

1. Every citizen of Pennington can reach Thief River Falls, transact his business and return in one day to his home.

2. Thief River Falls asks no help from Pennington county. She does not need it. Instead, she presents Pennington county with a free county building.

3. Pennington county means the spending of all the road and bridge fund at home and not in the south end of Red Lake.

4. Pennington has no bridges to build, so the road and bridge tax will be cut in two.

5. Pennington county feeds the cow which has been milked at Red Lake Falls.

6. Since the county of Red Lake was organized $40,771.58 have been raised for roads and bridges. Since 1905 all the townships in Pennington county have received only $5325, while Red Lake Falls alone has grabbed $9023.

During the present year Pennington pays 65 percent of the taxes, but to date she has received only 10 per cent of the road and bridge appropriations. The south end has gotten it all.

7. The towns of Hickory, Wyandotte and Black River in Pennington county have received nothing from the road and bridge fund since 1905. Emardsville got $1686.72; Louisville, $3790.80; Poplar River, $3-168, and so on. Even angels would resent that kind of legal robbery.

8. Thief River Falls pays one-third of the Pennington tax and asks nothing in return. Red Lake Falls pays one sixteenth of the county tax and grabs the bulk of the road and bridge fund.

9. Pennington county has $2,300 000 assessed valuation. Old Red Lake had only $1,254,000 when first organized. Pennington county should have a lower tax rate than Red Lake had in its early years of low taxes.

10. Strange as it may seem, it is true nevertheless that the small counties of the state have the low tax rates. Look it up in the state auditor's report and see.

11. Low taxes do not depend on assessment, but on economy and honesty and good management. Red Lake has been robbed and worked, so it has the second highest average tax rate in the state. Beltrami beats it by just a trifle.

12. Pennington county assessment is increasing rapidly. This should mean decreasing taxes if economy is practised.

13. Small counties make for economy, large counties for waste. Study the state auditor's report and confirm this statement.

14. In the four years after, Red Lake was organized, $6356, $6765, $6968 and $7259 paid all officers' salaries, printing, court expenses, etc. The last three years have cost $16,317, $18,620 and $18723 for precisely the same expenses. And there were exactly the same number of offices, but not of officers and deputies and hangers-on, in early years as now.

15. During the first four years of Red Lake, only $394.29 of "Other Special Taxes" were levied. During the last three years $16,490, $19,643 and $18039 have been collected. Let some one tell for what these mysterious "Other Specials" mean.

16. State Auditor Iverson and County Auditor Latendresse supply the divison figures. If wrong then the office records of the above officials are wrong, which no one will admit.

17. The south end can stand a heavy tax, when for every $1 paid in by them they can collect and spend in their own way and among themselves $2 from Pennington county. They don't complain of their taxes; they are too wise.

18. Red Lake county's tax on each man, women and child is $3.32 Polk's is $2.30; Douglas, $1.87; LeSueur, $1.17; Rice, $1.54; Houston, $1.67. Low per capita tax is secured by economy alone.

19. Thief River Falls asks nothing of Pennington county. She will give her a court house free, and will free Pennington county from paying for the palace now building down river.

20. Pennington county has the bulk of the wealth and the votes and pays the greatest part of the taxes. Why not let the big majority rule? It sounds American-like.

21 Present conditions will never change. The supreme court holds that the County Commissioners have sole and absolute control of the county. Do you think the three members who control Red Lake board are going to let go? Never. They dare not.

22. The Eleven Towns will at last have fair representation in county affairs when Pennington is started.

23. Neither size nor wealth make low taxes. Counties are just like families; some rich, some poor. It is economy, thrift, honesty and absence of graft which makes for lower taxes. Pennington county stands for these.

24. One of the first questions asked a farmer when he wants to sell or make a loan is as to the distance his place is from the county seat.

25. Farm lands will be of more value when near a county seat.

26. Even south end people drive and take trains to Thief River Falls every day to trade. As a good trading point it will be even better after it becomes a county seat.

27. Nearly all persons connected with the ditching jobs come from the south end. Pennington will give this work to her own citizens.

28. Salaries of county officers will be about half what they now are, as population and property valuation help fix them. There will be not one deputy or special officer in Pennigton, for they will not be needed. This will save a large sum alone.

PEOPLES STATE BANK

GENERAL BANKING, REAL ESTATE AND INSURANCE.

THE whole world's business is done on credit, and credit is the result of confidence. All the so-called "paper money" of the world is good only because we have confidence in the maker's ability to pay.

The same is true of checks, drafts, money orders, bills of exchange, and notes.

If confidence should be destroyed, all these mediums of business would be absolutely valueless;

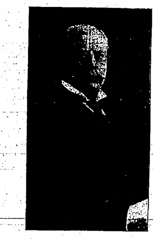
The world's business would stop instantly, and the worst panic ever known would result.

But confidence is growing and prosperity with it. Large bank deposits are signs of confidence—signs of progressive and prosperous communities.

You are doing your duty only when you deposit your money in the banks of your community. The Peoples State Bank will show you every courtesy and consideration.

Defrauded a Minister.

One of the newsagents running on No. 111 and 112, the day passenger train that runs between Thief River Falls and St. Paul, succeeded in defrauding a Newfolden minister out of $10 last Thursday. The newsagent, who was a young fellow, told the clergyman that he had lost a sum of money gambling in St. Paul and that he had to turn this money over to the company when he reached Thief River Falls and if he could not raise it he would lose his job and be arrested. He had a watch which he claimed had cost him [illegible] and he offered to give this to the minister as security for a $10 loan. The minister advanced the money and took the watch. When he arrived in Thief River Falls he discovered that it was worth about $2.50 and made complaint to Chief of Police Lang. Mr. Lang located the newsagent in a saloon and secured the return of the money.



Congressman Halvor Steenerson.

Reports from all parts of the Ninth Congressional District are to the effect that Congressman Halvor Steenerson will be returned to congress by a large majority. This will be a good thing for this section, as it is in need of influence of an able man in congress, to secure much needed legislation, but more particularly an appropriation to improve the navigation of the Red Lake river. Mr. Steenerson has served six years in congress and has secured an knowledge of national legislation that can only be gained by service. His opponent, H. O. Bjorge, is an able man and would make a good congressman in time, but it would be a foolish thing for the district to make a change as Mr. Bjorge would not be able to accomplish anything his first term—it being the history of all new congressmen no matter how able they are. Congressional districts that are changing congressmen every other election are not receiving any favors. Mr. Steenerson will be one of the leaders in the next congress and will be in a position to accomplish much for the district.

Boys Shoot at Tame Geese.

A number of young boys going up in the Thief river in a boat Sunday took a shot at a flock of tame geese belonging to W. O. Long and killed one of the birds. Mr. Long found out who the boys were, but did not have them arrested. However any violations in the future will be prosecuted. It is against the law for any boy under the age of 14 to carry a gun and as there has been considerable complaint, the authorities are going to enforce this law in the future.

Tracklaying Soon Finished.

It is now announced that tracklaying on the new Thief River Falls Duluth line of the Soo will be completed Sept. 24. Less than 20 miles remain to be laid, and the construction crew is averaging over two miles a day.

It is not likely that there will be a passenger service within the next two months, but placing it conservatively it is safe to say that a service will be in operation by Dec. 1.

The roadmaster says that it will take him six weeks to ballast up the new line and while ballast trains are at work it would be difficult to run regular trains. Freight trains carrying building material to the new townsites will be the first to be run.

The County Division.

SOME REMARKS TO THE GAZETTE'S STATEMENTS.

Even granting that Thief River Falls or the north part of the county named Pennington have had, as is claimed by the Gazette, their fair share of the distribution of the road and bridge fund it is nevertheless safe and sane to favor Pennington county's organization, because of a better location for the county seat and for all the people residing in the townships within Pennington county. It is also likely that there will be less expended for road and bridges in the years to come. What has been expended is good and well as the farmer knows, who has the most use for good roads and ditches.

It is no odds to Pennington county citizen even, if it could be so planned, with reference to controling as the "Gazette" outlines to its readers, because the voters would decide. More settlers in the county more voters and in a short time to come there are all possible chances for a larger vote in the country than in the city of Thief River Falls, which, as the Gazette gives it, will have two-thirds of the votes cast, when Pennington county is established.

Honesty and faithfulness is regarded in politics and occasionally, if not always, sets aside party lines. As to the "shifting and homeless men" referred to, why they are as a rule, as much in favor of the interests of the farmers as other business men.

The supposed 1200 voters in Pennington county will be the controlling powe in the county.

The voters will decide.

ALFRED SOMONDSEN.

Bringing Lots of Contests.

The Interior department at Washington has started about twenty contests against settlers of the eleven towns who have made final proof, paid for their land and secured a receiver's receipt. More contests, it is said, will be started in the near future. Insufficient residence and cultivation is the cause of the contest and the outcome is of course hard to tell.

U. S. Commissioner Wilhelm Michelet has been designated as the officer before whom the testimony is to be taken, and the cases will be heard during the months of October and November. A special agent of the government will be here to examine the homesteaders and other witnesses. Most of those homesteaders contested at present are those who have proved up on land in the towns of Reiner, Goodridge and Clover Leaf.

"A Prince of Sweden."

"A Prince of Sweden," a sparkling comedy will be at the Auditorium on Saturday evening, September 24th.

The comedy is in four acts, music and amuseing entertainment furnished by clever comedians and pretty girls, who are alloted many catchy songs and dancing numbers that are sure encore bringers. "A Prince of Sweden" is a play that is clean, wholesome and devoid of all horse play and suggestiveness too often found in the lighter forms of entertainment offered to the theatre going public. The cast employed in this merry comedy was selected with careful attention as to their fitness for characters assumed with the natural result of an evenly balanced company.

The stage scenic as well as the mechanical effects are appropriate in every detail. A number of interesting and novel vaudeville specialties are introduced during the action of the play by various members of the company.

Mr. Primrose has every reason to be proud of the enthusiastic receptions his play receives every place, as the press and public endorse this play as the best Swedish Dialect Comedy now touring this territory.

105 new kindergarten pupils entered the three lowest rooms last week. All the grade rooms are filled and two or three in the Knox and Central are badly crowded. The high school students fill the assembly room, the normal room and one of the grade rooms on the first floor. Two of the grade rooms from the High are housed in the Masonic Block. The total enrollment for the first week was a decided increase over that of last year. The federal census may not meet the expectations of the citizens as to the adult population, but it will surely not disappoint them in the number of little people in the city.

An outline of some high school course of study will appear each week in the school notes.

The lack of heat in the high school building is not tending to aid the pupils in the accomplishment of the school duties. The workmen are waiting for brick.

The new departments of agriculture and manual training, under the control of W. A. Spratt and M. A. Schmitt respectively, start out with large classes.

What becomes of the high school graduates is always a matter of interest. The class of 1910 is located and employed as follows: Selma Hoff, at home in St. Hilaire, will attend normal next year; Esther Stebbins and Bertha Olson, St. Cloud Normal; Lillian Brady, teaching in Washington; Martha Tanem, Ida Ove, Josie Weeks, teaching near Thief River Falls; Lena Lonson, at home for the present, will attend college next year; Lillian Mussey, at home, studying music; Frances Schmitz, State University, Cora Stone, will teach this fall; Gena Granum, St. Olaf College, Northfield; Earl Weeks, Luther College, Fergus Falls; George Hicks, State University; Lewis Iverson, State University; John Ihle, State University; George Jacobson, Carlton College, Northfield; Rasmus Bartleson, newspaper work, Eveleth; Edwin Karwand, Citizens Bank, Thief River Falls; Ward Sharbach, in store at present, will attend college next year; Neil Dahl, State University; Samuel Pope, farming; William Rinker, Fargo College; Alfred Borry, postgraduate work propratory to State University; Fred Protz, electric engineering next year, at home at present; George Rice, at home for the present, taking correspondence course in electric engineering, college next year, Ingwald Fossum, Soo railway employ; James Walker, surveying with county surveyor.

Whereas, pursuant to chapter seven (7), Revised Laws of Minnesota, 1905 a petition was filed with the Secretary of State on the 12th day of May, 1910 praying for the creation of a new county out of the territory now lying in Red Lake County, Minnesota, the same to be known as Pennington county, and described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, according to the United States Government survey thereof, running thence east along the south line of sections nineteen (19), twenty (20), twenty-one (21), twenty-two (22), twenty-three (23), and twenty-four (24) in townships one hundred fifty-two (152) north of each of ranges forty-five (45), forty-four (44), forty-three (43), forty-two (42), forty-one (41) and forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of section twenty-four (24) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty (40) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges thirty-nine (39) and forty (40) west to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north on the east line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the northeast corner of said township one-hundred and fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west, thence running west along the north line of said township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running north along the east line of townships one-hundred fifty-three (153) and one-hundred fifty-four (154) north of range thirty-nine (39) west of the 5th principal meridian, to the southeast corner of Marshall county as the same now exists, thence running west along the southern boundary line of said Marshall county to a point where said boundary line intersects the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian, the said point being the northwest corner of said Red Lake County as the same now exists, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running east on the south line of said township one-hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-five (45) west to the northwest corner of township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, thence running south on the range line between ranges forty-five (45) and forty-six (46) west of the 5th principal meridian to the southwest corner of section nineteen (19) in township one-hundred fifty-two (152) north of range forty-five (45) west of the 5th principal meridian, the same being the place of beginning.

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

Not infrequently the man who complains that those who live near him are not neighborly will be found, if his case is looked into closely, to be himself lacking in some of the essential qualities which characterize a good neighbor.

The sheep, hog and dairy cow fit finely into a system of agriculture which ought more and more to be followed in all sections where the rainfall and winter supply are sufficient to make the raising of stock and keeping of cows possible.

The protracted drought through the upper Mississippi valley country is well shown in the unusually low stage of water in the Father of Waters, the stage being the lowest of which there is any record, a half inch lower than the lowest previous record of 1864.

The Shropshire sheep is moderate in size, hardy and is probably more raised for general purposes than any other single variety. Like Poland-China or Duroc-Jersey hogs, they are first class debt payers and mortgage lifters, and every farm should have a few of them.

The King road drag holds about the same place with reference to the highways that the primary election system does to political affairs—makes the crooked places smooth and fills up the ruts and pot holes. Both instruments have a vital connection with good citizenship.

It is interesting to note that, while many a tabby cat may keep pretty well away from the house in her state of single blessedness, she seems to understand human nature enough to know that when her little ones are presentable she will be accorded a friendly reception.

A lot of farmers will fill silos this fall for the first time. A good many more will have to have a year or two more of slovenly and wasteful handling of the corn crop to persuade them of the value of this best of all aids to successful stock raising and dairy management.

Soil is very much like human nature in that when it has become depleted and degraded it seems to lose its capacity for producing good and wholesome crops, but can still furnish a harbor for sand burs, ragweed and fennel, troublesome and worthless weeds that do nobody any good.

The chief advantage of fall plowing, aside from the fact that the work is done in good season, is due to the exposure of the soil to air and moisture and the disintegrating effect of frost. The beneficence of the service rendered is immense, yet often disregarded and too seldom taken advantage of.

As has been the case for some time past, a good mule is still worth from $10 to $15 per head more than a horse of equal grade and quality. In view of this fact and the further fact that there is less risk in bringing them to a marketable age, the mule business would seem to be on a pretty sound basis.

For a heavy winter coat or a handsome robe to lay before the fireplace not even the bison hide of bygone days surpasses in either texture or beauty the nicely tanned skin of a 1,200 pound Galloway steer. And it resembles the skin of the wild animal in this—that it takes a good wad of money to buy one of them.

The idea of renting trees is rather outlandish, but there is a dealer in New York who is said to make a business of renting out bay laurels, which are about ten feet high, rooted in large portable boxes and exhale a pleasant fragrance in the rooms where they are displayed. The fee paid for the loan of these trees is $20 for each occasion.

Adam was the first tiller of the soil, but it remained for an Englishman of the name of Jethro Tull to demonstrate the simple fact that a deep and thorough tillage of the soil increases the available plant food which it contains. His aphorism, "Tillage is manure," has since been proved faulty in theory, though its practical aspect is now universally accepted.

Any readers who may have set out young orchards the past spring will do well to keep an eye on jack rabbits which may have breeding places in the neighborhood, for we have found that they will not only eat the bark and twigs of young pear and apple trees during the dormant season, but will also nibble the tender leaves and growing shoots when there is an abundance of alfalfa and other herbage to be had.

THE FOREST FIRES.

The unusually dry weather which has prevailed through most of the timbered sections of the great northwest during the past four months has made possible an epidemic of forest fires which have not been exceeded in either extent or losses sustained for a generation. Some of the fires have been set by sparks from passing trains, some by careless campers and hunters, while there is a pretty definite conviction that some of the worst have been of incendiary origin, set by Indians out of spite against the whites or by white owners of timber homesteads, cooped in by the holdings of grasping lumber companies, who have preferred to lose their own property outright in a forest conflagration rather than dispose of it for a song to lumber companies on the humiliating terms which the latter are usually disposed to dictate. Again, other fires have been started by just such idiots as the one who on the evening of the Fourth of July threw firecrackers out of the car window along the railroad right of way near Grant's pass, in southern Oregon, and maybe thought he was rendering his country patriotic service by so doing. While the forest fires have been the worst in years, it is also true that never has the service rendered through the careful organization of the forest rangers and the ready aid of thousands of private citizens been more effective than in the past few weeks. In some sections, however, the forest fires were so large and gained such headway as to be entirely beyond the power of those who were available to fight them. In two or three instances appeals have been made to President Taft by state officials and citizens' committees for the aid of the army in fighting the fires, and he has acceded to the request, promising to furnish the desired aid whenever calls are received. There is no type of conservation which is more practical than this of saving and protecting our timber wealth from this fearful loss resulting from careless fires, and to give aid in reducing this loss to the lowest possible limit is the plain duty of every good citizen.

IRRIGATION IN OREGON.

Western Oregon wheat lands that used to produce sixty bushels per acre have been robbed of their fertility by continual cropping to this cereal until the average yield is now barely twelve bushels per acre. This means that the man who has been in the grain raising business is up against a very real proposition. It was with a view to helping him solve the problem that he has on his hands that the irrigation office of the department of agriculture at Washington undertook an investigation a short time ago with a view to ascertaining the feasibility of irrigation as a means of aiding intensive agriculture in the Willamette, Umpqua, Rogue and tributary valleys. The findings of the investigators—and their report is very encouraging—are embodied in bulletin No. 226 of the office of experiment stations. The bulletin shows that with an abundant water supply and favorable land conformation the problem gives promise of being readily and satisfactorily solved. The bulletin referred to may be had by writing the department of agriculture, Washington.

VALUE OF STOCK TONICS.

Recent exhaustive feeding tests which have been conducted by the Iowa Agricultural college disclose some very interesting facts with reference to the value of the so called stock foods as aids in fitting hogs for market. The data collected show conclusively that these specially prepared foods and tonics were worth nothing whatever along the line claimed, but, on the contrary, that the most rapid as well as the cheapest gains were made by hogs which did not receive any of these "foods" at all. And not even in their capacity as tonics, regulators and improvers of the system, tending to increase capacity for assimilation of foods, did they prove to do what the manufacturers claim for them. Millions of dollars are spent annually for the special foods, and the subject is an important one. With feeders knowing the real facts in the case they will be in a position to pursue such a course with reference to the use or disuse of the feeds as they think will be to their own interest.

BLOWING OUT STUMPS.

It is doubtless due to the vigorous way in which the westerner does most everything that he lays hand to that he frequently uses a good deal more giant powder or dynamite in blowing stumps from the ground than is really needed. In fact, the smaller charge often gives more satisfactory results. A rancher who was relating his experience along this line the other day stated that for a time he had very unsatisfactory results, but when finally he reduced his charges of dynamite to about one-third of what he had been using the explosive did business and lots of it. He learned from his own experience that it is necessary to adjust the charge to the work which it must do, too large an amount of explosive being just as ineffectual as too little.

AN EFFECTIVE TOOL.

There is hardly any machine cultivator that does so good work that there is not need now and then of going over the newly set fruit trees and giving the earth within a radius of two or three feet a stirring to a good depth with a heavy fork, hand cultivator or digger hoe. This treatment will the more effectually prevent a baking of the soil and rapid drying out of the supply of moisture on which the young trees must draw if they are to make a life of it during the dry weather.

A. A. Latendresse,

County Auditor and Candidate for Re-Election.

THE STEEPLE JACK.

He Must Conquer Many Difficulties In His Dangerous Work.

The successful steeple jack must possess determination, perseverance and ingenuity. He must solve many a practical problem in hoisting great bodies aloft. He must know how to fasten a hook over the summit of a skyscraping chimney. He must have the nerve to paint a steeple that sways like a pendulum at the slender top. He must be able to tear down, build up, gild, paint, place electric wires and do many another task that would be difficult enough on the solid earth.

There are many ways of getting up on a steeple, and when all others fail the man will tie a rope around it and then, with a coil on his back, walk round and round it until the entire steeple is covered with rope, and in such case he has probably been round it fully 300 times.

But a steeple is not the most difficult height to climb. Straight, tall chimneys are the hardest of all. There a man has to work with might and main to lift himself inch by inch from the ground to the top. Sometimes the top is 300 feet high. When it is reached a hook is placed over the edge, a pulley is made fast, the swinging chair is hauled up and work begins.

When the chair is near the top it is easier to work, because the ropes are short, but when they lengthen as the ground is approached there is a tendency to swing, and the wind gives impetus.

The steeple jack's safety depends upon the hook, and until he has raised himself almost to the top it is impossible for him to see whether or not the hook, has been properly adjusted. More than once a steeple climber has seen when within ten feet of the top that corrosion of the iron and the collection of soot have so thickened the wall that the hook is merely balanced on the top, so that the slightest pull in the wrong direction would drag it off. Again, the bricks are often loose at the top, and the hook is likely to tear them away.

One of the natural difficulties to conquer is the swaying of all high steeples and chimneys. In a gale a steeple point will sway a foot and a half. Usually it sways from seven to nine inches. Painting it means reaching for a spot on the right side, and finding it on the left, and, when making a dive for it on the left, to see it sway back to the right. Yet in spite of the constant danger a born steeple jack exults in his work and is at home, like the ironworker on the skyscraper, only when high above the world. He can stand triumphantly at any height, if he can have two and one-half square inches to bear his weight.—Harper's Weekly.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

Spooner, Minnesota

Voters Should Be Careful.

G. L. Hanson, an unknown, has filed as a candidate for state senator from this district. He gives his postoffice address as Red Lake Falls and is said to be a farmer residing in ake Pleasant township. There is no question but that this filing is made in order to secure a certain per cent of votes that are intended for A. L. Hanson. Many voters will become confused and vote for the wrong Hanson. Albert Berg, who is A. L. Hanson's opponent, says that he had absolutely nothing to do with the filing of G. L. Hanson, and we give Mr. Berg credit for being too honorable to take this underhanded method of attempting to defeat his opponent. G. L. Hanson was without doubt brought into the race by a small gang of Red Lake Falls politicians that have never stopped at anything to gain a point. They are opposed to A. L. Hanson because he is too square a man to satisfy them and are backing Berg because he is the opponent of Hanson. Personally we do not believe Berg would adopt underhanded methods to defeat Hanson, and the filing of the second Hanson is going to be a boomerang to Berg. The majority of the people like fair play.

Announcement.

I hereby announce myself as a republican candidate for Representative of the 61st district at the primaries to be held September 10, 1910. If nominated and elected I pledge the people of this district to support their demands I am for re-apportionment and good roads.

Respectfully,
Iver A. Krohn.

Least you might forget it, if you want to vote for Hanson for senator, remember it is A. L. and not G. L.

It is said that not a business man in the town of Solway will vote for Iver A. Krohn, who is a candidate for representative against D. P. O'Neill. That is not a very good indorsement for Iver.

And so John Lind refuses to be the kitchen cabinet's nominee for governor. He will continue to have the title of "Honest John," however, even if the members of the k. c. are left out in the cold.

From what information the News has been able to secure from the Mahnomen-Norman county legislative district, A. L. Thompson is going to be nominated for representative. We congratulate the district.

The Northwestern Agriculturist presents figures to show how the rise in prices since 1896 has benefitted the farmers. It notes that: Ten bushels of corn in 1896 bought twenty-one pounds of coffee and today it buys seventy; that ten bushels of wheat got 132 pounds of sugar then and 219 pounds now; twenty bushels of oats bought 128 pounds of nails then and 483 pounds now; ten bushels of flax bought 3,500 shingles then and 5,500 now; a 1,200 pound steer bought 2,615 pounds of barbed wire and now buys 4,218 pounds; a 300 pound hog bought 244 pounds of sugar and now buys 669. Yes, and that is not all. The farmer should realize that today 1,000 bushels of wheat will buy a pretty good touring car and in 1896 would not have bought a dinkey runabout; that about 3,000 bushels of wheat will buy a pretty fair aeroplane, such as could not have been purchased for 1,000,000 bushels then; that for less than the price of one fat hog the farmer can talk by wireless to friends in most any part of the world, a service that all the hogs in the south St. Paul stock yards would not have paid for in 1896. Certainly, the farmer has benfitted by the changed prices during the last fourteen years.

Young Boy Injured.

Holmer Bjorge, a Detroit boy, about 10 years old met with an accident at Waubun Wednesday night that will at best cripple him for life. He and another young man were coming up to Mahnomen on the flyer. They were riding outside the coach and as the train was slowing down to meet the south bound train they were discovered by the brakeman who ordered them off. The other young fellow jumped but Bjorge did not want to get off at that time as the train was going too fast for him to attempt it. According to his story the brakeman was persistent and attempted to force him, striking him on his hands with his lantern. Bjorge jumped just as the train was passing over a cattle guard and he struck this which threw him back under the train. His right foot went over the rail and was cut off about half way to the knee. His friend, on discovering what had happened ran ahead to the train and told the conductor of the accident. The train was backed up and Bjorge taken aboard. He was brought on to Mahnomen where his injuries were attended to by Dr. Kiorland at the Mahnomen house. He was taken home Thursday morning on the local. Young Bjorge, who is a cousin of Hon. H. O. Bjorge, candidate for congress is a graduate from the Detroit High School and is very popular with the young people of that place. He showed more than the ordinary amount of pluck while waiting for the doctor, and elicited considerable admiration from those who saw him.

For County Treasurer.

Mr. Gustav G. Kindseth, candidate for County Treasurer, is not a politician, and if elected will be under no obligations to anyone and will render the humblest citizen the same services as he will the banker or the merchant. The fact that a man has held the same position, bookkeeper and cashier, for the same company for 12 years straight is a good recommendation that he will perform his duties when elected to office. Such a man is Gustav G. Kindseth, candidate for the Republican nomination for County Treasurer at the coming Primary Election to be held September 20.

When Merit Wins.

To the Voters.

To the Voters of the Sixty First Legislative District:

On account of the enormous size of the Sixty First District it is an impossibility for me to see each voter personally, so I take this method of soliciting your vote and support in the approaching primaries.

This is one of the greatest agricultural districts in the state and also one of the largest in the employment of labor. As I am the only candidate in the field who represents the actual toilers, I feel that I am entitled particularly to their support. I may not be perfect, but to err is human and to forgive divine, and were I the acme of perfection it is likely that I would find this good old world of ours rather a lonesome place. However, my acquaintances will vouch for me, that, if elected, my utmost power will be exerted for the best interests of the Sixty First legislative district.

Thanking you for your assistance in this election, I remain.

Respectfully yours,
D. P. O'Neill.

For County Auditor.

I fully intended entering another vocation and had no intention of filing for the office of County Auditor but have been constantly urged to become a candidate for the office by your township and school officials and other men throughout the county with whom I have come into close contact through my relations with them as County Auditor. I have therefore decided to enter the race for County Auditor on the Republican ticket at the primaries to be held September 20.

Having been appoined by your county board May 15, 1909, to fill the unexpired term of the late John B. O'Brien, deceased, I have conducted the affairs of the office to the best of my ability since that time.

I will appreciate the vote and support at the coming primaries of all those who believe I am worthy of filling this responsible position and promise you that if nominated and elected I will conduct the affairs of the office in an honest and impartial manner the same as I have in the past.

Respectfully,
A. A. Lotendrell

"Sore" Employe Causes Trouble.

Spite work upon the part of one man stopped the work of 200 men on the Duluth-Thief River Falls line of the Soo last Thursday at Bemidji. The engine which hauls the track laying apparatus broke down.

The breakdown is said to have been caused by an engineer who became disgruntled and quit work but not, says the officials, until he had unloosened screws and purposely disarranged the mechanism of the engine.

When an effort was made to start the engine the pieces began to fly and in a short time a shaft had been broken and so much machinery was out of place that the engine had to be stopped.

Canvassing Board Appointed.

Judge Watts has appointed the following to canvass the votes cast at the primary election.

Lars Backe, Thief River Falls,
Charles Gustafson, Rockbury,
Stephen Singer, Kratka,
L. O. Cadieux, Terrebonne,
Samuel Gibeau, Red Lake Falls.

The board meets on Sept. 22 at the auditor's office at Red Lake Falls.

WHISTLER TALES.

Some Amusing Peculiarities of the Eccentric Artist.

BARRING OUT BILL BEARERS.

He Knew the Knock of Each Collector and the Amount It Represented. London Cabbies Had Good Reason to Fight Shy of the Erratic Genius.

There was a steady stream of creditors at the King street studio in those days, says a writer in the Century. Whistler made no effort to conceal the fact that he was deeply in debt. One day as we were busily and silently working there came a loud businesslike rap at the door. Whistler listened attentively.

"Psst!" said he. "That's one and ten."

Within half an hour there was another rap, not quite so loud.

"Two and six," said Whistler. "Psst!"

"What on earth do you mean?" I asked after a time.

"One pound ten shillings; two pounds six shillings. Vulgar tradesmen with their bills, colonel. They want payment. Ah, well!" he sighed with an exaggerated air of sadness and returned to his canvas.

Then came another knock, a most gentle, insinuating rap.

"Dear me," said Whistler, "that must be all of twenty! Poor fellow, I really must do something for him! So sorry I'm not in."

I could not take the situation so placidly and seized eagerly the first opportunity of financial aid that presented itself. A rich American, sojourning in London, asked me what he could purchase and take back with him in the way of art.

"By all means get a set of Whistler's etchings. Unquestionably he will make for you a selection. I'll speak to him." I told him, and hurried back with the good news.

Whistler was delighted, and for a day worked busily, overhauling and sorting his proofs. The selection was a splendid one and called for a substantial payment. It was arranged that Whistler should meet the purchaser at a bank in Queen street the following morning and receive his check.

Most men under the circumstances would have thought of little else, but by the next morning Whistler had wholly forgotten his engagement. He had begun a new canvas, and was completely absorbed in it. For a while I expostulated in vain.

"Come, Whistler," I said finally, "you have been away from America so long that you don't appreciate the value of time to the traveler, particularly the American traveler. You must not keep the man waiting."

"Very well," said he, laying down his brush, with a sigh. "Now we'll go."

"Why we?" I replied. "I don't want to go," I protested firmly. To tell the truth, I was looking forward with a great deal of comfort to a morning all to myself.

"Oh, but you must," he said calmly, bringing my coat and hat, and presently we stood in front of the house signaling a cab.

One came up readily enough, but, after one scrutinizing look upon the cabby's part, drove swiftly by; another went through the same strange proceedings. I looked questioningly at Whistler—this odd circumstance had happened before we were together—but Whistler was calmly signaling. At length a cabby took us in.

Whistler always carried as a walking stick a long, slender wand, a sort of a mahlstick, nearly three-quarters of his own height. We were no sooner seated than he began poking his stick at the horse. The animal reared, plunged wildly and started down the street at a breakneck gallop, while the astonished cabby swore freely and tugged desperately at the reins. Whistler looked calmly ahead and kept poking.

Butcher boys and grocer boys made wild leaps for safety; outraged cabbies whipped their horses out of the way just in time; burly draymen bawled curses after us, and still we went merrily on. Little wonder, thought I, in the midst of my amazement and resentment, that Whistler never gets the same cab twice.

Suddenly he began waving his cane and shouting "Whoa!" He took the astonished cabby severely to task for driving so fast upon the public highway and ordered him back to a corner we had just passed.

Here a greengrocer's shop, with its orderly and colorful array of fruits and vegetables, had caught Whistler's eye as we whirled by. He surveyed it critically now from two different positions, the cabby merely obeying his orders, under the belief, I presume, that it was policy to humor a lunatic.

"Isn't it beautiful!" exclaimed Whistler. He pointed his long cane at one corner. "I believe I'll have that crate of oranges moved over there—against that background of green. Yes, that's better," he added contentedly.

We drove on to the bank, where we found the American pacing up and down in no pleasant frame of mind; but Whistler soon had him pacified, and we left him waving and smiling adieus at us.

The incident at the greengrocer's shop reads like an arrant affectation. It was not, however. Whistler, as usual, was merely most natural. The following morning he posted his easel at the corner and painted the shop that pleased him.

MERCIFUL CAESAR.

A Story of the Great Roman and a Band of Pirates.

Caesar traveled with the retinue of a man of rank, and on his way to Rhodes he fell in with an adventure which may be something more than legend. When he was crossing the Aegean, his vessel is said to have been taken by pirates. They carried him to Pharmacusa, an island off the Carian coast, which was then in their possession, and there he was detained for six weeks with three of his attendants, while the rest of his servants were sent to the nearest Roman station to raise his ransom.

The pirates treated him with politeness. He joined in their sports, played games with them, looked into their habits and amused himself with them as well as he could, frankly telling them at the same time that they would be hanged.

The ransom, a very large one, about £10,000, was brought and paid, Caesar was set upon the mainland, near Miletus, where, without a moment's delay, he collected some armed vessels, returned to the island, seized the whole crew while they were dividing their plunder and took them away to Pergamus, the seat of government in the Asiatic province, where they were convicted and crucified. Clemency was not a Roman characteristic. It was therefore noted with some surprise that Caesar interceded to mitigate the severity of the punishment. The poor wretches were strangled before they were stretched on the crosses and were spared the prolongation of their torture.—James Anthony Froude.

Making It Plain.

"Popper," said little Willie Billups, "what does the paper mean when it says that when it comes to getting next to the people, Colonel Blinks has all the other candidates lashed to the mast?"

"That is the slang way of saying, my son," returned Billups, "that for keeping his eye peeled old man Blinks has his opponents skinned a mile.

"How did he do it?"

"He always went with his wife shopping to match things."—Baltimore American.

STEENERSON IS COMING

Hon. Halvor Steenerson, representative in congress from this district, will deliver a speech in the Auditorium on Saturday evening, Sept. 17. All of the voters should turn out and hear him. Mr. Steenerson is an orator and will have something of interest to say.

County Division Talk

Men who are determined to disbelieve will do so regardless of reason, of argument, or of positive proof that they are wrong.

An antidivisionist in last weeks Gazette of Red Lake Falls makes the statement that he opposes county division "because the taxes would be so high". He can easily learn, if he really desires to know the truth, that the current county tax rates for revenue, roads and bridges, etc. are at the maximum—absolutely the highest the law will permit—and that the average rate of county taxation is the second highest in the state, 45 mills, and is only exceeded by that of Beltrami county.

This, of course, has not prevented the board of county commissioners from raising taxes beyond this legal limit as was done last fall when they levied a four mill tax for building a court house and at the same time sold bonds for $37,000 for the same purpose. By voting for the present conditions and Red Lake county, this farmer is certainly assured of the present highest tax rates and of the illegal and exorbitant taxes in addition; whereas, if he votes for Pennington county he will surely cut off the illegall taxes and secure a great reduction in his other taxes.

This Wyandotte farmer ought to explain to his neighbors why his good friends the triumvirate which control the board of commissioners had not given his town one cent for the past six years not one cent—of the road and bridge fund: while in the same period they have permitted Red Lake Falls to grab $9023 and have given Emardsville $1686, Louisville, $3790, Garnes, $1149, Terrebonne, $2401, and so on without limit throughout the south end. He has faithfully paid in his road and bridge tax for years—this year he is paying two mills on every dollar of his property—and his supposed friends have for years collected it and spent it down south and have left him to plug along through the mud or over rough roads or over no roads at all. His town of Wyandotte should have as good highways as any southern town, and it would if the road taxes paid there by the farmers had been spent in the town and not in the city of Red Lake Falls and the south end.

This good farmer; who fears the high taxes when they are as high now as the law will allow, is probably honest in his belief, but he fails to understand the situation, or he would smite the hand which has so presistently robbed him and his neighbors in the past. If he does understand the situation and know that he is giving away his taxes and is receiving nothing in return, then he is simply an elic a being for this selfish old world, particularly for the south end of Red Lake county. He should be transported hence, where only he and his heavenly like are found—far from the gang below Mason and Dixon line—who cheerfully part him of his taxes yearly and at the same time make him believe they are his friends and are doing him a good turn—certainly "doing" him.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette says, There is not a farmer in Red Lake county who will not be a loser if the county is divided".

Sure thing!

They will forever lose the chance of again being soaked by the Gazette some $3,000 for the years county printing, when three other county papers offered to do the same work for less than half what the Gazette is receiving. The Gazette's bid was 60 cents per folio for the proceedings, the Thief River News was 25 cents and the Thief River Press bid 29 cents.

They will loose the chance of letting Red Lake Falls grab $9,023 of the farmer's road and bridge fund, while all the 17 north end towns in Red Lake county during the same period got only $5,000 and had to wade through mud and bad roads in order that the county seat town might enjoy the luxury of cement walks and beautiful bridges.

They will lose the pleasure of paying a four mill tax for building court houses, when at the same time some $37,000 bonds were sold to raise funds for the same structure.

They will lose the blessed opportunity of paying the very highest tax rates allowed by law, and these topped off by illegal and exorbitant taxes.

They will lose the inglorious honor of paying the second highest average county taxes in the whole state 45 mills.

They will lose the opportunity of furnishing employment to the stable boys, the hotel men, the liveries and the professional hang ers on who travel from the county seat to examine, estimate and report on the ditches, while the farmers sit idly by at home and wonder why they themselves, who furnish the funds for all this, could not perform these simple tasks to which are attached such fine fat fees.

They will also lose their misrepresentation on the county board, the unamerican system adopted by the three controlling members of the board.

They will lose the task of helping to maintain the rottenest financial scheme which ever succeeded in Minnesota in covering up its tracks, while it created high taxes to support a crowd of hangerson who have no visible means of support, yet wax fat beyond measure.

These farmers will further lose the privilege of voting for a condition under which petitions were twice stolen, county house burned, and funds, raised to dig the farmers ditches, mysteriously happened in a fund for the construction of a new court house.

Oh, yes! These farmers, the Gazette will find, are going to lose a whole lot of things next November, but, at the same time, they are not going to lose the choice opportunity of delivering a smashing rebuke to a newspaper which has the matchless nerve to preach economy and honesty to the farmers, while it is filching the county of exactly half the cost of the year's printing.

For Shame, Gazette! Have you no sence of newspaper honor left at all? Do you really think the level headed farmers are gullible enough to believe you are fighting for decency and low taxes, when you are now receiving 60 cents per folio for the printing for 1910 while the other papers would have done the same work for 25 and 29 cents respectively?

The Gazette! "Because of the property valuation of the county and land would be taxed out of sight."

This is a stock in trade assertion of the antidivisionists and is never supported by facts. That is false absolutely so, let the following figures supplied by County Auditor Latendresse prove.

Red Lake county had $1,254,900 of taxable property when organized in 1897. Today Pennington territory has $2,113,256 and reduced Red Lake has $1,831,343. Pennington has 75 percent more than had old Red Lake and even the south half will have 42 percent more.

With exactly the same number of county officials elected by the people in 1897 as now, the old Red Lake county with its small valuation maintained its county government for the few first years for the sum of $11523, $12074 and $12640. In the last years it has taken $46824, $49-212 and $62924- a gain of from 400 to 500 percent. With increased property the taxes have increased tremendously. If the valuation had been decreasing the county officers would have straved, as there would have been no taxes to collect. Either horn of the dilemma proves that the above much advertised argument against division is pure talk and nothing else.

The truth of the whole matter is that it is economy, efficiency, honesty, absence of graft, absence of indirect public thievery which produce low taxes and good government. Study small Kanabec county, with a land valuation of only $4.50 per acre, while that if Red Lake was $4.66 in 1909, and other small new counties where the valuation is low and where the taxes are the same and the reasons will soon appear why these conditions are as found.

The Gazette "He (the farmer) should do more long thinking right away quick and get onto the job".

This latest literary gem divulges the secret of the success of the men in hiding. "Get onto the job". And These gentry were ever "onto the job" and a sorry mess they have made of it for the taxpayers. To be a master of the finance in the neighborhood of the powers that be you must be "onto the job"

The second highest average rate of county taxation in the state, 45 mills; the maximun tax rates for county purposes; county funds overdrawn some $17192.40; illegal levies for building purposes, a tax levy of almost one and one half percent, when the highest the law permits is one percent; taxes increasing 400 to 500 percent in ten years; an indetedness of some $90000 with nothing to show for it, county debts funded and refunded at the county rate in interest of five and half to six percent to give some one a rakeoff; petitions stolen and county buildings burned; redistricting of the county every refused; ditch funds moved back and fourth to suit the men in hiding; these and many other similar actions emphasize the conclusion that there are now and have been for years certain individuals in the neighborhood of the county seat, who in the classic language of the bard down river, have "got onto the job".

CALDWELL'S

In order to acquaint the voters of the Sixty-First Legislative District more fully with my career as a citizen of the State of Minnesota and as a member of two legislative sessions of the legislature of the state, I herewith submit the following statement for their consideration.

A Farmer.

I was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1853, and arrived in Stillwater at the age of 18. When of age, I entered upon and proved up a homestead in Big Stone County, Minnesota, and have followed up farming as an occupation ever since, being at present so engaged near Thief River Falls.

In The Legislature.

In the sessions of the state legislature of the years 1893 and 1899, I served as a member of the House from the district of which Big Stone County was a part. While in the legislature, I gave my active support to some of the most important legislation affecting the farming interests and the laboring men that has ever been ennacted in this state; this, too, at a time when opposition to corporations was not as pleasant a pastime as it now is.

Did Good Work.

I aided in the organization of the Farmers' Alliance, and was one of those who had the honor of helping to establish the binding twine industry. Other bills I supported, are: the Jacobson four percent gross earning tax law; the law compelling railways to select swamp lands; the election of the railway and warehouse commissioners by popular vote: the measure prohibiting railways from raising rates without the approval of the railway and warehouse commissioners; the bill for the protection of railway employees; the bill providing for the state elevator at Duluth; the creation of the state dairy and food commission and preventing the adulteration of food; establishing a board of appeals in matters of grain inspection; a bill favoring licensing commission merchants and requiring that they report returns to consignor within twenty-four hours; forcing all elevators to become public elevators requiring a license; a bill granting an annual appropriation for the Soldiers' Home; the Gutterson bill granting the special aid to certain rural, graded and high schools; a bill regulating the sale of binding twine; a measure for the redemption from Foreclosure sale on chattel mortgage the bill authorizing villages to vote on the establishment of lighting plants; the various initiative and referendum measures introduced; the appropriation for mailing "The History of the Minnesota Soldiers in the Civil War" to all the veterans, and the first primary election measure introduced in the legislature. I also introduded two score bills, all but three of which I succeeded in passing through the House,—many of which finally were placed on the statute books. Among these is one making a promissory note legal payment on an insurance policy, and another known as the Torrens Land Transfer law, this latter ailing to pass in the senate.

Experience Valuable.

I believe that my four years experience as a legislator would be a valuable asset for the House member from the Sixty-First District, particularly at this session of the legislature, and I feel confident that my official record, as briefly set forth in the above statement, definitely places me on the side of the tax-payer. Believing my platform which appears in all the papers of the district merits the serious consideration of all persons interested in the masses and welfare of the state, I respectfully solicit your support and vote at the approaching primary election.

Very truly yours,

D. P. O'Neill.

"Kurre Johnson," the clever editor of the Svenska Kuriren (Chicago), claims that Herman de Lagerkrantz was compelled to leave his post at Washington because he had committed a series of diplomatic blunders while serving in the capacity of Sweden's minister in Washington. He claims that Lagerkrantz was much criticised for the way in which the Swedish crown prince was entertained by the "Four Hundred" in the East and that the prince, through Lagerkrantz' arrangement, was not given an opportunity to visit the Western states, where the Swedish element predominates. Secondly, he claims that one reason why Lagerkrantz was recalled was because he attended a banquet given in New York in honor of Mayor Gaynor, on which occasion the Swedish minister was called on for a toast and referred to New York's mayor as the next president of the United States. If this is true it may be that these were some of the reasons why Mr. Lagerkrantz has been recalled to Stockholm. At any rate, opinions in the Swedish press are at variance on this subject and most of the papers seem to maintain that he was recalled because of ill health. Thus far his successor has not been chosen, but many believe that Count Wachtmeister will be the man. Count Wachtmeister was at one time secretary to the Swedish legation at Washington and is married to an American, a Miss Hubbel of Des Moines, Ia.

Joseph Smith, the Mormon president from Salt Lake City, Utah, was recently a visitor in Stockholm. He is making a round trip in Sweden, Norway and Denmark, where his apostles have been operating at a lively rate during the last few years. The Mormon propaganda has spread at such a rapid rate in the country districts in the northern section of the country that some of the government officials have become alarmed at its progress. The worst feature is that it induces so many people to emigrate to America and this is just what the good people of Sweden are trying to prevent, at least those who are patriotic enough to remain at home. The Mormon representatives who visit Sweden and Norway are not openly preaching the doctrine of polygamy, but they are succeeding in making hundreds of people emigrate to Utah and other Western states, where they tell their followers that the chances for industrial and economic betterment are the very best.

The former mayor of Nora, Mauritz Axell, committed suicide the other day in Stockholm by shooting himself in the head. Mr. Axell, who during the past few years had been in ill health, had come to Stockholm to secure medical treatment. He was a university graduate and was very popular in his home town, where he had been mayor for many years. He was also in good financial circumstances and it is believed that it was on account of his poor health that he decided to end his own life.

In Krimsta the other day A. H. Lundberg was arrested for a series of embezzlements, which certainly mark a record in the history of crimes. Lundberg had been traveling from one end of the country to the other selling enlarged pictures, which he never delivered. His rule was to induce each one who wanted to have a picture enlarged to pay down a certain sum and in this way he succeeded in collecting not less than 6,000 crowns. He was finally caught in the act and has been placed under arrest.

Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf captured the highest prize for jumping and running the other day and proved himself a sportsman of no small resources. He completed a long distance running race, 10,000 meters, which he completed in 47 minutes and 11 seconds. The crown prince is naturally elated over his showing and at some future date he will try to break this record. He is an enthusiastic sportsman and at the end of his run the other day he did not show that he was fatigued in the least.

Not for many years has there been such a poor fruit crop as this. In the southern section of the country there will be a fair apple crop, but, generally speaking, this crop has been a failure. All berries, pears and plums are commanding an unusually high price in the markets.

The Norwegian steamer Falco of Christiania sank in the North sea about two weeks ago. The crew, consisting of twenty-two men, managed to lower the lifeboats before the ship sank and all lives were saved. One evening when the weather was unusually clear and bright it was noticed that the ship had a leak. The pumps were started, but in spite of the most heroic efforts on the part of the crew the water kept rising and soon it was apparent to the captain and crew that the only salvation was to get into the lifeboats and make the best of it. Captain Kreutz Hansen and his crew were fortunate in striking calm weather after they had entered the lifeboats and after rowing for a day and a half they struck Lister, where they succeeded in landing in safety. Had the sea been ever so little rough it would have been impossible for them to land and the chances to be picked up by some other vessel seemed to be very slim.

The establishment of direct steamship communication with the United States will be of immense value to the country if we are to believe what the Norwegian newspapers state. The Norwegian-American Steamship company has recently been organized in Christiania with a capital of 10,000,000 crowns and the directors of the company have already been authorized to purchase the fast steamer Kaiser Friedrich in Hamburg. The boat will be rechristened Leif Erickson. A member of the board of directors is Consul E. H. Hobe of St. Paul and six other leading Norwegian-Americans are reported to be interested in the company. The new steamship line will do much to increase the American tourist traffic in Norway.

For the purpose of encouraging the export trade from Norway to Mexico the Norwegian government has decided to establish a consular service in Mexico and Captain M. Lie has been appointed consul in Mexico City. Norwegian ships anchor in the Mexican harbor and export goods are shipped there every year and it is considered a good move on the part of the government to establish a Norwegian consulate in the Mexican capital.

The well edited Christiania, a monthly magazine, which has since Jan. 1 been published by Madame Martha Steinsvig, has been discontinued owing to lack of patronage. Thirty workingmen, who were employed in erecting fortifications on Saltholmen, went on a strike the other day. They simply hired a launch and struck out for Copenhagen, for they were lonesome for their families. They were too far away from home and because they could not reach their homes Saturday nights they went on a strike. When they had completed their visit in Copenhagen they returned to their work on the lonely island and their employers, who are none other than Danish government officials, seemed glad to have them come back. After this the men will be given an opportunity to visit their families a little oftener.

Madame Andrea Franck, the well known and energetic patroness of the Seamen's mission in Calcutta, India, is at present enjoying a visit to her native country and incidentally giving a few lectures in some of the larger cities of the country. Perhaps no European woman has done so much for sailor boys as Madame Franck and she has devoted years of sacrifice to build up the Seamen's mission in Calcutta. Madame Franck will also visit France and Germany when returning to India, in which countries she will also deliver lectures in behalf of her cause.

The International Sailors' conference, which convened recently in Copenhagen, proved to be more or less of a farce. A controversy arose between the German sailor delegates on the one hand and the British and American sailors on the other and no resolutions of any importance were passed. After discussing and deliberating for two days, first in one direction and then in another, the conference broke up practically in a row.

It is seldom that editors are classed as burglars, but there is a recent case in Denmark which proves that even the editors will sometimes steal. Arthur Jensen and Valdemar Ahrnell, editors of the anarchist paper in Copenhagen known as the Piraten (the Pirate), have been arrested for repeated attempts at burglary in the city. Their paper has been put out of business.

The hotels and cafes have had a most prosperous season this year. Never before have there been as many tourists visiting the city and never before have the prices of eatables and accommodations been as high as this year. Every hotel has been overcrowded and tourists would have to reserve rooms far in advance if they wanted to secure comfortable accommodations.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, on a party vote, Representative Madison of Kansas, insurgent, siding with the Democrats, adopted a motion declaring Secretary Ballinger an unworthy public servant and calling for his retirement from public life. There was protest from the Republican members, who tried in vain to make the point of no-quorum, but were overruled. The resolution asking for the removal of Ballinger was passed by the votes of Senators Fletcher and Purcell and Representatives James, Graham and Madison. The four first named are Democrats and Mr. Madison is a progressive Republican.

With an overwhelming majority of the delegates standing solidly for federal control in conservation the second National Conservation congress at St. Paul came to an end. The final hours were a turmoil from start to finish, with vigorous speeches from a small but lung-powerful coterie of states' rights men from Washington, Idaho and Montana. The resolutions adopted advocate federal control of natural resources and follow closely the ideas of Roosevelt and Pinchot. Henry Wallace of Des Moines, Ia., was elected president of the congress, Gifford Pinchot declining the honor.

Using his power as chairman of the Ballinger-Pinchot committee, called to meet at the West hotel at Minneapolis, Senator Knute Nelson adjourned the committee meeting until Tuesday, Sept. 13, when the members are directed to meet in Chicago. The action of the chairman angered the minority members of the committee and they held a meeting and at once made public their findings in the case, which condemn the actions of Secretary Ballinger and call for his removal from office. The minority then adjourned until next December.

That the vigilance of the customs agents at the port of New York is profitable is shown by a report from Surveyor Henry, showing that over $500,000 worth of jewelry has been seized from alleged smugglers in the last two months. More than half of the gems were taken from women and about half is still in the hands of the authorities awaiting confiscation or adjudication.

One hundred thousand people were in the great Eucharistic congress procession at Montreal and participated in the carrying of the host. The most solemn processional known in the Roman Catholic church throughout the world was held for the first time in the history of this continent. The spectacle was witnessed by 500,000 people.

Sibley and four co-defendants in connection with Sibley's nomination as the Republican candidate for congress at the June primaries returned true bills against each of the defendants. Lee O'Neil Browne, a minority leader in the Illinois legislature, charged with bribery in connection with the election of William Lorimer to the United States senate, was found not guilty by a jury in the criminal court at Chicago. FINALLY SHOT AND UNARMED

Minneapolis Prisoner Slashes Six Men in Attempt to Escape.

Theodore Olander, a prisoner who was being taken from the Minneapolis city jail to police court, stabbed six men, officers and prisoners, and was himself shot half a dozen times in the legs in a desperate effort to escape.

Officers did not know that Olander had a knife, though he had been searched at the police station. Without warning he pulled away from his captors and wielded the weapon with deadly effect on everybody around.

Jailer Howard Gerrish pulled his gun and peppered Olander's feet and legs and the knife was taken from him after he had fallen. He was taken to the city hospital. Those injured by his thrusts are:

Nicholas Smith, captain of detectives, lip and chin cut; John Galvin, Bertillon detective, arm slashed; John Hoglund, a prisoner held on a murder charge, cheek ripped open; James Laughlin, a witness, face and arm cut; John Isklerka, gashed in the arm; Roy Glancy, arm cut.

THREE MEN UNDER ARREST

Are Charged With Recent Incendiary Fires at New Duluth.

The sixth incendiary fire in New Duluth within ten days completely destroyed the finishing room and warehouse of the Thompson Furniture company and caused a loss estimated at $30,000, about half covered by insurance.

Three men, said to have been seen running away from the scene, were arrested on suspicion of having started the conflagration and were taken to police headquarters for examination. The fire was the most disastrous yet reported.

Last week the plant of the W. H. Rieckhoff box factory was burned, with a loss of $20,000, partly insured. Previously the company suffered from two fires, causing a combined loss of about $50,000. The Thompson Furniture company had a small blaze and the New Duluth Lumber company had a loss of $2,000 a short time ago. One of these fires undoubtedly was of incendiary origin.

FIND SKELETONS IN A CAVE

Young Women Discover Evidence of Double Murder.

Mute evidence of a double murder on the lonely shores of Isle Royal was discovered at Siskiwit bay. Two women, trained nurses, were walking on the shore of the bay when they discovered a little cave about 200 yards from the shore line. On investigating the cave they found the skeletons of two men.

Their training enabled the young women to examine the gruesome find, and they state positively that the men could not have crawled into the position in which they were lying, but must have been pushed in there after being killed. The skull of one of the men had been fractured by a blow from some blunt instrument.

STREET CAR MEN ARE ROBBED

Masked Bandits Hold Up a Car in St. Paul.

Two masked bandits held up a Rice street car at St. Paul and at the point of pistols forced the conductor, Henry Trudeau, to deliver $23 and his watch, valued at $1[illegible]. Motorman Hauser was also forced to put his hands in the air, but the highwaymen found only 5 cents in his pockets. The robbers made their escape, but a good description was given to the police.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

LIND WILL NOT MAKE RACE

Letter Declining the Nomination Was Written on Aug. 14 but Has Just Been Made Public.

John Lind has refused to accept the Democratic nomination for governor of Minnesota.

The letter of refusal and resignation was written Aug. 14 and mailed at Everett, Wash., upon Mr. Lind's return from Alaska. During his trip North the former governor had an opportunity to read the telegrams and letters sent him after his nomination by the state convention in Minneapolis.

It was at the request of State Chairman Frank A. Day that the letter was withheld from publication. Mr. Day asked Mr. Lind's permission to delay the final announcement until the nominee should arrive in Minnesota and Mr. Lind granted the request. During the past three weeks the leaders of the party have been at work trying to secure the right man to head the party.

Judge T. D. O'Brien has been repeatedly urged to make the race. The judge has consistently refused and while he is still being argued with in an effort to induce him to change his mind there is little hope entertained of final victory in that direction.

Others who are being considered are Judge C. W. Stanton of Bemidji, though it is believed that it will be impossible to force the nomination on Judge Stanton; Senator J. T. Knox of Jackson, J. M. Freeman of Olivia, John Jenswold of Duluth, Einar Hoidale of Minneapolis, Fred W. Johnson of New Ulm and W. E. McEwen, state labor commissioner.

IN A SERIES OF ACCIDENTS

One Killed and Three Hurt by Autos in Minneapolis.

One woman was killed and three men were injured, one of them seriously, in a series of automobile and motorcycle accidents at Minneapolis.

Mrs. C. F. Sandhoss, forty-three years old, wife of the assistant city engineer of Minneapolis, sustained a fractured skull when the runabout in which she and her husband were driving was struck by a street car. Mr. Sandhoss was not seriously hurt.

The second accident, which may result fatally and which is attributed to the aged victim's deafness, occurred when G. S. Kelly, sixty-two years old, was struck by a machine driven by Allan McDonald.

The third collision, which did not prove serious, happened when W. J. Read attempted to cross Washington avenue at Nicollet. An automobile, the number of which the police failed to get, hit him and bore him to the pavement. Read had one ear torn off and sustained painful bruises.

LINE TO DULUTH IS PUSHED

Canadian Northern Now Ready to Do Ballasting.

The work of construction of the extension of the Canadian Northern road from Virginia, this state, to Duluth, a distance of about seventy-five miles, is now in full swing, and more than 2,000 men are employed. The road is graded and ready for ballasting between Virginia and the St. Louis river. Work across the muskeag sections of the right of way has been unusually easy because of the fact that it has been a dry season. Definite plans for the yards, which are to occupy the space west of the Duluth Belt Line road in West Duluth and the park, have not yet been received.

FIREBUGS IN TIMBER TRACT

Lumber Interests Raising Fund for Private Detective Work.

The belief prevails among lumbermen of Duluth that many of the disastrous forest fires which are happening in Northern and Northeastern Minnesota are of incendiary origin and there is a quiet movement on foot to apprehend and make an example of some of the guilty persons. Fires are originating in sections far removed from railroads and in virgin wildernesses and parties who start them are considered guilty of incendiarism or criminal carelessness. Lumbermen and timber owners are planning a private fund and the employment of private detectives to run the guilty parties down.

ADMITS KILLING COMPANION

Minnesota Man Confesses to Slaying Joseph Keski.

The body of Joseph Keski was found in the St. Louis river in the vicinity of Cloquet and it was supposed he was accidentally drowned while fishing. A bruise on the head of Keski aroused suspicion, and Napoleon Caza, his companion, was arrested. Caza made a written confession that he struck Keski with an oar and then threw him into the river. Caza claims Keski drew a knife on him during a quarrel. The case will come before the grand jury next month.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The flour milling industry of the Northwest, including Minneapolis and Duluth, has had a prosperous year for the fiscal period that ended Sept. 1, according to the Northwestern Miller, in the current issue of which appears a summing up of conditions during the time. The switchmen's strike of last winter had a bad effect, also a car shortage that came in February and March.

Secretary of State Julius Schmahl will recommend to the legislature at its session next winter the passage of a law creating what will be known as an automobile court, the object of which will be to revoke the licenses of automobilists who figure in accidents in which carelessness plays a part, or which, for other reasons, should have their licenses revoked.

Whether the killing, skinning and dressing of a steer in a scientific, highly skilled and expeditious manner is a brutal sport, when made one of the events of a mixed picnic, is a question which Governor Eberhart has answered in the affirmative. He directed Frank Devitt, sheriff of Dakota county, to stop such sport at a picnic held near South St. Paul.

A. D. Goodman of Duluth was elected president of the Minnesota Millers' club at a meeting in Minneapolis, succeeding D. M. Baldwin, Jr., of Minneapolis, who had been president for eleven years. D. A. Tannant, Fergus Falls, was elected vice president; W. J. Ashley and L. H. Pinney, Minneapolis, treasurer and secretary respectively.

The five saw mills at Cloquet are shut down for the second time this season on account of the low stage of water in the St. Louis river and 1,000 men are temporarily idle. The mills will resume operations again as soon as rains improve the conditions for driving logs. Millions of feet of logs are high and dry on the banks of the river.

Robert C. Gould, who is to manage the Winona plant of the Oxford Linen Mattress company, a branch of the Oxford Linen Mills company at North Brookfield, Mass., has arrived in Winona to remain permanently. He is conferring with contractors concerning the letting of contracts for the company's buildings.

While clearing land on his homestead near Little Fork Ed Miskella unearthed an old flint gun which gives evidence of being more than 100 years old. Miskella was cutting down a tree when he unearthed the weapon.

More than 200 men now are employed on the Canadian Northern extension from Virginia to Duluth and work is being rushed with the evident intention of completing the heavy grading before winter.

William O'Neil, superintendent of logging, announces that purchasers at the sale of ceded Indian timber at Cass Lake on Sept. 15 will be granted the option of not logging the first year after purchase.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Special Officer N. A. Way of the United States Indian service secured the conviction of Annie Anderson of Callaway for selling liquor to Indians. She was fined $75. In searching the house the special agent found liquor hidden in the top of the sofa and in various articles of clothing.

High winds, pronounced by some a tornado, destroyed the Ruscoe schoolhouse, seven miles north of Pine River, strewing pieces of the building from its site to Lake Hattie, sixty rods away. Farmers' fences were strewn about promiscuously.

During a drunken quarrel at St. Paul Joseph Gaectroni was shot through the right arm and abdomen by Joseph Defabia, who is held on the charge of attempted murder.

William F. Snow, a patent attorney of Minneapolis, while hunting near Savage accidentally shot himself in the left cheek, causing loss of an eye.

VOL. XXVII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1910 NUMBER 39

OPEN BIDS FOR TIMBER

Thief River Falls Lumber Company Secures About 80,000,000 Feet.

Logs Will Be Brought to Thief River Falls and Sawed Into Lumber.

Last Thursday bids for the sale of a large amount of government pine were opened at Cass Lake. Practically all of the timber tributary to the Red Lake and which can be manufactured into lumber at Thief River Falls was secured by the Thief River Falls Lumber company. In all nearly 377,000,000 feet were sold and when the bids were opened it took a large force in the Cass Lake land office to determine the result. The J. Neils Lumber Company of Cass Lake succeeded in presenting the highest bid on about 90,000,000 feet, mostly within the Minnesota national forest adjacent to Cass Lake. The Thief River Falls Lumber company bid highest on about 80,000,000 feet on the Winnibigoshish reservation, usually known as Cut Foot Sioux. Shevlin-Mathieu bid on 50,000,000, while the Mullery McDonald company of Duluth bid on 6,000,000 on the Fond du Lac reservation.

The highest bid put in was by the Leech Lake Lumber company of Walker, which concern bid $14 per 1,000 for white pine and $12 for Norway, their bid being on 30,000,000 feet. E. A. Engler of Beaudette bid highest on about 20,000,000 feet adjacent to Spooner and Baudette, on the Red Lake reservation. The Welsh timber company of Bemidji was also a successful bidder.

The Northland Pine company of Minneapolis put in a blanket bid on everything to be sold in the national forest, averaging about $8.03 per 1,000, but was beaten out by other bidders. The Bemidji Lumber company pressed the J. Neils Lumber company closely on 70,000,000 feet on the national forest. The bid of the Cass Lake concern is better, however, by about 50 cents per 1,000.

C. A. Barton of the Northland Pine company, whose blanket bid was unsuccessful, was nevertheless close up to the highest, and will come very near securing everything on the national forest, and doubtless the understanding that he was to be a bidder resulted in much higher prices than would have been secured if he had not appeared among the bidders.

Among the smaller bidders were: The Burlington Lumber company; W. O. Gilbert, Grand Rapids; S. D. Scavey, Deer River; George T. Tallackson, Grafton, N. D.; W. B. Flindert, Spooner, Minn.; Webster-Whipple company, Minneapolis; John C. Dewitt, Chicago; E. K. Hoganson, Grafton, N. D.; Frederick M. Loveless, Mallard, Minn.; C. M. Johnson and Robert Jarvis of Cass Lake.

Picnic of Farmers.

The Farmers Clubs of the town of Highlanding and Kratka held a meeting Sunday at the Sam McMahon place in the town of Kratka. There were considerable over one hundred present and all had a most enjoyable time.

Quite a number of Thief River Falls drove out to enjoy the picnic and listen to the remarks of the speakers.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson, who was present, gave a short talk which was well received and he was followed by Supt. J. H. Hay who made some remarks upon county division. It was the opinion of the farmers that Mr. Hay made the best speech, but this may be due to the fact that they are more interested in county division than in the affairs at Washington. Anyhow we are willing to agree with the farmers, for Mr. Hay certainly did make a telling speech.

"A Prince of Sweden."

The management of the Auditorium take pride in announcing the appearance of "A Prince of Sweden" which will be in our city on Saturday evening Sept. 24.

This is one of the best Scandinavian Dialect Comedies on the road and the success of this attraction is attributed to the fact, that the management believes in honest methods. They believe in giving the patrons their moneys worth and therefore are always sure of a full house wherever billed to appear. This season the management spared no time or expense in surpassing all previous attempts and according to the press comments have succeeded. The specialties are all A No. 1 and a packed house is anticipated. Advance sale opens at J. A. Sworee on Sept. 22nd 1910.

Nearly a Bad Accident.

Dr. Penney, F. J. Stebbins and Oscar Sponheim had an experience last Wednesday evening which they do not care to have repeated. While returning from a hunt east of town about nine o'clock in the evening and crossing the Soo tracks just north of the depot, Dr. Penney's automobile, in which the party rode, collided with a moving freight train. The automobile was partly turned over, but the only damage to the machine was the demolishing of one of the lamps. Had the automobile been a second faster, or the freight train a second slower, the result would have been different.

Presents City With a Pen.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson addressed the voters of Thief River Falls last Saturday evening, and gave an exhaustive talk upon the opening of the eleven towns and also other matters of interest.

At the conclusion of his speech he presented to Mayor Hamre for the city of Thief River Falls, the pen with which President Roosevelt had signed the bill opening the eleven towns. Mr. Steenerson said that this was the first bill he had secured the passage of in congress and he had intended to leave it to his son as an heirloom, but circumstances [Mr. Steenerson's son was drowned a few years ago] had prevented this and he thought it proper that it be placed in the mayor's office of Thief River Falls.

Has Faith in the Indians.

I. L. Erickson, of the E. and E. Clothing Store, has faith in the coming generation of Indians. About three years ago a young Indian, whose parents reside at the Red Lake, was in the city enroute to Oklahoma to attend an Indian school. He asked Mr. Erickson to give him credit to the amount of 25 cents on a purchase and was accommodated. Mr. Erickson had nearly forgotten about the matter when last Friday the boy walked into the store and paid him the quarter. He explained that the reason he had not paid before was because he had been in Oklahoma, but said he had not forgotten the debt.

Shipping Lots of Stock.

Twelve car loads of cattle and sheep were shipped from Thief River Falls last Saturday to the stock yards of South St. Paul. It seems to the News that the farmers are making a great mistake in selling their stock now, when the prices are so low, and are sure to be very high next spring and summer. There is plenty of hay in this country to winter all of the stock of this section.

Those who shipped the stock were Kris Larson, Tolef Tunheim, Gilbert Sandum, Halvorson Bros. and McGinty Bros.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT

William Smith Instantly Killed at Hanson & Barzen Mill on Saturday.

Clothing on Arm Caught on Shaft and Body Revolved at Terrific Speed.

A horrible accident happened at the Hanson & Barzen Milling company's flour mill in this city Saturday morning which cost William Smith, the eighteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Smith his life.

The young man, who was employed as oiler at the mill, was in the basement, when his arm or clothing in someway become caught on a shafting that runs about four feet above the floor. His body was revolved around the shafting and death was almost instantaneous. Just how the accident happened will never be known. The boy was alone at the time and there was no defect in the shafting, and apparently nothing to catch his clothes.

The funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the Presbyterian church and the body buried in Greenwood cemetery. The family of the deceased have the sympathy of the entire community.

"A Prince of Sweden."

"A Prince of Sweden," a sparkling comedy will be at the Auditorium on Saturday evening, September 24th.

The comedy is in four acts, music and amuseing entertainment furnished by clever comedians and pretty girls, who are alloted many catchy songs and dancing numbers that are sure encore bringers. "A Prince of Sweden" is a play that is clean, wholesome and devoid of all horse play and suggestiveness too often found in the lighter forms of entertainment offered to the theatre going public. The cast employed in this merry comedy was selected with careful attention as to their fitness for characters assumed with the natural result of an evenly balanced company.

The stage scenic as well as the mechanical effects are appropriate in every detail. A number of interesting and novel vaudeville specialties are introduced during the action of the play by various members of the company.

Mr. Primrose has every reason to be proud of the enthusiastic reception his play receives every place, as the press and public endorse this play as the best Swedish Dialect Comedy now touring this territory.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

George W. Fitzgerald, a former assorting teller in the Chicago subtreasury, was arrested by Deputy United States marshals charged with the mysterious theft of $173,000 from the subtreasury on Feb. 19, 1907. Fitzgerald was arrested on a bench warrant based on an indictment returned secretly by a federal grand jury Feb. 17, 1910, and the existence of which was suppressed by the federal authorities.

Ernest W. Gerbracht, former superintendent of the Williamsburg refinery of the American Sugar Refining company, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the government by the underweighing of sugar, was sentenced to two years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta and fined $5,000.

The federal grand jury which has been investigating Chicago packers returned indictments against ten high officials of the Swift, Armour and Morris concerns. There are three indictments against each, charging combination, conspiracy and illegal monopoly.

The New York financial district and the district attorney's office are much stirred up by reports that a downtown national bank has been mulcted of between $125,000 and $150,000. The man accused of the alleged larceny is known and is under surveillance.

A dynamite explosion wrecked the main entrance and blew out every pane of glass in the general office building of the Wenslaw Bros.' company, iron manufacturers, at Chicago. Nobody was injured. The firm employed a nonunion force.

Motion for an arrest of judgment in the case of Dr. Haldane Cleminson of Chicago, found guilty of murdering his wife a year ago, was denied by Judge McSurely and the prisoner was formally sentenced to imprisonment for life.

The Blind Man's Lantern.

A blind man in Khoota (a Caucasian village) came back from the river one night bringing a pitcher of water and carrying in his hand a lighted lantern. Some one meeting him said: "You're blind. It's all the same to you whether it's day or night. Of what use to you is a lantern?" "I don't carry the lantern in order to see the road," replied the blind man, "but to keep some fool like you from running against me and breaking my pitcher."

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

More than $2,000,000 has been added to the resources of Minnesota state banks since June 30, 1910, according to the statement compiled in the office of J. B. Galarneault, superintendent of banks. The call for reports on condition at the close of business Sept. 1 discloses $121,587,151.30 total resources, as compared with $119,472,553.58 on June 30.

Contrary to expectations the Cuyuna iron range will not be represented in the shipping list of mining districts in Minnesota this year. It had been officially announced that the Kennedy mine would forward 50,000 tons this fall, which would be the initial commercial ore shipments from the new range, but plans have been changed.

Only a small quantity of state timber will be sold this year. The state timber board at its last meeting heard the reports of Cruisers Oliver Keay and Thomas Elliott, who recommended that a few tracts where the timber has been partly burned this summer be sold and cut and this will be done.

Farm lands in Minnesota are selling at a considerably higher average than they were two or three years ago, according to George Welsh, state immigration commissioner. The crop scare during the early spring has had no effect on the real estate movement in Minnesota, he says.

In the opinion of the school directors it will require $1,773,900 to maintain the public schools of Minneapolis during the school year 1910-11. This will include an estimate of $30,000 for the maintenance of ungraded schools for backward children and $100,000 for the building fund.

New towns along the new Soo line from Moose Jaw to Plumley are springing up. The latest is Clearwater, eighteen miles west of Bemidji. Where two months ago there was nothing but pine trees there is now a town of not less than 200 inhabitants.

The official report on the paid admissions to the state fair was 318,264, surpassing the record of 1909 by 45,416. The grandstand receipts for the week reached $58,547.50, an increase of more than $2,000 over the total for last year.

The forty-five public schools of St. Paul opened this year with an attendance of 22,671. This is an increase for the initial day of 2,110 more than the corresponding day of last year, when the total enrollment was 20,561.

For giving two-fifths of her blood in an effort to save the life of Mattie Mulligan, Florence Whitley was awarded $1,500 by Judge of Probate George R. Smith of Minneapolis as a claim against the estate.

James J. Hill has offered $50,000 to St. Olaf's college at Northfield. The condition Mr. Hill exacts is that the institution raises $200,000 of endowment funds from other sources.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Dollie Tope, aged twenty-two years, a governess, committed suicide at Akeley by drinking two ounces of carbolic acid. She left a letter for her employer, whose wife had been dead only three months, stating that she was madly in love with him in spite of herself and, knowing that he did not care for her, determined to end her life.

Five violators of the game laws paid the largest aggregate fines in the history of the state game and fish commission when they put $429.80 into the treasury of Beltrami county. The men live in the most northerly part of Beltrami county on the shore of the Lake of the Woods and were convicted of selling moose meat.

Too frightened to be of any assistance a little five-year-old boy stood by and watched his playmate, Bernard Kenneth Holen, three years old, son of Kent Holen, former city editor of the Minneapolis Daily News, drown in Lake Minnetonka at Minnetonka Beach.

A workman named G. Neaupt, in the employ of the Duluth Street Railway company, was killed by a trolley car. He stepped off one track to avoid a car and was struck by another going in the opposite direction.

A Northern Pacific brakeman named E. D. Gray of Duluth fell between the cars of a freight train while it was in motion a short distance east of Deerwood and was killed. He was thirty-five years old.

Olaf Larson, who has worked as a farmhand in Goodhue county for many years, is in the county jail at Red Wing charged with robbing the home of James Farrell of Belle Creek and stealing $450.

John R. Palon's livery and sales barn at Mankato was destroyed by fire of unknown origin, and sixteen horses were incinerated.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Katheryn Beaumont, aged nineteen years, wife of Albert Beaumont, was found dead at her home in Duluth. She had not complained of being ill and a postmortem examination has failed to reveal any condition which might have caused her to die suddenly.

John Jackson, aged sixty-five, for many years chief of the St. Paul fire department, is dead in that city following a short illness.

Mrs. Diana Weeks, a resident of Minneapolis since 1853, is dead, aged eighty-two.

Returns of the Primary Election

Election Results In Red Lake County and Elsewhere.

Lindquist Defeated.

Charles A. Lindquist, who has represented (or rather misrepresented) the Firs commissioner district for the past four years, was defeated at primaries for renomination by a decisive vote. Mr Lindquist's neighbors in Polk Centre and Bray were almost unanimous against his return. He will never again hold public office.

Hanson Defeats Berg.

Senator A. L. Hanson defeats Albert Berg by a good sized majority. Hanson carries Red Lake, Clearwater, Mahnomen and Norman counties, and Berg carries Beltrami county.

Congressman Tawney Defeated.

Congressman Tawney was defeated in the First district of this state by a majority of 2,000. All of the other old congressmen in the state are renominated with the possible exception of Miller for the Duluth district.

Steenerson a Winner.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson wins out over Henry O. Bjorge for congressman in the Ninth district by a majority of over 3,000. Last evening the total vote in the district stood: Steenerson, 8,456 to 5,238 for Bjorke. Most of the returns were in except from Beltrami, Marshall and Clearwater counties and these it is claimed will increase Steenerson's majority.

Winners in the County.

A telephone message received from the county auditor's office last evening stated that returns had been received from all but eight of the precincts of the county. This gave Latendresse a lead of 155 votes over Nels K. Nelson for auditor and Kindseth a lead of 78 over Ives. The remaining precincts are expected to increase Latendresse' and Kindseth's majority. Fellman has defeated Nelson for sheriff by a substantial majority, and Richardson has won out for judge of probate. O'Neill will have about 700 votes to the good in Red Lake county and Hanson about 200. Steenerson carries the county by a large majority.

Stephens Wins out in Polk.

Senator A. D. Stephens was again nominated for state senator in Polk county after one of the bitterest fight in this section of the state. With only three small precincts to hear from, Stephens had a majority of 131 over Saugstad. While these three precincts are not expected to cast over 100 votes, they will not be for Stephens. It is therefore sure that Stephens will have a small majority.

In the City.

The primary election in the city passed off very quietly. The interest centered upon the congressional and legislative tickets and no great effort was made to get out the votes. A total of 680 votes were cast, however, and practically all voted the Republican ticket. Only two Democratic ballots were cast in the city and three were in the first precinct of the First ward, one Prohibition ballot was voted and this was the only one in the city. Between thirty and forty Public Ownership ballots were voted, some being cast in all of the four voting precincts in the city. The only candidate for whom an organized effort was made was for D. P. O'Neill, and it was successful to a large degree, Mr. O'Neill securing a handsome home indorsement.

School Notes.

The enrollment in the seventh and eight grades is 138 to date. This makes the large average of 46 for each of the three teachers in the grammar department, and several students have not yet enrolled. In former years, a heavy falling off in attendance has occured at the end of the sixth and seventh years, but for some reason or other, this had not happened this fall. It is probable that the introduction of the industrial work in the grammar grades holds the pupils in school.

The new heating plant has been connected with the old high school building, so the students need not fear a repetition of the chilling experiences of last week.

The high school day is divided into seven periods of forty minutes each, four in the forenoon and three in the afternoon. Each teacher is assigned six full periods of recitations, though some have all filled and most of them have extra duty even after dismissal.

The seventh and eight grades boys and girls have two industrial periods per week under the high school special instructors. This is twice the ordinary assignment for grade pupils, but it is so planned in order to meet the widespread criticism that the schools everywhere are organized for the benefit of the high school students and at the expense of the grade pupils. This new arrangement is already producing excellent results in the attendance.

Parents are requested to supply pupils promptly with written excuses when they detain them at home. The teachers do not wish to know the reason for the child's absence, but merely desire to be assured that the absence is occasioned by the authority of the parent.

The introduction of the new departments of agriculture and manual training does not mean that some of the ordinary high school subjects or the necessary studies are being neglected. The contrary is the case, as the greater choice of electives granted the student under the present arrangement permits of more attention to the usual high school work.

The high school classes perfected new organizations this week and chose some members of the faculty as class advisers. These advisers attend all class meetings and have general supervision of the special work in high and of any social event in which the class may be required to participate.

With the short crop of hay which was raised in so many sections this year there ought to be a demand at good prices for all the surplus bright, well cured corn fodder which the forehanded man will secure.

Dwellers along country roads will certainly appreciate the power of observation of the writer who in distinguishing between the "quick" and the "dead," defined the former as comprising those who were able to get out of the way of scorching automobilists and the latter those who were not.

It is now quite generally conceded that when a cow holds up her milk it is invariably due to some nervous condition, the result of taking her calf from her, disturbances, mistreatment or strange conditions. Often kindness will overcome the tendency, and if this does not suffice the feeding of a little grain at milking time will take up her mind and cause her to relax to a normal nervous condition.

As showing the progress which has been made in recent years in producing high yielding types of small grain it is interesting to recall the sower of Holy Writ, whose seed which "fell on the good ground yielded some thirty, some sixty and some a hundred fold." Contrasted with this showing may be cited the case of an oat belt farmer who the other day plucked a single stalk of this cereal which bore 214 double grains, or a total of 428. The seed head, which was borne on a very sturdy straw, was fifteen inches long.

The fastest mile ever made by a trotting horse was covered the other day in 1:58¾ by Uhlan, a horse belonging to C. G. K. Billings, the well known turfman, and the easy way in which the mile was made led many who witnessed the remarkable performance to believe that the same horse may clip another second or more off this record before the season is over. It has been intensely interesting to note the gradual lowering of the trotting record from the time when the best performance was around 2:59, some ninety years ago, to the present season, when a horse covers a mile track without wind shield at a rate of more than thirty miles an hour. That the record will be still further lowered is not doubted, but it will be by quarters and eighths of seconds only.

A fine white elm shade tree which the writer frequently passes has come to grief owing to the fact that years ago, when the head of the tree was forming, care was not taken to prevent large limbs growing up and out from the same point in the trunk. In the case in question three were allowed to do so. A couple of years ago one of the three large branches was blown from the top in a heavy wind, and a short time since a big split appeared between the two remaining sections of the top. One of these is sure to come down soon, leaving but a skeleton of what gave promise of being a shade tree of remarkable beauty and symmetry. The trouble might have been prevented when the tree was first set by so pruning it as to give a sturdy and well jointed frame. The same principle holds in the case of fruit trees, and poor heads having weak joints should be remedied while the tree is young.

At no time since Pacific coast fruit growers began shipping their produce to eastern markets has the fruit thus shipped been placed upon central and eastern markets in finer shape both as regards appearance and quality than has been the case this present season. Peaches, pears, nectarines and the several large varieties of plums have been displayed in the large and small markets, and the sale has been unusually large. Without question this is in part due to the scarcity of fruit in many of the central states, but the large sale is also due to the fine quality and condition of the western fruit. This in turn is the result of greater care in picking and handling, uniformity in grading and packing and to the better facilities for cooling fruit before it is started on its long journey east. Western fruit growers should make the most of the advantage which has been theirs this year, for there is little question that with care in packing and shipping and the exercise of good judgment in the distribution of shipments the consumption of western fruits may be greatly increased in thousands of towns throughout the middle states. Folks living there have the money, and they are willing to spend it if they can get first class fruits. These markets are worth cultivating.

A poultryman whom we ran across the other day got his hens to change their minds and start laying by substituting a ration of bran for the corn and wheat which he had been feeding and adding a small allowance of tankage. The ration was further supplemented by giving the hens the fresh grass cuttings from the lawn. The hens got busy with their change of food and have been busy since.

It's a pretty stiff proposition trying to do anything for the agricultural standpatter—the well satisfied with the old order chap—who can't be induced by any sort of persuasion to take an up to date agricultural paper, to attend a farmers' institute or dairy meeting and who has not time for balanced rations, milk testers or the many other aids to intelligent farm management. In time this kind will die off and others more alert will take their places.

In the transference of real estate the question frequently arises whether buyer or seller is liable for taxes falling due on or about the time of the transfer. Taxes due and payable prior to time of sale constitute an incumbrance on the property and must be paid before clear title can be given. Taxes collectible after sale must be paid by the purchaser unless there is specific agreement to the contrary, as the land is always liable for the taxes, and the one who holds title is therefore accountable.

In view of the forest fire experiences which the states of Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon have passed through the past two months it is fair to assume that there will hardly be any of the representatives or senators of any of these at Washington who from this on will be found opposing appropriations having in view a more effective organization of the forest service, one of whose chief tasks is a patrolling of the national forests and a prevention of forest fires. The vast financial loss in splendid tracts of timber burned and the destruction of homes and towns, coupled with an appalling loss of life, will combine to drive home a lesson western people and congressmen will not soon forget.

Perhaps the most unique method ever adopted for plowing or stirring the soil has lately been given experimental test in Kansas and by a planter near Spartanburg, S. C. It consisted in drilling rows of holes in the soil three feet apart to the depth of four feet and in these holes placing dynamite cartridges with fuses attached. When all cartridges were set the fuses were ignited by a line of men provided with redhot irons. They passed rapidly down the field, the explosion occurring in a steady roar that was deafening and throwing clouds of soil and earth into the air to the height of thirty feet, the men being showered with it as it settled. This method of plowing was employed to break up a hard and resistant subsoil and did the job in fine shape.

That the rank and file of farmers merely play horse at the hen business is indicated in the reports of census enumerators showing the average number of eggs produced yearly by the farm hen to be approximately five dozen—sixty eggs—while selected pens of laying breeds under intelligent care have records which nearly quadruple the above average. The hen that produces but five dozen eggs per year barely pays her board bill, and this assuming that her fare from May 1 to Oct. 1 costs nothing, which is far from the fact. Shinning along with this kind of a showing, she belongs in the same company as the cow whose feed costs $35 per year and whose products are worth from $30 to $32. The cure lies in more careful supervision, including selection of laying breeds, elimination of the loafers, more attention to egg producing rations, the providing of better nesting places and at all seasons of the year making the hens scratch and work for the food that is given them.

The splendid service which the United States department of agriculture is doing for the farmers of the country might be considerably widened and increased if more of the latter would take advantage of the publications which are issued by the department and furnished to applicants for little or nothing. The first publication which the farmer should have in his hand is entitled "Farmers' Bulletin Subject Index," which contains a list of all bulletins published and is revised and brought down to date once or twice each year. These publications cover a great variety of subjects and are all given titles and numbers so that they can be easily referred to. The most valuable single publication of the department is the year book of agriculture, which, in addition to giving a concise review of the progress made along the great variety of lines in which the department is interested, contains a score or more valuable articles on selected subjects written by competent and practical men. Besides the publications above mentioned, there is the monthly list of publications, which will be mailed free to all persons who apply. The farmers' bulletins and year book may be had for a nominal price by making application to the department of agriculture and may be had free in most instances by applying to one's senator or representative at Washington. Uncle Sam would like to have his agriculturist department of the greatest possible use to his big family, and this will come about only through requests from them for the literature which he has been to heavy expense to prepare.

HOW MUCH MAY HE GO IN DEBT?

The question is often raised by the young fellow who has in view starting out on his own hook in farming, "How much am I justified in going into debt?" The answer to the query is not a simple one, as a whole lot depends on the land he proposes to buy, what his previous experience with farm work has been, but more than all else upon the kind of fellow this young man is and the stuff he's made of. If he has the right qualities—including industry, thrift, perseverance and good health—and has a strong and sensible wife, who is willing to share with him the hard work and economies incident to carving out a farm home, it would seem not beyond reason for him to assume an indebtedness of from $6,000 to $10,000. In one case which came under our notice not long since an indebtedness of $15,000 was assumed a dozen years ago by one of these fellows possessing the right stuff, and today he owns a fine 200 acre farm free from incumbrance. This success did not come by chance. It was the result of hard work, an exercise of thrift and brains, and it goes without saying that during haying and harvest he didn't spend his time loafing around pool rooms and saloons. Another instance of which we read the other day was of a young fellow who went into debt $8,000 on the purchase of 120 acres. He is following the safest possible course to pay for his farm by going into the dairy business, a specialty being made of a milk route. This man is a German by birth, a hard worker, pleasant and agreeable in manner and calculates that he will have his farm paid for in about ten years, provided no unforeseen trouble overtakes him. Many a young man would not be justified in assuming as large an indebtedness as this, but he could tackle a smaller proposition, give it intensive cultivation and secure almost as large returns. Land cannot be bought so cheaply today as twenty or ten years ago, but this is far from saying that there are not lots of fine chances along the line of securing a farm of one's own for the man who has perseverance and will to succeed.

MORE FOREST GUARDS NEEDED.

At the close of a summer season in which there has been the heaviest timber loss on record as a result of forest fires interest will naturally attach to a bulletin recently put out by the forest service on this subject. In it is recited the fact that as a result of the rapidly increasing value of lumber and forests private owners, lumber companies and state and federal forest experts are co-operating for a more effective protection of the forest wealth of the country. The fire fighting campaign includes a thorough patrol system, organized fire fighting squads, together with tools and equipment at accessible points, by constantly warning the public against the careless use of fire and other means which are practicable. The pamphlet points out that one of the chief sources of weakness in the present system lies in the pitifully inadequate number of forest guards, shown in the statement that in the United States a single patrolman often has the responsibility of guarding 100,000 acres where he should not have more than 10,000. In this connection it is pointed out that in Prussian forest reserves there is a guard for every 1,700 acres.

THE NEED OF HUMUS.

It is almost characteristic of many sections on the Pacific slope long cropped to small grains that the soils are cold and stiff and resistant and greatly in need of a restoration of the supply of humus which the soil originally possessed. This lack of humus lessens the capacity of the soil to retain moisture, reduces its supply of plant food, in the case of heavy soil increases its tendency to cement or run together and in the case of light soil its tendency to drift. Its presence in the soil means warmth, lightness and friability, an increase of the supply of nitrogen and an increased capacity for the retention of moisture. The supply of humus may be restored to soil by crop rotation, by the plowing under of green cover crops and by a liberal spreading of barnyard manures. If no manure can be had the evidence is pretty strong that a type of farming should be adopted which will produce some. If this is entirely out of the question green manuring and rotation are the other ways out.

A HIGH PRICED CIGARETTE.

Probably the most expensive cigarette ever smoked was the one lit by a member of one of Uncle Sam's forest surveying parties in a heavily timbered western state and carelessly thrown into a bank of dry ferns. It is estimated that $2,000,000 worth of government and private timber was destroyed and several lives lost before this particular "smoke" was concluded. It is easy to suggest how the milk might have been kept from spilling, but the good horse sense of the superintendents of such surveying parties ought to suggest the same precaution with reference to the use of cigarettes in timber-dry forests as would be exercised by those employed in and about gunpowder factories and magazines.

THE SCOLD'S BRIDLE.

Brutal Punishment to Which Women Were Once Subjected.

The brank, or scold's bridle, or gossip's bridle, was neither more nor less than a muzzle. It was in general use in Great Britain from the sixteenth to the eighteenth century, and in Scotland as well women were muzzled for certain offenses, some at least of them more imaginary than real. The instrument of torture, even a dog's leather muzzle, is uncomfortable. How much more the scold's muzzle! It consisted, according to a high authority, Mr. W. Jewitt, of a kind of crown or framework of iron, which was locked upon the head, and it was armed in front with a gag, a plate or a sharp cutting knife or point, which was placed in the poor woman's mouth so as to prevent her moving her tongue, or it was so placed that if she did move it or attempt to speak it was cut in a most frightful manner. With this cage upon her head and with the gag firmly pressed and locked against her tongue the miserable creature, whose sole offending perhaps was that she raised her voice in defense of her social rights against a brutal and besotted husband or had spoken honest truth of some one high in office in her town, was paraded through the streets, led by a chain by the hand of a bellman, the beadle or the constable or chained to the pillory, the whipping post or market cross, to be subjected to every conceivable insult and degradation, without even the power left her of asking for mercy or of promising amendment for the future, and when the punishment was over she was turned out from the town hall or the place where the brutal punishment had been inflicted, maimed, disfigured, bleeding, faint and degraded, to be the subject of comment and jeering among her neighbors.—London Family Herald.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

Published Every Thursday.

FOREIGN RATES:
Including the Dominion of Canada and Mexico ....$1.50 Per Year.

And G. L. Hanson also ran.

When John Lind says "no" he means it.

For some reason Mr. Lindquist did not get enough votes.

It is quite evident that there never was any chance of securing John Lind to accept the Democratic nomination for governor, and the only reason that he was nominated was to give the kitchen cabinet a chance to name the nominee. They did not dare to trust the delegates to the Democratic state convention with this important function.

James Gray, of Minneapolis, has been selected by Frank Day and other members of the kitchen cabinet as the Democratic candidate for governor to fill the vacancy caused by the refusal of John Lind to make the run. "Jim" is a good fellow, but the people are getting about as tired of the kitchen cabinet business as Frank Day is of the "Scandinavian business."

I realize that Editor Eastman can tell lies on paper faster than I can tell the truth by tongue, but I am sure that you, friends and neighbors, who have known me for years, can distinguish the real from the unreal.

The above is taken from a personal appeal made to the voters by County Commissioner Lindquist. Mr. Lindquist resides in the town of Bray. At the primary election there were thirty one Republican votes cast, four of which were for Lindquist and twenty-seven for Gust Naplin, Mr. Lindquist opponent. Nufsaid.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Congressman Edwin Denby of Michigan, a member of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, expressed the conviction in an interview at Detroit, that Secretary Ballinger had not been guilty of corruption or breach of trust. He defined "insurgency" as the expression of Republican principles in such a form as to appeal to the prejudices of the people.

At Indianapolis Minor Heir beat Lady Maud C., George Gano and Hedgewood Boy, all of the Savage stables, in the fastest mile race ever paced. The son of Heir covered the mile in 1:59, lowering his own and the world's pacer record in a race, also held by him, a full second.

Counsel at New York for Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the singer, said that his client proposed to fight for her rights and was coming to this country to see that the prenuptial agreement, whereby Robert Winthrop Chanler turned over to the diva what is said to be his entire fortune, was carried out.

After a session lasting more than five hours the representatives of the "majority" on the Ballinger-Pinchot committee made public a statement in which the announcement was made, in effect, that the verdict will not be made public until after the November elections.

A call for the first meeting in two months of President Taft's cabinet has been sent out and the members will report to Washington Sept. 24

NEWS OF NOTED PERSONS

The trip to Panama which President Taft had planned to take in November may be given up. It is understood that several of the Republican leaders have tried to convince the president that the political situation at home will require his presence in this country.

ROAD IS REPORTED SOLD

Said Grand Trunk Pacific Has Secured Great Western.

A report that the Chicago Great Western railroad has been sold to the Grand Trunk Pacific, emanating from the offices of the Thompson-Towle financial agency in New York, has reached the Twin Cities. The report says that S. M. Felton, president of the Great Western, and C. M. Hays of Montreal, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific, have been in conference in New York in regard to the sale. The J. P. Morgan offices in New York deny the report of the sale. Morgan agents said that the conference between the two presidents was on another matter.

It is believed in Twin City railroad circles that there is a deal on for the sale or lease of the Great Western, but to whom is not known.

SMITH LOSES MUCH LAND

Oregon Court Decides Against Minneapolis Lumberman.

United States Circuit Judge R. S. Bean's decision at Portland, Ore., by which C. A. Smith of Minneapolis and his assistants lost title to thirty-seven timber claims in Linn and Lane counties, valued approximately at from $500,000 to $600,000, disposed of a case which had been pending two years.

Eight other claims owned by Smith are held to be protected by the statute of limitations.

The court ruled against the effort of the district attorney to establish the right to sue for the value of land obtained fraudulently where the statute of limitations had run against the cancellation of the patent.

MILLIONS IN CHIPPEWA SALE

Timber Bidders at Cass Lake Furnish Strong Competition.

Chippewa Indians of Minnesota will be enriched by $2,800,000 if the offers of the twenty-three bidders for the timber on the Chippewa lands in Minnesota are accepted by the government. The sale took place at Cass Lake, this state, and the competition among the bidders was strong. The average price per thousand feet offered for the timber was $8.40, the highest price being $14. The average this year is over that at the last sale in 1907.

Seriously Wounds Bartender.

After several persons had attempted to rob him in a saloon at Minneapolis Thomas Wilson, a structural iron worker of Marion, N. D., purchased a gun in a nearby hardware store and went in search of the robbers. He entered the wrong saloon and when Frank T. Nelson, the bartender, endeavored to oust him he shot him in the chest. The bullet struck close to Nelson's heart and he is in a critical condition.

Bolt Kills Farmer Boy.

Frank A. Willems, son of Henry Willems, a farmer who resides near Sherman, in Pipestone county, was killed by lightning. The bolt struck a tree and glanced, striking young Willems on the head, killing him instantly. A brother of the dead boy had to drive several miles in the rain for assistance, and as a result he is lying at the point of death, suffering with pneumonia.

Negro Stabbed to Death.

A remark which Roy Jeffries, a colored resident of St. Paul, made to a mulatto girl in a Minneapolis pool room cost him his life. His words were overheard by John Jones, another negro, who first demanded an apology, and a few minutes later, behind a pool table, stabbed him in the groin with a dirk. Jeffries bled to death before aid reached him. Jones escaped.

Woman Killed in Auto Accident.

Mrs. Trulea Madsen, aged sixty-one, was instantly killed and five companions were injured in an automobile collision with a street car at Minneapolis. The party was hurled to the street by the impact, Mrs. Madsen sitting on her head. The injured were cared for in a drug store and later removed to their homes.

Tennyson's Tactlessness.

Several stories are told of Tennyson's thoughtless speeches. "What fish is this?" he once asked his hostess where he was dining. "Whiting," she replied. "The meanest fish there is," he remarked, quite unconscious that he could have wounded any one's feelings.

Yet his kindness of heart was such that when his partridge was afterward given him almost raw he ate steadily through it for fear his hostess might be vexed.

On one occasion Tennyson was very rude to Mrs. Brotherton, a neighbor at Freshwater. The next day he came to her house with a great cabbage under each arm.

"I heard you like these, so I brought them," he said genially. It was his kind of a peace offering.

You often hear it said of a smart appearing fellow:—"What a splendid personality."

If you've ever stopped to observe, you know that such a man is always well dressed. This fact contributes largely to his personality. The clothes go farthest to make his presence felt. Confidence, poise, grace are inspired by distinctive, individual style in dress.

These Ederheimer-Stein clothes are of that kind. More style because made for those who want it. You can't look as well, won't make the same impression in others.

The requirements of you Young Men in the way of clothes are different than the needs of your fathers. This fact is the basis of the designing and making of Ederheimer-Stein clothes. Few makes have the Young Man's spirit and life incorporated into them. But clothes are not your kind unless they have.

Let us show you the new browns, plaids and stripes. In two or three button coats with medium or long roll lapels.
